CLAPP SAYS SO

Red Lake Bill Sure to Pass This Winter.

Senator Clapp arrived in St Paul last week from Washington to spend the holidays with his family. He was interviewed by the St. Paul Globe and among other things said he was firmly of the opinion that the Red Lake bill would surely be passed at this session and that the lands would be opened up for settlement in the summer of 1903. The provisions of the new bill were published in the News last week. It also provides that $20,000 be paid the Indians for improvements they have made upon this land instead of the sum of $5,000 which was in the last bill.

Advancing Rapidly.

A correspondent of the Warren Sheaf has the following to say regarding the progress being made in the Thief Lake Country."

Talking about progressive countries, certainly no country could be more progressive than the beautiful valley of Thief Lake has been during the last four years. Settlers have moved in from all parts of the United and have cultivated the land and raised big crops in fact more bushels have been produced to the acreage than western Marshall county. Thirteen years ago when people first navigated into this country everything looked and appeared like a wilderness and moose and other wild animals were the occupants then and nobody ever dreamt that this section would advance so rapidly as it has. But things have changed and this country will soon be the gardenspot of Minnesota. Nineteen ditches have been completed along the north side of the lake, all headed towards the lake, and all farmers in that section are prepared to make a big seeding next spring. The south side of the lake is more of a high country which makes it more suitable for farming. Some business men from other points are here viewing the country, and one J. Sjoberg, has already established a big store near the lake the largest and handsomest building in the community. This country can also boast of having four post offices and four stores. J. Josephson, the well known merchant who went out of business last summer is here at present inspecting the surroundings along the shore and we are informed that he has concluded to erect a first class tannery at that point. The townsite will be the appointed place according to all reports.

HE GOES TODAY

Mayor Leaves This City for Washington.

Mayor Frank H. Kratka leaves this city today for St. Paul where he will consult with Senator Clapp for a day or two and then accompany that gentleman to Washington.

Mayor Kratka will labor for the passage of the Red Lake Indian bill, and there is every reason to believe that the bill will be passed at this session. All objections have been withdrawn to the new bill, although Mr. Kratka may decide to have it amended in some minor matters.

Only Indians to Log.

The following is a special telegram from Washington published in the Minneapolis Journal of last Saturday:

Inquiry has come to the Indian office whether the government will consider a proposition for the sale of the millions of feet of timber in the Red Lake reservation blown down last summer and which are now threatened with complete destruction because the Indians refused to allow the use of a portion of the stumpage money due them to purchase a logging outfit. It came from the Thief River Lumber company of Thief River Falls No price was offered for the timber.

Commissioner Jones said that the company would be informed that no private concern would be allowed to log on the reservation He also said that the experience Captain Mercer had when the dead and down operations were carried on at Red Lake was a lesson that need not be taught again and for that reason no proposition for the sale of this timber would be considered. The only way it might be gotten out would be by the Indians them-selves, under direction of Major Scott.

Estimators Busy.

Cass Lake, Dec. 29.—Chief Examiner E. L. Warren has returned from Walker and expresses great satisfaction at the manner in which the work of examining the lands of the reservation under the Morris law has begun. Three crews are at work near Walker, in township 143, range 21 west. The headquarters of the chief and assistant chief will be at Cass Lake.

It is expected that at the end of March sufficient land will have been examined to permit the secretary of the interior to act in conjunction with the bureau of forestry and have some land declared agricultural or forest reserved.

Smallpox Increasing.

Smallpox is on the increase in Minnesota and Secretary Bracken of the state board of health is receiving many complaints from the carelessness of local health officers. The disease has appeared in several of the lumber camps.

"Ignorance regarding the the nature of the disease is considered responsible for a part of the laxity," says Dr. Bracken, "but it is also claimed that many people desiring to escape the inconvenience of a quarantine, seek to conceal the presence of smallpox, and go about as usual carrying infection with them, and exposing many people to the disease, rather than suffer the inconvenience of quarantine measures.

Primary Election Law.

The primary election law is certain to be amended, if not repealed. The primary law was made applicable to the entire state by the last legislature and the members of the new one were all nominated under it. There are many who are opposed to the law in the abstract, and there are more who see in it a cumbersome and expensive piece of machinery. Dozens of ways to simplify it will be suggested and pressed before the two houses.

The statute commission has given the matter some thought, and will include a draft of a primary and general election law in its report. The commission is said to be opposed to the seperate ballot system and the requirement that a voter must declare his politics, and will recommend a blanket ballot, with all the names of all the candidates printed thereon. In a man votes for the candidates of more than one party, the ballot will be thrown out.

Ralph Case Jan. 12.

The trial of Geo. A. Ralph on the indictments brought against him has been set for Monday, Jan. 12. The trial will excite general interest and will draw a large number of interested persons from outside.

Make a Change.

The following was taken from the Austin Register:

"In conversation with a gentleman interested in the wheat question, from a buyers standpoint, he said: why do not your newspapermen advise farmers in this part of the state to quit growing wheat? Every bushel they grow costs them a dollar, and they sell it for about sixty cents."

This is no doubt true and the farmers know it as well as anyone. Value of land for a foundation, interest on the investment, the cost of preparing the soil, harvesting twine, threshing and marketing, leaves little for wages for any part of the work, and overproduction is the prime cause of low prices. An average wheat crop is 12 bushels and at 60 cents produces only $7.20 an acre. Barley on the same acre would produce, say 40 bushels at 40 cents would return $16 per acre, or more than twice as much or rye 25 bushels at 50 cents would bring $12.50 an acre, while 50 bushels of corn, a fair crop, at 32 cents would return $16 and cost less than wheat to grow and market. A less acreage of wheat and more of other grains will add to the farmers purse in this county."

The Division of a County.

Gov. Van Sant has appointed a commission consisting of Dr. Wilson, of Red Lake Falls; Mayor Hitchcock, of Crookston, and Senator Grindeland, of Warren, to appraise the value of the county buildings of Beltrami county. Beltrami county is to be divided and the purpose is to deduct the value of the buildings at Bemidji from the present county indebtedness and apportion the remainder between Beltrami and the new county of Clearwater.

During the year ending June 30 1902, there were 14,983 persons appointed to positions in the U. S. Classified Civil Service, which was 4,692 more than were ever before appointed in a single year. If you wish information about positions of this kind you can obtain it free by writing for the Civil Service announcement of the Columbian Correspondence College, Washington, D. C. The Civil Service Commission will hold examinations to secure young men and women for these places during March and April, at Duluth, Mankato and Minneapolis. From 3,046 appointments during the first year of Mr. McKinley's administration, they have increased to nearly five times that number, President Roosevelt is a firm believer in the merit system, and as long as he is president these appointments will continue to increase.

Resume of the News.

Fresh Reliable Brief

From the Capital.

Mr. McCleary has decided not to push his banking bill at this session.

It is rumored that Secretary Shaw will succeed Secretary Root, as the latter will probably resign in the spring to resume his law practice. Gov. Crane of Massachusetts may succeed Secretary Shaw.

Charles Edwards, secretary of the national Democratic legislative committee, will eat a hat as the result of a bet with Senator Elkins that the Republicans would not elect a congressman in West Virginia.

Land Commissioner Hermann has referred the question of the abolition of one of the land offices or rearrangement of districts in Minnesota to the land officials of the state.

The young men who were eating preserved food in Washington, under the direction of Dr. Wiley, had a dinner recently in which was food containing boracic acid and borax. They have experienced no bad effects as yet.

Edward Johnson of Lanesboro, Minn., who for years was a faithful messenger in Senator Nelson's committee room, died last summer. His place has been taken by Thomas Lajord of Minneapolis, for several years a member of the state grain inspection force.

Two hundred and thirty claims were submitted by Americans who suffered loss by the Boxer war, aggregating $4,000,000, but only $1,500,000 of this sum will be available out of the indemnity which China has been called upon to pay for the damage done to foreigners.

The question raised by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow as to the eligibility of ex-Gov. McGill to continue as postmaster at St. Paul while he is a member of the state legislature, will not be raised by Postmaster General Payne.

Indian Commissioner Jones has decided to drop the case against Nat Rodman, Indian farmer on the Lac Court de Oreilles reservation near Hayward, Wis. Rodman was charged with permitting activity in politics, in violation of civil service rules and regulations.

A controversy is going on between Dr. W. W. Keen, the Philadelphia physician, and Senator Gallinger, also a physician, over the merits of vivisection. Senator Gallinger is trying to pass a law prohibiting the practice of vivisection in the District of Columbia. It develops that vivisection is practiced by the government in the big laboratory of animal industry in Washington.

Sin and Sinners.

Daisy Carleton of Bloomington, Ill., was acquitted of the murder of Mrs. Joseph Leslie.

John Doyle, a wealthy mine-owner of San Bernardino, Cal., has been missing for two weeks, and foul play is suspected.

Wesley Watson of Detroit was shot and instantly killed by his brother, Samuel, who mistook him for a burglar, at Middleport, near Brantford, Ont.

J. D. White, editor of the Cordell Beacon, at Cordell, I. T., fatally shot A. J. Johnson, a prominent townsite man. The cause of the tragedy was an old quarrel.

LEAVE IT TO HAGUE COURT

AGREEMENT IS REACHED IN REGARD TO ARBITRATION OF DISPUTE.

PRESIDENT WILL NOT OFFICIATE

POWERS ACCEPT THE ALTERNATIVE AND TROUBLE WILL BLOW OVER.

AMERICAN DIPLOMACY'S VICTORY

DETAILS ARRANGED SO AS NOT TO EMBARRASS THIS GOVERNMENT.

Washington, Dec. 29. — American diplomacy has won another great victory over that of the powers of the Old World.

The Hague court of arbitration will pass upon the Venezuelan question. President Roosevelt did not refuse to act as arbitrator, and has no fear of such arbitration, but in the beginning he requested England and Germany to refer their claims to The Hague court, which had been specially created to decide such controversies, and he has consistently held to that position until he has brought all the powers interested to recognize the propriety of his request. The United States government will not be involved in any way, but left free to decide for itself whether the award in any way interferes with the traditional policy of this country toward all American questions.

The details of the arbitration have not been made public, but it is understood that it has been so arranged as to not embarrass this government. The arbitration will be on American lines, recognizing as The Hague peace conference recognized it. The convention, signed by all the great powers, contains the following declaration:

"Nothing contained in this convention shall be so construed as to require the United States of America to depart from its traditional policy of not intruding upon, interfering with or entangling itself with the public question, policy or internal administration of any foreign state; nor shall anything contained in said convention be construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of America, of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions."

With this exception for the United States, the president felt that The Hague court was the proper tribunal to Pass Upon This Question.

It is said that he has, however, made some conditions as to the line of arbitration; that it shall not involve the question of alienating American territory to any foreign power. Otherwise the arbitration is to go free and untrammeled. Two protocols will be signed providing the general conditions of the arbitration. Venezuela probably will agree to apologize for the attack on the German legation at Caracas and there may be a cash payment to satisfy undisputed claims. The other protocol will provide what questions are to be submitted to arbitration.

Epitomized, this was the situation as it had resolved itself. The cabinet meeting yesterday was not so long as the sessions of the cabinet usually are. All the members except Secretary Root were present. The Venezuelan question was the principal and practically the only topic of general concern under consideration. Secretary Hay presented the net results of his cable correspondence with the governments at London, Berlin, Rome and Caracas. In accordance with the suggestion made several days ago by President Roosevelt, through Secretary Hay, President Castro was reported to have agreed to between his government and the European powers to the arbitration of the tribunal at The Hague. The European powers not only consented to submit the controversy to arbitration, but, while they had expressed a preference for an arbitration to be conducted by President Roosevelt, they assented to his suggestion that the matter be referred to The Hague. The presentation of the case met the hearty approval of the members of the cabinet. No fear is expressed by the administration that the Monroe doctrine has been brought into the controversy in any manner that might result in an embarrassing situation for the united states. Secretary Hay is preparing a note to the powers in which the gratification of this government is expressed for the course agreed upon by them in settlement of the pending difficulties.

In diplomatic circles the acceptance of the powers of The Hague arbitration arrangement is regarded as a distinct victory for American diplomacy, for had it not been for the stand taken by the Washington government Venezuela would not have had an opportunity of getting out of the trouble in this manner.

Welcomed Very Lukewarmly.

London, Dec. 29.—Except by the opponents of the government, who view it as a virtual defeat and as discrediting the ministry, the latest phase of the Venezuelan trouble has been welcomed very lukewarmly. Arbitration by President Roosevelt had been anticipated as so desirable an issue from a difficult business that his refusal, which is regarded as final, has caused keen disappointment. It is foreseen that even if satisfactory conditions to the submission of the disputes to The Hague court can be arranged, this method will entail endless and wearisome details, with no assurances that at the end President Castro still will be in power or Venezuela in the mood to abide by the decision of The Hague. In short, that element of guarantee which would have accompanied President Roosevelt's acceptance of the office of arbitrator is now lacking. At the same time it is readily admitted that from the American point of view President Roosevelt has acted wisely in declining to act.

The foregoing represents the general drift of newspaper comment. The only paper which really welcomes the decision to refer the Venezuelan matter to The Hague is the radical Daily News, which sees a chance of making arbitration once more a reputable theory.

Vessel Ordered to Leave.

La Guayra, Dec. 29. — The Swedish bark Framnas, from Cardiff with 475 tons of coal for the La Guayra-Caracas railroad, a British concern, arrived off this port Thursday and was ordered to remain outside the blockade line. Yesterday orders were conveyed to the captain of the bark to leave; this step was taken because the coal was considered contraband of war. The vessel was not seized, as she left Cardiff before the trouble with Venezuela commenced. The captain of the Framnas is awaiting orders from his consignees.

TO CHART ALL CHINESE.

Bertillon System to Be Used for Identification.

Washington, Dec. 29. — Bertillon's famous system for the identification of criminals will be utilized by the United States government in the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion laws, and after its adoption there will be an end to the system of substitution generally adopted by clever Chinese labor providers. The system will be established and maintained at ports of entry at the beginning of the fiscal year, if the recommendations of Secretary Shaw in this regard are adopted by congress. The secretary of the treasury has recommended that the appropriation for the administraion of the Chinese exclusion laws be increased from $200,000 to $500,000, and that as much of the amount as is necessary be available for the establishment of the Bertillon method of identification.

LYNCHED THE WRONG MAN.

Joe, and Not Montgomery Godley, Killed the Policeman.

Pittsburg, Kan., Dec. 29.—It is reported that Joe Godley, a brother of Montgomery Godley, who was lynched by a mob here Thursday morning, is wounded and in hiding at Weir City, Kan., and later investigation of the trouble between Officer Hinkle and the Godley brothers tends to show that Joe and not the man who was lynched, fired the shot which killed the policeman. Two other brothers, Gus and Jess, are in jail at Girard, charged with being implicated in the murder, but Joe escaped.

FATAL COLLISION IN CANADA.

Five Persons Killed and Fifteen Injured.

London, Ont., Dec. 29. — A head-on collision occurred at Wanstead, forty miles west of this city, between a west-bound passenger train and a fast east-bound freight train on the Sarnia division of the Grand Trunk railroad. From meager reports at hand it is learned that five persons were killed and fifteen or sixteen were injured. The engineer of the freight train and the fireman of the express are among the killed. The other three dead were passengers on the express train.

SHOOTS THIEF ON SIGHT.

Pennsylvanian Bags a Negro in His Cellar.

Westchester, Pa., Dec. 29. — Lewis Brown, a resident of New Garden, a small village near here, yesterday discovered four colored men in his cellar. He procured a shotgun and fired on the quartet, killing one of them. It is supposed one or more of the others were injured, as traces of blood were found near the house. The men had bagged about thirty bushels of potatoes and were about to depart when discovered. The coroner exonerated Brown

COAL FROM ENGLAND.

Revival of the Demand to Meet American Necessities.

London, Dec. 29.—The American demand for English coal again is in evidence. Four large steamers, carrying among them 17,500 tons, have this week been loaded at the Newcastle market for New York and Boston. The coal covered by these transactions is for January loading, and the rates at which the vessels have been chartered show a smart advance.

CORDIAL WELCOME

Extended to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain in South Africa.

Durban, Natal, Dec. 29. — Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, who left Portsmouth, Eng., Nov. 25, on board the armored cruiser Goodhope, landed here yesterday morning. He is accompanied by Mrs. Chamberlain. They received a warm welcome from a large crowd of people.

CHANGE FOR CONATY.

Prospective Appointment to the Vacancy at Los Angeles Bishopric.

Rome, Dec. 29.—Bishop Conaty, rector of the Catholic university at Washington, appears to have the best chance of appointment to the bishopric of Los Angeles, Cal. When the congregation of the propaganda meets Jan. 19, after the holidays, the filling of this vacancy will be among the earliest business transacted.

SAMUEL CLARKE DEAD.

Leader of the Expedition of 1849 Is Called Away.

Geneva, N. Y., Dec. 29.—Judge Samuel J. Clarke, who led an overland expedition to Colorado in 1849, and said to be the last surviving member of the first legislature of that state, died here yesterday at the age of seventy-eight.

May Come to America.

Vienna, Dec. 29.—It is reported here that Archduke Ferdinand and the crown princess of Saxony and their companions propose going to the United States, there being little probability of their finding congenial homes in Europe.

MAN FROZEN TO DEATH.

Falls From Exhaustion Within Five Feet of His Door.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 27.—George Plydell, aged fifty-five years, with his arms full of Christmas presents for friends and relatives, fell from exhaustion within five feet of his home at the foot of Fifth avenue west last night and froze to death. Plydell lived all alone in a shack near the harbor front, where he conducted a confectionery and cigar store. The authorities immediately took possession of his effects. On a table in his living room was a half-written letter to a sister in England, to whom some of the presents found on him were to have been sent. The coroner decided that death was due to freezing.

FIVE YEARS FOR COY.

Student Who assaulted His Fellow is Sentenced.

Rapid City, S. D., Dec. 27.—A sentence of five years in the state penitentiary has been imposed upon William Coy, convicted of assaulting and attempting to rob Frank Potts, a student at the school of mines. Coy was tried in the circuit court. The crime with which he was charged was committed in September. He asked Potts for money, near the Elkhorn depot. Receiving a refusal, he clasped Potts about the neck; and, drawing a knife, inflicted several slight cuts. Other students rushed to Potts' defense and Coy ran away. He was found afterward, buried beneath a quantity of coal in a coal car.

SOUTH DAKOTA TURKEYS.

Farmers Not Only Supply Local Market, but Ship East.

Artesian, S. D., Dec. 27. — A few years ago the farmers in this locality were compelled to buy their turkeys from local dealers, who shipped the birds in from outside the state. The farmers now pay more attention to raising turkeys, as is shown by the fact that in addition to supplying the local market they in one day recently shipped to Eastern markets an aggregate of 1,400 turkeys. The shipment also contained 600 chickens. This shipment was a small one compared with the total number of turkeys and chickens which have been shipped by the farmers of this vicinity this winter.

FORTUNE FOR REPORTER.

Michigan Newspaper Man Will Win Riches Through Ore Mines.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 27. — Chase S. Osborne, state railroad commissioner, who not many years ago was a reporter on a Milwaukee newspaper and later owner of the News of this place, and his associates have been offered $2,000,000 for their iron ore properties in the Sudbury district, north of the Canadian Soo in Ontario. Diamond drill operations have been in progress for several months and it is believed a large deposit of ore has been encountered.

FIRE AT LUVERNE.

Many Tenants Made Homeless by Destructive Blaze.

Luverne, Minn., Dec. 27.—Fire completely gutted the Revere building tenement flat. The building was occupied by the poorer classes of tenants, many of whom suffered severe losses. The extremely cold wind which blew strong from the north caused great suffering among the firemen and the tenants, who were driven out almost destitute of clothing. Loss to building, $3,000.

HEIR TO FORTUNE.

Windom Man and His Sister to Have $200,000.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 27. — Mrs. E. S. Lennon, formerly of Minneapolis, but at present a resident of Red Lodge, has just been notified that along with her brother, Frank Tuberg, a prominent citizen of Windom, Minn., she has fallen heir to a $200,000 estate left by ther father at Guttenberg, Sweden. She will leave Jan. 1 to prove title and then return to Montana.

CHRISTMAS TREE BURNED.

Gifts Destroyed and Attendant Narrowly Escapes Cremation.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 27. — While clapping their hands and dancing around a Christmas tree filled with gifts, a party of children were thrown into panic and an attendant narrowly escaped cremation as a result of a match being carelessly dropped on some of the flimsy material on the tree. The gifts were destroyed.

To Manage West African Mines.

Lead, S. D., Dec. 27. — J. L. Allen, who has been an amalgamator for the Homestake nearly twenty years, has resigned to accept a position with a strong English mining company operating in West Africa. He is under contract for three years at $3,000 a year, the company paying his passage and allowing his salary from the time of his acceptance.

Killed by Train.

Turtle Lake, Wis., Dec. 27.—An unknown man was struck and killed by the local freight at Richardson, five miles south of here on the Omaha. It is thought that the man committed suicide, as he deliberately kneeled in front of the engine.

Accused by a Priest.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Dec. 27.—J. H. Webb of this city, a prominent life insurance agent, has been arrested, charged with forgery. The complainant is a priest.

Takes His Own Life.

Balaton, Minn., Dec. 27.—Ed Palgren, a farm hand said to have been on a protracted spree, committed suicide on a farm near this place.

Hemingway's Christmas Present.

Pierre, S. D., Dec. 27.—Gov. Herreid has appointed E. E. Hemingway of Brookings public examiner to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Examiner Arnold. Mr. Hemingway has accepted the appointment.

SANTA CLAUS ON FIRE.

Young Man Badly Burned at School Exercises.

Sheboygan, Wis., Dec. 25. — Alvin Dexheimer, aged nineteen years, narrowly escaped death by burning yesterday. He was selected to play the role of Santa Claus at the Christmas exercises held in the school here, and was dressed in the usual style, his head and face being covered with cotton batting. While the boy was trying to light the candles near the top of the tree the cotton batting caught fire and the lad was enveloped in flames. The bystanders tried to smother the flames with their hands, and when the flames were finally put out the boy's face and body were badly burned. It is thought, however, that he will recover.

HYPNOTIC LOVEMAKING.

Milwaukee Man Asks Court to Protect Him From Woman's Wiles.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 25.—Martin J. Cass, who fears that through a hypnotic spell he will be compelled to marry Miss Minnie Ormond, for whom he alleges, he has had no affection, gave his consent in court to the appointment of a guardian in order to avoid the ceremony. Mr. Cass said he had first come under the influence of the woman's hypnotic spell through her application to become his housekeeper. He said the woman sat on his lap and hypnotized him until he agreed to marry her. He is over fifty years old and the doctors say he is slightly deranged from overwork.

SUMMONS IS SUDDEN.

Former Senator Dwight M. Sabin of Minnesota Is Dead.

Chicago, Dec. 25. — Former United States Senator Dwight M. Sabin of Minnesota died suddenly yesterday morning in his apartments at the Auditorium Annex. Senator Sabin had been a guest at the hotel since Nov. 2, being accompanied by his wife and daughter. He was stricken with heart failure about 11 o'clock Monday night and a physician was called. He found Mr. Sabin in a dying condition and beyond medical aid. The patient remained conscious for upward of an hour and the end was peaceful.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Farmer Dies Alone on the Prairie—Found Frozen.

Lisbon, N. D., Dec. 25.—Ira Oliver, aged twenty-four, son of Farmer O. J. Oliver at Fort Ransom, near here, was instantly killed yesterday by the accidental discharge of the gun he was handling. Alone he was getting a load of hay a few miles away from home on the prairie. When found he still had hold of the gun barrel, and was frozen stiff.

BIG MATCH PLANT.

Duluth to Have One of the Largest in the Country.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 25.—Duluth is to have one of the largest match manufactories in the country. It will be known as the Union Match company, and will be outside the match trust. The new company is capitalized at $1,000,000, and the money invested will come from Duluth, Chippewa Falls, Wis., and Chicago men.

Robber Cleverly Caught.

Belle Fourche, S. D., Dec. 25.—Jesse Bogue, who was caught by a decoy sent out with instructions from the officers of Butte county several weeks ago, was sentenced by Judge Rice to eighteen months in the penitentiary. He entered the plea of guilty to highway robbery. The officers had been suspicious of him some time, as a number of men had been robbed in the town, and in each instance the victim had been in a state of intoxication. The officers sent out a young man with a roll of bank bills. He associated himself with Bogue, and, feigning drunkenness, was robbed. Bogue was then taken by the officers before he could dispose of the bills.

Trying to Save Hortman's Neck.

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 25.—Judge C. H. Lewis says he will within two weeks file an appeal to the supreme court of the case of Harry Hortman of Cherokee, Iowa, sentenced to be hanged March 19. The judge believes he has a valid plea and that Hortman will never hang. He killed Florence Horton.

Gold Bricks Best.

Big Stone, S. D., Dec. 25.—The Gold Bros. Brick company has closed a contract with the government for 1,200,000 brick for the government building at Aberdeen. The brick was entered in competition with brick from all along the line of this division of the Milwaukee road.

New Trial for Nick.

Sturgis, S. D., Dec. 25. — Sheriff Smith of Meade county has returned from the Sioux Falls penitentiary with Nick Kieffer, who has been given a new trial by the supreme court. He has but a year yet to serve out his term.

Masked Men Take $400.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 25.—The saloon of J. D. Primm of Cody, Wyo., was held up by two masked men, who compelled Primm to give up the contents of the cash register, about $400, and then escaped on horses.

Postoffice Robbed.

Mason City, Iowa, Dec. 25.—The postoffice at Parkersburg was robbed last night of stamps and money to the amount of $500. No clue to the robbers.

Little Falls Bridge Bonds Sold.

Little Falls, Minn., Rec. 25. — The city council last night accepted the bid of Stoddard, Nye & Co. of Minneapolis, for the purchase of the $5,000 additional issue of bridge bonds to complete the Mississippi river bridge.

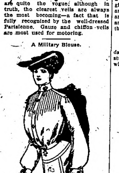
IN WOMAN'S INTEREST

Mask Veils the Vogue.

The well-dressed woman pays particular attention to the choosing of her veils. She realizes that an unbecoming veil may entirely ruin her appearance. Just at present every woman is wearing a veil that comes only to the nose. They are not universally becoming, but they are extremely useful, as being put on under the hat, they keep the hair neat and are not so disarranged by the wind.

The newest veils have enormous black and white chenille spots. They are quite the vogue; although in truth, the clearest veils are always the most becoming—a fact that is fully recognized by the well-dressed Parisienne. Gauze and chiffon veils are most used for motoring.

A Military Blouse.



This military blouse is of deep red cloth with shoulder straps of red piped with black and passementerie ornaments in black.

Handiwork of Long Ago.

Quilting, the handiwork and the fancy work of our great-grandmammas and great-grandaunts, is once more being shown on the costumes of fashionably attired maids and matrons.

But it is to be doubted if the beauties of to-day are following in the footsteps of their feminine ancestors and creating the exquisite needlework that is appearing on their smart coats and gowns.

Satin petticoats that peep out from underneath handsome gowns are profusely decorated with this work of long ago, and so are sleeves and many of the long cloaks have thickly quilted linings.

Quilting once having been brought to the front as a style, means that we shall soon be having counterpanes and bedspreads with the bewitching work upon them of our foremothers. Quilting does not mean a mere running in and out of the needle and thread. No, indeed, it is a much more complicated affair, and in the olden times it meant bunches and garlands of flowers and animals and birds being worked upon bed quilting.

Lucky Ladybugs.

Does every one know that ladybugs are considered "lucky" bugs? The ladybug as an ornament is quite new. The idea has been brought over from London by a jeweler who saw that the wearing of a ladybug is a fad in that great metropolis. Now one can get the pretty things made up in different forms. There is the ladybug without a setting, but with a ring at the top, to wear as an ornament, and there is the ladybug in the center of the convenient gold wire pins, made after the design of the safety pin. They come in stick pins, and in large sizes they have a little ornamental work in gold surrounding them to make them large enough for small brooches. The little bug is made of a kind of transparent enamel which gives it a natural appearance. They are made the natural size, very small, and from that they graduate, as they are used for different purposes, up to the size of a Brazilian beetle.

Of Dark Blue Corduroy.

The costume shown below is of dark blue corduroy trimmed with strappings of the material piped with white silk. The yoke and stock of the blouse are of pale blue cloth with tiny bunches of grapes of the same color and appliques of scarlet and white.

Over the Teacup

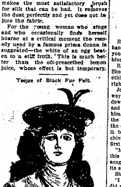
The next time you have a bouquet of flowers to keep, add a very little camphor to the water in the vase, and see how much longer its freshness will be retained.

Do you know that a few drops of good perfume extract on a bit of pumice stone the bits slipped in bureau drawers or among gowns in a wardrobe, will perfume belongings delightfully?

A fairly sizable piece of black velveteen, perhaps a quarter of a yard, makes the most satisfactory brush for silk that can be had. It removes the dust perfectly and yet does not injure the fabric.

For the young woman who sings and who occasionally finds herself hoarse at a critical moment the remedy used by a famous prima donna is suggested—the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth. This is much better than the oft-prescribed lemon juice, whose effect is but temporary.

Toque of Black Fur Felt.



The toque illustrated is of black fur felt, and two shaped black quills are its only trimming.

The Latest Ideas From Paris

Snowflake cloths are popular and pleasing.

The French knot still rules the neckwear world.

Cloth figures applied to lace are very modish.

Instep length is correct for the skirt of the walking suit.

Heavy black taffeta makes some novel sporting skirts.

Long-haired silk plush in white is much used for hat crowns.

It's exceedingly smart to have your lace dyed to match your dress.

Panne figures are introduced into some of the loveliest combination laces.

Thanks to the fur folk, even the supposedly cheap squirrel is now imitated.

The most stylish plaid skirts are cut on the bias. A blue and green combination is the most favored plaid.

Dressing for Vegetable Salad.

A boiled dressing suited to a vegetable salad is made of two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of French mustard. Melt the butter and let it cool. Then stir into it slowly the yolks of the eggs which have been previously mingled with the salt and sugar. Add the vinegar little by little and cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens. Remove from the fire, stir until cool, add the mustard and lastly the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and three tablespoonfuls of cream.

EDITION DE LUXE.

Priscilla is a poem sweet,
As any one may see.
Of perfect lines and rhythmic feet
And bound for life—to me.

Her brow, a frontispiece so rare,
Contains no smallest line,
But eyes speak volumes, and declare
The whole edition mine.

About her mouth a winsome smile
Of rapture gives a hint;
Sweetheart, I'd travel many a mile
For one unpublished print.

But lest I lost my treasure trove,
Desired, though undeserved,
I'll mark you "Copyright," my love,
And add "All rights reserved."

A MAID OF THE GHETTO

By MRS. GEN. GEO. E. PICKETT.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Rachel Meyerberg sat with her hands folded, her eyes fixed away beyond the housetops, where a line of blue marked the horizon.

Rachel was busy with her thoughts. She was only a poor girl with no ethic training to guide her to the right path at this parting of the ways.

Joseph Rosenthal came in, as he always did when the twilight wavered down and the candles were not yet lit and Rachel had a little time to give him. These moments were to him the golden strand in the gray web of the day. He took her hand and raised it to his lips. It was the old-time chivalry in Joseph's manner that had first attracted her.

"My Rachel, do you know what day this is, and why there has been a song of joy in my heart through all its sunny hours?"

She trembled and bent her head.

"I have thought of you all day. I did not even wish that you might see me take my diploma because I was looking down the way to the time when you would be always with me. The thought of you has been a rose blooming in my heart. Has it brought no happiness to you?"

"I am very glad. You have worked with noble purpose and deserve to succeed."

"Why, as for that, you have been the largest part of my purpose, and you are noble, so in that view my purpose has been a noble one. As for my attitude, that might strike a man as selfish."

"You are always unselfish."

"Philosophers say that love is the most selfish passion known to man. Then I must be intensely selfish for all I do is for love. Is it thinking of my unselfishness that had made you so serious when I hoped you would be glad as the light and the songs of birds and the bloom of flowers?"

"Partly that. I have been thinking many things."

"Tell me of them."

"You were very young four years ago."

"Yes; so were you. The difference is that you have remained young because the soul of innocence and goodness is the soul of youth, while I have grown old delving among bones and drugs. What matters it? Shall I not grow young again in the sunshine of your love?"

Her great dark eyes turned toward him pathetically. With just such eyes, he thought, must Rachel of old have looked upon Jacob when in cooling his parched lips with a draught of life-giving water she had inflamed his heart with the fire of love.

"You know how the girls of the Ghetto do. They grow hopeless and weary and sad in a life of grinding toil and no pleasures. They lose out of their hearts the youth and strength that belong to all young things. Then they think to find a way to lift themselves out of the groove in which their lives have traveled. A girl makes a contract with her lover to help him through his course of study, he to marry her when he is established in life. I would not let my father so bind you. I said, if he loves me he will come. If not, he must be free as the air of the plains."

He stooped and kissed her hand reverently.

"I have come. Love is the closest bondage in life. He who once falls under that power can nevermore be free. He is a willing prisoner to whom the opening of the door would be death."

"You think now that you love me. You have accustomed yourself to that thought until you believe it to be true. Some time you will know. The world opens wide to you. Life offers you far heights to climb. I could never go with you. Either I should be a weight to drag you back or a burden to slip from you and leave you to go on alone."

Joseph Rosenthal came in.

"You could never be either. You are my inspiration. Some men find in their work all the motive that they want. I hope that I am as earnest in my work as any man, and as desirous to do good in the world. But it is you who are my life, and all that I do or can ever do is for your sake."

"It will be different when you measure weapons with the world's workers."

"You mean that I shall play the poltroon and go out in the world and leave you who have sacrificed all for me?"

She shrank as from a blow.

"That is it. You feel under obligation. You do not see that it was my way of giving to the world what I might have given in my own life had things been different. Might not I have an ambition too great to be compassed without the help of another, and thus have called on you to give expression to my own aspiration?"

"I shall not leave you," she said softly.

"And you never loved me?"

"Oh!"

The sharp pain in her tone told him what her words had cost her.

"If you do why not make me happy and let me do what I can to fill your life with pleasure?"

"I must not. You would weary of one who is versed only in the toil of the narrow life that I have known."

He pleaded with her until she, in utter weariness, begged him in pity to leave her and then he went away. She lay the whole night with her eyes looking upward to the ceiling, where there seemed to be a flaming sword dripping with her heart's blood.

As the days went by and he could gain from her no other answer than the one that filled him with pain, he ceased to come. She heard of him sometimes as the fame of his work carried his name wider into the world and ever farther from her. Then the fever came and she heard often of Dr. Rosenthal, the "Angel of the Ghetto." He had gone out of her life forever and she was glad—glad for the good he could do without anyone to drag him down.

For years the Kenston tenements had seemed to waver between standing and falling, sagging out here, sinking in there, growing loose jointed and wobbly at the knees.

"Why don't you pull them down and rebuild?" someone had asked the owner.

"What's the use? They are bringing me in money all the time and it will cost no more to clear the ruins away and build after they fall."

"But the people in them—they will be crushed when the buildings fall."

"What of that? There are always plenty of tenants for that class of house. In that grade the race multiplies rapidly and immigration can always be depended upon to fill up any possible vacancy."

One morning Rachel Meyerberg, in the top story of the Kenston, felt a peculiar sensation of giddiness. It seemed that the floor was trembling and the walls had a tendency to shake as if with a chill as she approached them. Once a sound as of gravel rattling in the walls startled her. She laughed at herself for being so nervous. The walk to her work would take away the foolish feeling. She had reached the door and was turning the knob when suddenly there was a crash as if the earth was falling to pieces and she went down, down, into black night.

She was in a very dark place and a heavy weight was crushing her. Far off she saw a ray of light. If she could push off, that heavy thing she would crawl toward it.

Outside an old man who had just been dragged out unhurt was wringing his hands and crying:

"My Rachel! My Rachel!"

There was a pile of swaying timbers in front. A fireman had ventured under there, led on by the voice of a crying child. One of the timbers had fallen and he had been taken out dead. No one could tell when the next would fall.

Some one seized the old man's arm with a grip that made him cry out.

"Where is she?"

"Behind that wall."

A man dashed into the ruins, one of the threatening beams falling as he ran.

"He's gone."

"No; it just missed him."

He passed through a gallery formed by the fallen timbers, crossed by bodies, some lying as if in slumber, some crushed out of human semblance. Beyond the wall of masonry he found her. By an effort of his wonderful strength he lifted the beam and carried her out, pushing her away from him as a timber which had become dislodged fell and struck him. For the first time seeing his face she cried out, "Joseph! Joseph!"

When Joseph Rosenthal next knew the world he was in a hospital ward. A woman with a gentle step and soft touch was tending him, and the eyes with which she looked at him were like the eyes that lit the soul of Jacob when he was athirst.

"Why did you risk your life for me who am of so little worth?"

"Because my life is but darkness without your love to fill it with light. If you leave me what matters life to me?"

She put her hand into his.

"I shall not leave you," she said softly.

They loved for love's sake.

LITTLE BROTHER WORKS HAVOC

Sister's Suitor Scared Off When Almost Hooked.

Pewee Jackson was a quiet lad to appearance, but the time he spent in thought was not wasted. I don't know as I ever heard a more pathetic story than that told by his sister, Amy, who had been making conscientious efforts to land the new pastor, who was young and unmarried. Amy had entertained the gentleman for several evenings and it was noticed in the family that he always came again. Amy seemed to love to listen to his views on prohibition, of which he was a sturdy advocate, and it seemed to be no task for her to wallop the key board as they both tried the songs for the coming services.

One sad night—Amy tells the story with tears in her voice—they go to the piano as usual and Amy strikes a note that is decidedly to the bad. With a surprised look she lifts the top of the piano and the distressed pastor draws out half a chicken and three empty beer bottles.

The pastor was nice about it and laughed gayly, but Amy did not recover her strength that evening. All her explanations about her playful little brother seemed to fall flat on the furniture.

Anyhow, it never came off, and father trounced the Limb good and sound in the woodshed that night.—Minneapolis Journal.

Life's Throbbing Loom.

Weaving, weaving, weaving,
Time is the warp,
Pulsing and throbbing, life's loom goes;
Spinning, spinning, spinning,
Man's deeds the woof,
Quickly and busily the shuttle he throws.

The little child takes up the task,
As soon as consciousness begins,
His tiny hands uncertain act
As merrily he heedless spins.

The youth, with pride and confidence,
Loud vaunts the deeds he will achieve,
The future big with great events
In blazing light his name will weave.

Hard pressed, beset, the man toils on,
Speed by the days, the months, the years,
Aghast and desperate he stands,
So small his greatest work appears.

With palsied hand old age has come,
Slow goes the loom. Fate cuts the thread;
Wide yawns the grave; the web is spun,
A shroud is woven for the dead.

'Tis thus through life; man spins and weaves
Until of time and deeds complete
This mystic robe, his very self,
Becomes for him his winding-sheet.

Weaving, weaving, weaving,
Time is the warp,
Pulsing and throbbing, life's loom goes;
Spinning, spinning, spinning,
Man's deeds the woof,
Ever and ever the shuttle he throws.

Remarkable Shooting.

Mr. Moeran writes to a contemporary to describe a remarkable incident that occurred while shooting at a herd of ten deer near Portumna. "I picked," he says, "an eight-year-old buck that stood head and shoulders clear of the others, a little nearer to me and broadside on. The bullet struck him fair on the neck about three inches below the butt of his ear, turned almost at right angles, and came out at the back of his neck; it then struck a large doe in the center of the forehead, coming out at the back of her neck, and finally passed through the neck of a yearling doe just behind the ear, lodging under the skin on the far side. All three deer were killed on the spot. The distance was ninety-seven yards."

A City of Libraries.

Leeds, England, has been called the city of libraries, and it would appear, from the thirty-second annual report just issued, that it deserves the honorable appellation. In addition to its fine central libraries, with 65,317 volumes for reference and 43,150 in the lending department, it has nine day branch libraries and thirteen evening branch libraries, besides numerous branches for juvenile readers. The total stock of books numbers 212,396, after the withdrawal during the past four years of 32,000 worn out or otherwise unserviceable volumes. The total issue for last year was 938,710 volumes, and the attendance in the news rooms was 1,662,000.

WILL MAKE ANY CONCESSION

VENEZUELA NOW EXTREMELY ANXIOUS TO GET OUT OF TROUBLE.

Willemstad, Curacao, Dec. 30.—The Venezuelan revolutionists have again resumed active hostilities against President Castro.

There occurred yesterday morning a lively engagement between 1,200 revolutionists under Gen. Riora and the government forces at Cauyarao, in the vicinity of Coro. Details of the engagement are lacking, but it is known here that the revolutionists had artillery. The government forces were commanded by Gen. Referenо Castillo. Gen. Riora maintained his position.

The armistice between the government and the revolutionists has just expired.

Gen. Zoilo Vidal and five other leading supporters of Gen. Matos, who had sought refuge here, last night left the island of Curacao in a sailboat which took them in the direction of Cumarebo, near Coro, on the Venezuelan coast. The departure of these men is taken as proof that the revolt against President Castro is again active.

Will Make Any Concession.

Caracas, Dec. 30. — United States Minister Bowen and Lopez Baralt, Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, held a long conference last night. Mr. Bowen, obeying instructions from Washington, conveyed to Senor Baralt President Roosevelt's refusal to act as arbitrator in the Venezuelan difficulty. He recommended that the matter be taken to the international peace court at The Hague.

As a result of this conference Senor Baralt telegraphed President Castro to return from La Victoria. The president will reach here to-day and Venezuela's answer to the foregoing proposal will be given then. It is understood that Venezuela will make any concession, even abandoning her demand that her navy be returned.

Senor Baralt has prepared the following statement for the Associated Press:

"Venezuela agrees to pay all her debts, the payments to be guaranteed by a certain percentage of the customs receipts or by the flotation of a special loan, also to be guaranteed. I believe the proposal to submit the issues to The Hague will be acceptable to President Castro. I am sorry that President Roosevelt was unable to act as arbitrator."

Notes Sent to Bowen.

Washington, Dec. 30. — The Venezuelan government is now in possession of the complete notes of Great Britain and Germany containing the various reservations made by these governments before the decision was reached that the issues between Venezuela and the European governments having claims against her should be referred to The Hague tribunal for arbitration. The United States having acted as an intermediary in the steps leading up to the acceptance of arbitration now turns over to the Venezuelan government the formal work of completing the basis for a full hearing before The Hague. The notes were transmitted to the Venezuelan government through United States Minister Bowen at Caracas.

There were no new features to the situation here yesterday. Officials are hopeful that the governments interested will work harmoniously and conscientiously to reach an early and final solution of the trouble. The administration is anxious that there soon may be an amelioration of the blockade.

ORIENTAL DISASTER.

Sixty Lives Lost by the Sinking of a Steamer.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 30.—News was brought by the steamer Tartar, which arrived yesterday, of a disaster in the Malacca straits, as a result of which sixty lives were lost. The Tokyo Ashi publishes a telegram from Hongkong stating that the steamer Klang Yan was sunk in the Malacca straits and that sixty sailors and passengers are missing.

Peddling Oleo Is Illegal.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue bureau has decided that under existing laws a special stamp tax for peddling oleomargarine cannot be issued, and, therefore, any one who sells the commodity in that way is liable to special tax at each separate place where sales are made.

Entombed in Burning Mine.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—A fire has occurred in a coal mine at Bachmut, Ekatorinoslav province. A hundred miners were under the ground when the fire started. Twenty of these have been rescued, but it is feared that the others have succumbed.

Jollies Gen. Miles.

Pekin, Dec. 30. — The dowager empress and Lieut. Gen. Miles exchanged flattering speeches at Saturday's audience, the dowager assuring the general that the "success of the American army was assured under a commander so celebrated." The emperor never spoke during the audience.

Severe Earthquake Shock.

Rome, Dec. 30—A severe earthquake shock was experienced at Syracuse, Sicily, last evening. It was preceded by subterranean rumblings.

STEEL TRUST IS AGGRESSIVE.

It Is Thought to Have Secured Control of the Mesaba Range.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 30.—The United States Steel corporation is exhibiting a remarkable aggressiveness just now in the ore and mining fields. It is evidently gathering in all the mines and ore lands in the lake region that it can. While steel mills can be built by any man who has the price, ore mines cannot, and a hold of the source of ore supply available for the eastern part of the United States will make it hold on the trade stronger than any other possible investment. For this reason it secured the Sharon and Union Steel companies, and since then has bought the Champion mine, near Republic, which was owned in Boston and was almost the only property left in the lake country without steel mill or transportation connections. For this mine and surrounding lands the steel corporation is said to have paid $2,000,000, but this is supposed to be above the actual figure. The corporation has also made a deal with J. J. Hill for his ore lands on the Mesaba range that are not in the hands of other concerns. Mr. Hill's road is to have the haul and Mr. Hill's personal companies which own the fees of these lands are to have a royalty on all ore mined and shipped, making a very large source of income to the Great Northern and Mr. Hill. It is impossible to tell how much ore this deal covers, but in any event it practically puts the control of the Mesaba range in the hands of the steel corporation.

WISCONSIN RANCH.

Three Thousand Acres Near Ladysmith May Be Fenced.

Ladysmith, Wis., Dec. 30.—E. J. McGowan, T. W. Tubbs and others of Chicago who have a large tract of land south of Ladysmith, are making preparations to fence 3,000 acres in the spring and to place a large amount of live stock on the place. The men interested are figuring on buying 4,500 ewe sheep in Montana this winter, leaving them on the range there until spring and then bringing them here to pasture during the summer. They also contemplate putting on from 200 to 300 well-bred heifers and raise cattle.

AGED COUPLE BURNED.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Phelps of West Union Die in the Flames.

Osakis, Minn., Dec. 30. — Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Phelps, an aged couple living alone at West Union, a small village seven miles east of here, were burned to death. A barking dog awoke neighbors who endeavored to get into the burning house, but were driven back by smoke and heat. The house was totally destroyed and the bodies cremated. The aged couple were too feeble to get out of the building. They were nearly eighty years old and pioneer residents of Todd county.

TO DIVIDE A MILLION.

Heirs of Late F. C. Shattuck to Get Much Wealth.

Oshkosh, Wis., Dec. 30.—The four heirs of the late F. C. Shattuck of Neenah will have nearly $1,000,000 divided among them. The executors were discharged Saturday and a division of the estate ordered. The amount of personal property left after the expenses of administration is $818,000. There is real estate to the value of about $100,000 more. The four heirs are the widow, Mrs. Clara A. Shattuck, her sons, Sydney and Arthur T. Shattuck, and daughter, Vina Shattuck, all of Neenah.

WILL KEEP SON IN JAIL.

Sheriff-Elect Does Not Want Youth to Marry.

Miller, S. D., Dec. 30.—Bert Abbott, son of Sheriff-elect Abbott, nineteen years old, eloped with Ida Parkhurst. They were brought back last night by Sheriff Wilcox, after trying to get a marriage license in four different counties. The boy's father, who will soon take the office of sheriff, says he will keep his son in jail his entire term rather than have him get married when so young. All are highly connected here.

CONDUCTOR ENDS LIFE.

Unrequited Love Said to Be the Cause.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 30.—Thomas B. Landon, a conductor in the employ of the Duluth, Messabe & Northern road, committed suicide yesterday at Proctor Knot by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. Unrequited love was the cause of his rash act, it is supposed. He left a couple of letters, one addressed to "Lena," requesting that she keep his grave green. Another was addressed to a friend, urging that his parents be not notified of his downfall.

BOYS BURN IN BED.

Clothing Ignited by Oil Heater and Death Results.

Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—The igniting of the bed clothing from an oil heater caused the death of two children of Mrs. George Campbell, residing at 225 Greenbush street. Mrs. Campbell's husband was the inventor and part owner of the diving bell which was used to uncover the copper from the Pewabic, which foundered in Lake Superior several years ago, in which attempt he lost his life.

Killed at a Crossing.

Brodhead, Wis., Dec. 30. — John Duffy, formerly a prominent farmer in this city, but for some years past a resident of Baird, Iowa, was killed with his daughter by being run down by a train. They were attempting to cross in front of it with a team and sleigh.

Death in Gas.

Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—Peter O'Brien and wife, aged respectively sixty and fifty-eight years, died at their home, 604 Sixth avenue, of asphyxiation, from fuel gas which escaped from a tube attached to a portable stove.

Mail Carrier Missing.

Miller, S. D., Dec. 30.—Mail Carrier Richardson, whose route is southwest from here, has failed to return after an absence of ten days. Whether it is impassable roads or an accident that keeps him out is not known.

WANT OPEN DOOR

GERMANY AND ENGLAND MAKE A HOWL ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES.

SAY PROMISES WERE NOT KEPT

UNITED STATES NOT ADHERING TO OPEN DOOR POLICY IN PHILIPPINES.

DUTY ON MAVILA HEMP INVOLVED

ENGLISH AND GERMAN ROPE MANUFACTURERS SUFFER GREATLY.

Washington, Dec. 27.—England and Germany have made protest to the United States against what they declare to be the failure to maintain an open door in the Philippines.

The case in point involves the matter of an export duty of $7.50 a ton on Manila hemp and fiber which is imposed upon the produce shipped to England and Germany, but which is remitted on that which is sent to the United States.

These protests, which came to the state department and were then referred to Secretary Root because the war department has direct supervision over the Philippines, have been transmitted to the senate Philippine committee to be considered in connection with the measure proposing to reduce the tariff on Philippine goods coming into the United States from 75 per cent to 25 per cent of the Dingley schedules.

The question is somewhat perplexing to the Republican leaders, and they are undecided as to the best course to pursue.

The protest of Germany mentions the note addressed by William R. Day, then United States peace commissioner in Paris, to Senor Don E. Montero Reos, Spanish peace commissioner, Nov. 22, 1898, in which he declared that it was the intention of the United States to maintain an Open Door in the Philippines.

It adds that "the imperial government rests its claim on the principle of equal treatment for all nations, which the United States has always invoked in Eastern Asia and elsewhere." And it requests that the privileges now enjoyed by the United States be extended to Germany.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Marquis of Lansdowne by the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, and was followed by a note from the British ambassador to the state department in which mention was made of the note of the secretary of state on Nov. 20, 1899, declaring that this government would maintain an open door in the Philippines to the world's commerce.

The British note then adds significantly, "with which such preferential treatment of Manila fiber exported to the United States appears to be inconsistent."

Secretary Hay turned the correspondence over to Secretary Root, who replied, stating that the matter was one congress having in its Philippine tariff bill passed at the last session legalized and sanctioned the tariff enacted by the Philippine commission which imposed the export duty on hemp. The effect of the present export duty is to divert the bulk of shipment of Manila hemp from England and Germany, which were large purchasers before the Spanish-American war, to the United States, where the tax is remitted and the hemp imported free of duty.

For Congressional Action,

English and German rope manufacturers have suffered greatly by reason of this condition. This situation now confronts the Philippine committee, to which the protests have been referred. The export duty in the Philippines is necessary to maintain the revenues of the islands; a corresponding import duty cannot well be added without destroying the rope industry in this country, which now enjoys a great advantage over its European competitors. At the same time it is evident that the United States is not adhering to the policy of an open door in the Philippines, and England and Germany may find a means of retaliations.

SHOT SICK WIFE.

Enraged Man Then Turns the Gun on Himself, Dying Instantly.

Kansas City, Dec. 27.—William P. Hollenback yesterday while in a fit of rage caused by domestic troubles, shot his wife three times as she lay in bed ill, drove his seventeen-year-old step-daughter into the street at the point of a revolver and then shot and killed himself. The wife is dangerously wounded. Hollenback and his wife had quarreled repeatedly of late and recently separated by mutual agreement. He was to have been tried in police court to-day on the charge of mistreating her, and he tried yesterday to effect a reconciliation. Failing in this, he locked the doors of the apartment, and with the remark: "Here's a Christmas present for you," shot his wife as she raised herself in bed to receive the expected gift. The desperate man then turned the weapon on his step-daughter, who managed to unlock a door and escape, after which he sent a bullet into his own heart and died instantly.

Given Prison Sentence.

Rapid City, S. D., Dec. 27.—William Coy, who attempted to hold-up and rob Frank Potts, a student at the state school of mines last September, has been found guilty of assault with intent to kill, and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

She Brooded Over It.

STEAM CAUSES WRECK.

Engine Enveloped in White Crashes Into a Train.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 29.—A. G. Tainter, mail clerk on the Northwestern road; his assistant, L. B. Kooler, and Brakeman George Sivoly, of this city, and a passenger, Ed Sullivan of Fargo, were injured in a wreck on the Northwestern road last evening. The Red Wing train crashed into the westbound train on the main line in the yards and the engine of the Red Wing train was demolished. Owing to a defect in the engine of the Red Wing train a white cloud of steam enveloped the engine, preventing the engineer from seeing but a short distance.

THROW SWITCH FROM CAB.

Lead Inventor Has Contrivance of Merit.

Lead, S. D., Dec. 29.—J. P. Evans of Lead, an employe of the Elkhorn railroad, has patented an automatic switch which it is claimed a locomotive engineer can operate from the cab of the engine. The Elkhorn is experimenting with the device in the yards at Deadwood. It is not intricate in its mechanism, consisting of only five pieces. The railroad company has asked that a number of corrections be made to eliminate a few minor deficiencies before completing the tests. Railroad men believe the invention will be a success.

WRECK ON THE OMAHA.

Broken Rail Throws Sleeper and One Coach Off the Track.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 29. — The Omaha passenger train between the Twin Cities and Mitchell, leaving here at 6:15 a. m., was wrecked three miles west of here. A broken rail threw the sleeper and rear coach off the track, and the passengers were shaken up, but no one was seriously injured. A wrecking crew was sent out immediately and the track was read for the resumption of busines in the afternoon.

NEGRO STRUNG UP

CROWD OF RUFFIANS TAKE SUMMARY VENGEANCE ON A NEGRO.

BELIEVED HIM TO BE A MURDERER

OUTLAWS HANG HIM, CUT HIS THROAT, AND AGAIN HANG HIM.

NEGRO PROTESTS HIS INNOCENCE

BEGS TO BE RELEASED, BUT MOB TURNS A DEAF EAR TO HIS PLEADING.

Pittsburg, Kan., Dec. 27.—Montgomery Godley, colored, was taken from the Pittsburg jail yesterday by a crowd of ruffians, who hanged him, cut his throat, and again hanged him. The outlaws who lynched Godley said they believed the negro had deliberately murdered Policeman Milton Hinkle early yesterday morning at a Christmas dance. Godley had been in jail but two hours when the mob seized him.

The victim of the mob's wrath was given a short hearing in the jail yard before he was executed. He did not confess to the murder, but the lynchers carried him three blocks from the jail without the slightest interference from the jailers or police. A rope was secured and Godley, begging to be released, was hanged to a cross-bar on a telephone pole. The negro strubbled and the rope broke. As Godley struck the ground a man

Seized Him by the Throat.

Godley still protested his innocence and begged for mercy, but the murderer's only answer was to draw a clasp knife across the negro's throat, severing the jugular vein. Again the men seized the expiring victim and this time hanged a corpse. The death of the policeman occurred at daylight and by the time the bells in the church steeples were peeling forth their Christmas chimes the bloody corpse of the negro, charged with, but not proved guilty of, the policeman's taking off, gloated the eyes of the rabble in the streets of Pittsburg. The murder of Policeman Hinkle, as far as known to the police, was due to his attempt to subdue a number of negroes at a Christmas ball. The ball had gone on all night and many of the men were drunk when morning came. Most of the dancers were negroes. Montgomery and John Godley of the dancers. Officer Hinkle requested them to be quiet. The Godley brothers answered him in an insolent manned and he tried to arrest them. They resisted and Officer Hinkle blew his whistle for help. Then he began to use his club in order to protect himself. He was holding his own against three men when a negro, said to have been Montgomery Godley, snatched the officer's revolver from the holster and shot Hinkle behind the right ear. Hinkle died soon afterward. Other officers pursued the negroes. The Godley brothers were the only two captured and they were put in jail. The news of the murder spread and soon a crowd gathered about the jail. Cries of "Hang him!" "Burn him!" "Get a rope!" were heard on every side. An attempt was first made to rob Marshal Higgins of his keys to the jail, but he did not have them. The doors were then kicked and beaten in.

Were the Most Unruly

GREAT REEF OF GOLD.

Forty-Mile District in Alaska Attracts Adventurers.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 27. — A great deal of gold-bearing quartz has been located by miners in the Forty-Mile district, Alaska. The formation was traced for three miles and hundreds of claims were staked out. It contains stringers running as high as $3,000 a ton. The first stringers were found six months ago, but the matter was kept secret until the lucky prospector making the discovery could locate the trend of the ledge with the object of staking out as many claims as possible. Since the news was made public early in November a great stampede has taken place. South-African miners say the reef is similar in formation and appearance to some of the greatest gold-bearing ledges of South Africa. It is supposed the ledge is one of those ground down by glaciers during the past ages, thereby loosening the present Yukon placer gold.

KILLED BY FAST MAIL.

Two Young Men, Recently Married, Struck by a Train.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The fast mail which left here at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, west-bound, struck a carriage containing Fred and Roy Holcombe, one mile east of Port Byron. The young men were both recently married and were on their was to spend the day with their parents when the train struck them, killing them instantly.

Astor's Gift to Hospital.

Fire Causes $200,000 Loss.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 27.—Fire last night destroyed the store of William Nicalaus & Co., dry goods merchants. The loss on stock is $75,000. The fire spread in two directions and was extinguished after causing $200,000 loss.

Snowing in Turkey.

Constantinople, Dec. 27.—A violent snowstorm has been raging here for forty-eight hours. Communication by land and sea is interrupted and telegraph wires are down. The weather is intensely cold.

CARNATION LEAGUE.

New Patriotic Movement Intended to Perpetuate Memory of McKinley.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 24.—The "Carnation League of America" is the name of a new patriotic movement proposed to the trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association. The idea originates with Lewis G. Reynolds, a business man of Dayton, Ohio, and it will be submitted to the trustees at their coming meeting in Washington. In referring to the proposition yesterday, Mr. Ritchie, secretary of the McKinley Monument association, said: "Mr. Reynolds' conception is interesting and extraordinary from many viewpoints. He proposes that the 'Carnation League' shall have a creed, framed from some notable words of Mr. McKinley and that it shall be a perennial memorial to his honor, statesmanship and patriotism, differing from that accorded to any of our past presidents. Every member of the league would wear a carnation on each recurring 14th day of September, the anniversary of the late president's death."

DEATH LIST SWELLED TO 25.

Victims of the Railroad Collision at Byron, Cal.

San Francisco, Dec. 24.—The death list of the railroad collision at Byron, Cal., was swelled to twenty-five last night by the ending of the life of Miss Stella Howard of San Francisco at the Southern Pacific hotel here. Walter Vernon, aged seventeen, died at Fresno yesterday. His father died Sunday night. At the railroad hospital it was announced that several other victims of the wreck were in a critical condition and migh succumb to their injuries. Engineer McGuire, of the Stockton flyer, is still confined at the hospital. He is in a highly nervous state, and to the few persons who have seen him, he reiterates his declaration that it was impossible for him to stop his train when he was signalled.

At Martinez, Cal., yesterday the coroner impaneled a jury to view the bodies there. There will also be an inquest in San Francisco on the bodies of the victims who died in this city.

AFTER EASY MARKS.

Two Thousand Letters Demanding Payment for Jewelry.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 24. — Fully 2,000 letters have been received at the Bloomington postoffice during the past three days from a New York collection agency, all containing the same information and to the effect that the recipient of the letter had received a certain amount of jewelry from a New York firm, and that unless the sum due, $1.20, was immediately remitted suit would be instituted. Many of these letters were addressed to persons dead or who had long since moved away, and the supposition is that names had been secured from an old directory or other ancient source. Postoffice inspectors have written to the postmaster here to notify the recipients of the letters to ignore the threat, as the scheme was inaugurated by blackmailers.

ARMOUR'S PROTEGE.

Little Boy Who Sympathized With Lolita Is Cured by Dr. Lorenz.

New York, Dec. 24.—Dr. Lorenz has performed his last operation in this city for congenital dislocation. He is the boy who sent a doll to Lolita Armour, daughter of J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, to operate on whom Dr. Lorenz came to this country. Mr. Armour was appealed to by the parents of the boy, and wrote a personal letter to Dr. Lorenz asking him to operate on the child who had remembered his little girl, and the operation of Sunday, which was pronounced successful, was the outcome of this request. Dr. Lorenz will leave to-day for Boston, where he will operate an hour after his arrival.

TRAIN UNDER THE SNOW.

Fifty Passengers Spend Ten Hours in Discomfort.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 24.—Fifty passengers on a Burlington train running from Denver to Deadwood were buried beneath ten feet of snow for twenty hours. They were rescued after ten hours' work by a relief force sent from Sidney, Neb. The relief force numbered fifty persons. The little town of Mercer, Neb., was the home of the snow-bound travelers for the ten hours. The place is only a cluster of about ten houses and shanties, and the train was obliged to remain beneath the snow until aid could be secured from Sidney, fifteen miles away.

SELLS HIS HEAD.

Novel Transaction Made by a Freak With Medical College.

Florence, Colo., Dec. 24.—Arthur Jennings, owner of a peanut stand here, has sold his head to a medical college for $3,000. One thousand dollars was paid in cash, and the balance is to be paid to his relatives at his death. Jennings is twenty-seven years old, and at the age of thirteen years was attacked with brain fever. After his recovery his head began to grow abnormally, and it now measures thirty-two inches in circumference.

STATUARY HALL OPENED.

New York's $1,040,000 Building Is Ready for the Public.

New York, Dec. 24—The new central building and statuary hall of the Metropolitan Museum of Art was formally opened yesterday. Mayor Low and other city officials, together with a large number of prominent artists and critics, attended the opening ceremonies. The new structure, which is to serve as the main entrance to the museum, was finished last spring at a cost of $1,040,000.

Busy in the Postoffice.

New York, Dec. 24.—At the general postoffice and the foreign branch a double force of men worked all day Sunday and Sunday night, and it was said that the offices were clear yesterday morning. Considering the fact that in addition to the heavy Christmas mail more than 6,000 bags of foreign mail had arrived since Sunday evening. This congestion was caused by the belated steamers.

MANGLED IN WRECK

TWENTY-EIGHT LIVES CRUSHED OUT IN AN ONTARIO DISASTER.

TERRIFIC HEAD-ON COLLISION

THIRTY PERSONS RECEIVE SERIOUS INJURIES — ALL WILL RECOVER.

OPERATOR IS HELD RESPONSIBLE

RAGING BLIZZARD ADDS TO THE HORRORS OF THE DISASTER.

London, Ont., Dec. 30.—In the head-on collision Friday night near Wanstead on the Grand Trunk railway between a west-bound passenger train and a fast freight, twenty-eight persons were killed and thirty were injured.

While several of the injured are still in a serious condition, it is expected that all will recover.

Many of the dead were mutilated and the snow about the wreckage was crimson with blood.

The Pacific express was two hours late and running at high speed when it reached Wanstead. The freight was trying to make a sidi but failed. When the through train struck the freight there was a disastrous crash. The locomotives reared their pilots high in the air and tumbled into the ditch. The baggage car of the express train telescoped with the smoking car and here the death list was made. The Pullman sleepers did not leave the rails and their occupants escaped except for bruises.

Blizzard Adds to Horror.

The darkness of night and the raging of a blizzard added horrors to the wreck. Fortunately, the fire horror was averted.

In the blinding snowstorm neither engineer saw the other train approaching, apparently. The shock was awful. The trains came together squarely head-on. In a second the baggage and express cars of the passenger train telescoped into the day coach. This day coach was reduced to splinters and fragments back to the last three windows.

It was crowded with human beings, and the resultant loss of life and injury was harrowing. For three hours or more, wounded and maimed passengers were pinned underneath wreckage, crying piteously for help while they suffered from exposure to the elements.

Exposure undoubtedly hastened the death of some of the more seriously injured. The bodies were taken from the wreck frightfully mangled, some of them almost beyond recognition.

Operator's Story.

Andrew Corson, the operator at Watford, the first station east of the wreck, whose failure to deliver orders to Conductor McAuliffe of the express train, to pass freight at Wanstead, is said by the Grand Trunk officials to have caused the wreck, yesterday afternoon made his first statement since the wreck. He says he received the order for No. 5, the express, to pass the freight at Wanstead at 9:48 o'clock, but declares positively that a few minutes later Dispatcher J. G. Kerr at London called him and ordered him to "bust," or cancel the order. He said:

"About 9:45 o'clock, after calling Wyoming and ascertaining that the freight was there, the dispatcher called me rapidly a half dozen times. When I answered on the wire he told me to 'bust' this order. I wrote 'bust it' across the order just as No. 5 was coming in. After the train had started and was out of reach the dispatcher learned the freight had left Wyoming. I told him I

Could Not Stop

No. 5, as it had left. He immediately began calling King's Court Junction, the station between Watford and Wanstead on the railroad wire, and I tried to raise them on a commercial wire. We both failed to do this, however, until the express had passed the junction."

Corson admitted that he knew it was against the rules of the company to cancel a train order without sending a substitute for it, but he said that the dispatcher was his superior officer and he disliked to question his order or dispute his authority for taking this action.

The order book in the local Grand Trunk office does not show that the order was "busted" or canceled, as Corson claims. According to the book it was still in force and should have been delivered to the conductor of the express.

Kerr has made no statement, not even to the railway officials, and will not until he takes the stand at the inquest.

Brakeman Killed.

New Richmond, Wis., Dec. 30.—F. E. Keuhnast, a brakeman on a west-bound Wisconsin Central freight train, was instantly killed in this city last night shortly after midnight. It is supposed he was trying to board the train as it was pulling out of the depot and fell between the cars and platform. He was about twenty-five years old and single. His home was in Stevens Point. Deceased served throughout the Spanish-American war in the Philippines.

Doctor Threatens Woman.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Dec. 30.—Dr. O. B. Beller, a prominent physician of Garrison, has been arrested on the charge of threatening to kill his former fiancee, a Miss Hall of Vinton, who married another man Christmas.

Sheriff Is Ousted.

Sullivan, Ind., Dec. 30.—Gov. Durbin has notified Sheriff John S. Dudley that he is no longer to consider himself a public officer because he permitted a mob to take a prisoner from him and lynch him.

STRIKES A ROCK.

United States Army Transport Sherman Is Damaged.

Manila, Dec. 30.—The United States army transport Sherman struck a rock near San Bernardino light, south of Luzon, Friday night. The transport sustained a heavy shock and some of her plates were damaged. After the accident twenty-three inches of water was found in her forward bilges, but was controlled by steady pumping. The steamer proceeded for Manila under her own steam and arrived here yesterday. When the Sherman struck the passengers on board were terrified but there was no disorder. They promptly took their stations, with life preservers on, in the small boats. The officers of the Sherman handled the situation splendidly. Her cargo was not damaged. It probably will be necessary to dock her at Hongkong.

BOXER RISING CONTINUES.

Rebels Make Desperate Attack Upon Chang Tu.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 30.—According to advices received by the steamer Tartar, the Boxer rising in Sze Cuan continues and another attack was made on Chang Tu in November. While some of the rebels battered the gates, another body surprised the outer fortress, but the soldiers fought desperately and ultimately defeated the Boxers, killing many and capturing some. Had the fort been captured by the boxers the city would have been at the mercy of the invaders. The captives were tortured, and from infomation secured several citizens were arrested, charged with being in league with the rebels. All were beheaded.

KILLS NINE MEN.

Snowslide Razes Bunk House of Mine in British Columbia.

Nelson, B. C., Dec. 30.—A snowslide which razed the bunk house of the Mcolle Gibson mine, ten miles from Lake Kootenai, is believed to have killed nine men and injured several others. The men had retired after holding an impromptu concert. The snowslide came down, crushing in the roof and sweeping the men down the mountain. They were carried from 300 feet to half a mile from the site of the cabin. One man was found in the snow, writhing in agony. He died a few moments later. Eight men are unaccounted for. The mine is the second highest in the Kootenai range, being well above the timber line.

OVATION FOR DEWEY.

Ponce Is Decorated in Honor of the Admiral.

Ponce, P. R., Dec. 30.—Admiral Dewey arrived here yesterday evening overland from San Juan and received an ovation. He was warmly greeted by a committee of native officials and citizens and was escorted by them from Juana Diaz to Ponce. The city was decorated in honor of the admiral's arrival, which was followed by a procession with bands of music, through the streets. Later the admiral boarded the United States steamship Mayflower, which was waiting for him, and sailed for Culebra.

FURIOUS GALE ON THE COAST.

Feared That Shipping Will Suffer Considerably.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 30.—Another furious gale has been raging here for the past thirty-six hours and has caused much damage along the coast line. It is feared that the shipping will suffer considerably. The Allan line steamer Peruvian passed Cape Race yesterday morning but she has not yet been able to make port because of the storm and fog. She has on board 300 Canadian cattle which were shipped at Halifax because of the embargo against American ports.

ELEVEN VILLAGES IN RUINS.

Earthquake Disaster in Russian Asia Proves Greater Than First Reported.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—Later advices from Ashkabad, Russian Turkestan, say that in the country around Andijan eleven villages are in ruins as a result of the recent earthquake and that fully 6,000 houses have been destroyed in these scattered settlements. The villages are sufficiently provisioned for some time, but the government will be obliged to supply the wants of the working people at Andijan until the spring.

MARCONI KEEPS IT UP.

Messages Sent With Constantly Increasing Efficiency and Facility.

Glace Bay, N. S., Dec. 30.—The Marconi station at Glace Bay continues to maintain daily communication with Cornwall, with constantly increasing efficiency and facility. Marconi is still here, but will leave shortly for the Cape Cod station. In the meantime he is sending two or three messages by wireless to Europe daily. Some of these messages are lengthy. One of the dispatches was directed to ex-Empress Eugenie.

BLIZZARD AT TURKISH CAPITAL.

Roofs Collapse Under Weight of Snow and Ships Are Dashed to Pieces.

Constantinople, Dec. 30.—Much damage was done to this city and its environs by the recent snow blizzard. Roofs collapsed, and many small craft in the harbor and in the Bosporus were sunk or dashed to pieces on the shores, causing fatalities, and others drifted seaward. The Black sea fleet suffered in a similar manner.

Gainsboro, Tenn., Dec. 30. — While attempting to cross Cumberland river here last night in a canoe Miss Herdi Rich, Miss Hattie Loso and Walter Rich were drowned, while Rufus Daily and Alfred Crowder escaped.

TO FIGHT J. J. HILL

CAMPAIGN WHICH WILL INVOLVE THE INTERESTS OF THE NORTHWEST.

HARRIMAN IS MAKING THREATS

EXPECTS TO BE ABLE TO CROSS THE CONTINENT IN THREE DAYS.

IMPROVE HIS RAILWAY SYSTEM

PROPOSES TO SPEND MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN THE ATTEMPT.

Washington, Dec. 25. — From New York to San Francisco in three days and a half is the task that E. H. Harriman has set forth to accomplish. He says it will be accomplished within three years.

He has taken the Pennsylvania railroad as his model, and declares that as fast as man and money can make the change the Union and Southern Pacific systems from Omaha to San Francisco will be in every respect equal to the magnificent Pennsylvania road from New York to Chicago. Millions are to be expended in straightening the road from Omaha westward, and the work of rebuilding the Southern Pacific from Ogden will follow. The Sierras are to be tunneled so that the grade will be no greater than grades found on the lines east Ogden.

Mr. Harriman's declaration of his purpose in pouring out millions on the central continental highway was called out because of the struggle now going on for the lion's share of transpacific commerce between James J. Hill and the Northern interests on the one hand and E. H. Harriman and the Union and Southern Pacific on the other.

The Fight Arose

over the attempt of the Northern interests to wrest control of the government transport business from San Francisco and transfer it to Seattle. The outcome of the first round of the fight, which was decided by Secretary Root last week, was in a sense a victory for Seattle, though for the time being the government service will be operated as usual from San Francisco. But a contract has been awarded to the Boston Steamship company, which has close connections with Hill's interests, whereby troops and supplies may be transported from Seattle. The quantity to be sent over the Northern route is left entirely to the discretion of the secretary of war.

The Seattle interests, in making the bid, stipulated that at least 75 per cent of the government's Philippine business should go through Seattle, but Secretary Root declared this an impossible condition, and it was withdrawn.

Mr. Harriman and the San Francisco interests were opposed to the granting of the contract to Seattle, even without the condition named, but failed to influence Secretary Root.

VETERAN WON'T HAVE PENSION.

Kansas Old Soldier's Name to Be Framed at Capital.

Washington, Dec. 25—John A. Daley, formerly of Indiana, now living at Topeka, Kan., has refused a pension, and as a result a movement is on foot to frame his name and hang it up in the pension office. Some time ago Daley, who is a veteran of the Fourteenth Indiana regiment, filed a petition for a pension. Investigation justified his claim, a bill was passed, and he was informed that his name was on the government roll for $12 a month. Daley replied by letter, declining the pension. Convinced that he had to deal with a crazy man, Commissioner Ware sent a man to Topeka to investigate the situation. The clerk found there an old man bent double from disease contracted in the army, suffering from many bodily ailments, but still keeping a keen and vigorous intellect.

"Some of my kind neighbors questioned my army record," the old man told the clerk, "but now my record has been cleared I am satisfied. The government is paying out too many millions for pensions now."

At the pension bureau Daley's money is being kept for him should he change his mind.

DIED ON WAY HOME.

John Armstrong, Well Known Dairyman and Lecturer.

Aberdeen, S. D., Dec. 25. — John Armstrong of De Smet was found dead in bed at the Ward hotel here yesterday morning. Heart disease was the probable cause. He was a well known dairyman and lecturer, and twice president of the State Agricultural society. He came here on his way home from North Dakota, where he had been lecturing for a farmers' institute. He reported he had been sick a day or two at Carrington.

FELL TO DEATH.

Man Trying to Escape From Burning Block Is Killed.

Bradford, Pa., Dec. 25. — The Odd Fellows' block burned yesterday morning. The loss is $200,000. The fire originated in the Evening Star press room. Thaddeus Green died as a result of a fall, with several others, from a ladder that broke.

Bonds Bring a Premium.

Two Harbors, Minn., Dec. 25.—Bids for $24,000 worth of twenty-year 5 per cent water and light bonds were opened last evening, and sale awarded to Rudolph Kleybatte & Co., Chicago, the highest bidders, at $25,692.

Masked Men Rob a Saloon.

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 25. — Two masked men, heavily armed, entered a crowded saloon at Hubbard, Neb., last night, robbed everybody in the place and looted the till and made their escape.

PRESENTS ARE LOST.

Christmas Gifts Are Strewn Along the Track.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 27.—A large quantity of Christmas mail from Chicabo bound for New York was ground the pieces beneath the wheels of an Erie express train as the result of a railroad accident. The mail car was piled full of pouches, and as it passed through Lestershire, a suburb of this city, one of the bags was to be hurled onto the platform, the train not stopping. As the door was opened and the bag thrown out the big Chicago pouch fell out beneath the wheels of the flying mail car. Evidently the mail clerks did not know of the accident, as the train did not stop. It was found that the big pouch had been cut into ribbons and the contents fairly ground to a pulp, even the addresses being obliterated. Valuables were found strewn about the track, but there was nothing that would indicate the names of the senders or the persons to whom they were addressed. Postmaster Hill has notified the department at Washington and will hold the remains of the pouch for possible identification, but there will be many presents bound for New York and Eastern points that will never reach their destination.

FROM CABINET LADIES.

Jeweled Purse Their Christmas Gift to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Washington, Dec. 27. — Mrs. Roosevelt's most prized gift was that presented by the women of the cabinet. The greatest possible secrecy had been observed in guarding the nature of the gift, which was a perfect surprise to her. It was a gold purse of superb workmanship, set with diamonds and sapphires. It is inscribed on the outside:

"Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt."

And on the inside:

"From the Ladies of the Cabinet, Dec. 25, 1902."

The purse happens to be just the thing above all others which Mrs. Roosevelt wanted the most, and was revealed by the admiration she showed for just such a purse carried by a friend. Mrs. Hay selected it during one of her recent visits to New York, and had a beautiful white box especially made for it.

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH.

Fire Spreads So Quickly That They Are Unable to Escape.

Malone, N. Y., Dec. 27. — Four persons were burned to death yesterday in the house of Julius King of Piercefield, a prominent pulp and paper manufacturing town in the Adirondacks. The fire had gained such headway before it was discovered that Mrs. M. J. McGovern, King's eldest daughter, and her three children, who were sleeping on the lower floor, were not able to get out and all burned to death. One of the children, whose body was found close to a window, evidently had made heroic efforts to escape. King and his wife, with a few boarders on an upper floor, escaped by jumping out of the window. One man was seriously burned. It is not known how the fire started.

ELKINS' GIFT TO MASONS.

$500,000 for a Home for Daughters of Freemasons.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27. — Announcement was made yesterday that William L. Elkins of this city will found a home in this city for orphan girls, daughters of Free Masons of Pennsylvania, that will cost $500,000. Mr. Elkins gave his second Christmas dinner to the residents of the Masonic home yesterday, and during the progress of the dinner the Christmas gift to the grand lodge of Pennsylvania was made to those present. The grand officers of the lodge, who were present, accepted the gift. The proposed home will be situated in the northern part of the city, and at first will accommodate 100 orphans.

CHRISTMAS CORPSE.

Body of Man Who Died Suddenly Arrayed in Gifts From His Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—While calling upon his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Marsden, to receive a dress shirt for a Christmas present, Daniel Bancroft, seventy-one years old, of Kensington, dropped dead from heart disease. The family reunion which was to have taken place at the Marsden home has been indefinitely postponed. Bancroft had been complaining of heart trouble for some time. He will be laid out in the presents that had been given him for Christmas — a white dress shirt from Mrs. Marsden, a black suit from one son, a pair of shoes from another and a suit of underwear from a daughter.

CATTLE ARE STARVING.

Snowed In and Beyond Reach in Colorado.

Denver, Dec. 27.—Thousands of cattle are reported to be starving on the range in Northwestern Colorado. The humane society appealed to the owners to rescue their stock, and they have replied that they are powerless to do so. Cattle are snowed in on the high range in Boute, Rio and Blace counties, without pasture and witout water. It is impossible to get food to them and equally impossible to drive them into suitable winter quarters.

BOTH LEGS CUT OFF.

Fireman Killed and Engineer Badly Injured in a Collision.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 27.—In a head-end collision between two freight trains of the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis at Petersburg last night, Fireman J. A. Wright of Springfield, was killed, both legs being cut off. Both engineers were badly hurt.

Increases His Gift.

Ishpeming, Mich., Dec. 27.—Andrew Carnegie has raised his donation to Ishpeming for a new library from $20,000 to 25,000. The city recently purchased a site and a building will be erected in the spring.

Faribault's Population.

Faribault, Minn., Dec. 27.—The new directory gives Faribault a population of 9,630, exclusive of the religious and state educational institutions located here, which have a population of between 1,500 and 2,000.

ROUT IS COMPLETE

MOORISH IMPERIAL ARMY IS BADLY BEATEN BY REBELS.

2,000 ARE KILLED OR WOUNDED

SURVIVORS FLEE IN DISORDER, LEAVING GUNS AND AMMUNITION.

IMPERIAL SOLDIERS DESERT

GO OVER TO REBELS AND ASSIST IN DRIVING LOYAL TROOPS BACK.

Tangiers, Morocco, Dec. 30. — The rout at Taza of the Moorish imperial army by rebels under the leadership of the pretender to the throne which was reported Dec. 23 has been officially confirmed. The imperial forces abandoned their guns, rifles, ammunition and beasts of burden and fled precipitately to Fez.

On Dec. 22 10,000 Sherefian troops, commanded by a brother of the sultan's minister of war, received orders to concentrate and take the offensive against the pretender at Taza. Before the Sherefians moved upon him the pretender attacked them with large bodies of cavalry. The imperial army was surrounded, completely routed and fled in disorder toward Fez, abandoning all material of war. The first fugitives arrived at Fez on the morning of Dec. 24. The gates of Fez at present are shut, shops there are closed and the population is greatly excited, but there

Has Been No Disorder.

The European colony of Fez, numbering about twenty persons, are taking no steps to leave the town and appear to be satisfied that it is in no imminent danger, although the situation is regarded as serious. It is said the pretender's followers have received numerous additions since his successes, and he is already negotiating with the tribes of the Wadmaweb valley. The population of Fez is reported to be generally hostile to the sultan and ready to acclaim any pretender who will guarantee the town from pillage.

No details of the imperial loss have yet been received here, but it is rumored that 2,000 of the sultan's soldiers were killed or wounded. The authorities here are trying to minimize the disaster. It is declared that a section of the imperial troops sent as reinforcements deserted to the rebels and aided in driving the loyal troops back to Fez.

POISON IN CHRISTMAS GIFT.

Chicago Man Dies and Three Persons Are Arrested.

Chicago, Dec. 30. — Poisoned, it is charged by means of a bottle of wine given as a Christmas present, Richard Cummings, fifty years of age, died yesterday at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Shanahan, 4228 Ashland avenue, where he was boarding. William Noniak, his wife, Mrs. Theresa Noniac, and their thirteen-year-old daughter Mary, of 4226 Ashland avenue, were arrested on suspicion of having poisoned Cummings. A bitter quarrel is said to have taken place between Cummings and Mrs. Shanahan on one side and the Noniaks on the other. The wine, according to the police, was given to Mrs. Shanahan by Mary Noniak on behalf of her parents as a peace offering. Mrs. Shanahan drank some of it and said she suffered severe pain afterward. She offered some of the wine to her niece, who complained that it tasted bitter. Cummings drank the remainder and died twenty-four hours later. An examination of Cummings' stomach will be made to-day.

BABY FARM HORROR.

Three Hundred Children Killed This Year.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 30.—Correspondence of the Associated Press received from Yokohama by the steamer Tartar contains details of a horrible baby farming conspiracy in Osaka. An elderly woman, her married daughter, husband and two other persons have been arrested for infanticide, and it is learned that since they started operations this year 300 children have been killed.

MEET VIOLENT ENDS.

Eight Persons in New York Meet Untimely Death.

New York, Dec. 30.—Eight persons met violent deaths in Greater New York yesterday. Three were clear cases of suicide and the others resulted from a variety of causes.

Mrs. Mary Clarke, aged forty-five, wife of the chief officer of the steamer Beverly, died from the result of gas poisoning, self-administered.

George Simon, forty-six, and Jacob Schwartz, thirty-five years of age, died, after drinking carbolic acid.

Mary Stack, aged twenty-four, of Whitonsville, Mass., was found dead in a hotel. Escaping gas is given as the cause. An unidentified man was found in his room unconscious. Mary Searles, aged thirty-eight, drank wood alcohol and died in a hospital.

Henry Bunkey, aged twenty-seven, was found on the sidewalk with a fractured skull and died later.

Two men are dead as the result of falls, one in the power house of a street railway company and the other in a lodging house.

An eighteen-year-old girl unsuccessfully attempted suicide by swallowing carbolic acid, and a woman, thirty-two years old, hanged herself in a police station, but was cut down in time to save her life.

Desperate Man's Deed.

Florence, Ala., Dec. 30.—Calvin Carson, an old Confederate soldier, driven to desperation by want with his granddaughter, a helpless cripple, dependent upon him, gave the girl carbolic acid and cut his throat yesterday.

Fatal Coasting Accident.

St. Louis, Dec. 30.—While coasting down the levee on the ice formed on the river shore opposite Levee street, Mary Galleano, aged fifteen, and Mary Caffee, aged seventeen, broke through the ice and were drowned.

The Land of Tibet Is a Spot Accursed

The appearance of nature in this land is that of a spot accursed, says a writer who has traveled in Tibet. One seems to be on the shores of the Dead sea, where the towns of the plain had sunk under a fiery wave, and where desolation forever reigns, to mark an awful judgment; or as if the glowing hills of Pandemonium had been raised from their dreadful depths to sully the face of the earth with their most forbidding aspect. Great masses of crags rise in huge disarray, split in long ravines, and hurled into unutterable confusion. A searching loneliness broods over the scene, as if here, removed from the outside world, nature had built a refuge of penance for herself, a diorama grim, forbidding, and menacing. In whatever direction the eye wanders it rests upon leagues on leagues of barren and pebble-covered moor, contour of stones and rocky pinnacles, range behind range of snow-clad mountains, with glaciers glittering in the hollow of them—a weird and desolate scene, such as one imagines may exist on the antarctic continent. Never a tree is seen and scarcely a flower, except for a few months in the year. The more favored regions are inhabited by small herds of wild asses, antelope and yak, who manage to exist on the scrawny bush growth and coarse grasses in the sheltered nullahs and valleys, and who afford substance to a sinister and uncouth population.

The everyday life of the Tibetans is in keeping with the harsh and unromantic nature of their country. Of amusements there are but few, the male portion of the population spending what time is not engaged in manual labor in gambling, into which they enter with all the passion of devotees, risking their entire possessions and even their own persons on no worthier a pastime than guessing the number of stones which another may hold in his hands. Speaking of the social conditions of the country, a few words may be said concerning the state of woman in this region. Her social condition is pitiable in the extreme, far worse than the animals of her lord and master's herds, for they at least, with mercenary motive, are treated humanely. The servitude of woman is, in fact, the corner stone of society; from the moment of her birth until death fortunately relieves her sufferings she is condemned to a state infinitely more degrading than slavery. When one has viewed her horrible condition one can understand the little compunction which exists here regarding self-destruction, suicides causing greater reduction of the population than almost all other causes combined.

Humble Plants That Have Made History

Rather more than sixty years ago a tiny fungus—itself a plant—appeared in Ireland and fastened itself on the potato. Fostered by a cheerless summer, the fungus spread until the whole potato chop, the mainstay of the Irish, was ruined, and the resulting famine of 1845 stands out in history as a time of overwhelming trouble.

Its relief occupied the whole attention of the British ministry, and when the famine was over a quarter of the whole population lay slain by the fungus.

And this potato disease acted in two distinct ways on history. It had an immediate effect in helping the repeal of the corn laws and throwing the country open to free trade.

In the second place, it had a great and unforeseen effect on another continent, for there then started a stream of emigration across the Atlantic which has steadily continued.

At the biginning of the seventeenth century the English and the Dutch were rivals for the possession of a certain little island, Amboyna, in the East Indies, because of the cloves that grow upon it. At this date the production of cloves was extremely limited, and finally the Dutch massacred a small English colony established there. This aroused the bitter feeling in England against the Dutch, and, as a great historian tells us, furnished a popular way for two wars.

A sudden passion for tulips turned the heads of the usually placit Dutchmen in the seventeenth century, and the tulipomania is a well recognized event in Dutch domestic history.

It was a time when the desire to possess an uncommon tulip was sufficient to drive men to most extreme lengths of speculation, to cause the ruin of noble houses and to carry whole families to misery. In fact, so acute did the rage become that the Dutch government was obliged to step in with a heavy hand, and by stringent measures allay the fever of the tulip.

The tea plant was the "last straw" which brought about the independence of the United States, as we all know.

The poppy involved England in the opium war with China at the beginning of the reign of Queen Victoria. Though the war was an unjust one, yet it did ultimate good in opening up China to foreign influence and trade.

Sugar, cotton and tobacco have all influenced history, for these three plants were practically responsible for the slave trade of modern times.

Boom Days in the City of Winnipeg

Dan Rodgers, a well-known hotel man of Gretna, is in the city holidaying. Mr. Rodgers was one of Winnipeg's old-timers. In 1884 he was proprietor of the Victoria theater, and he hit upon the idea of selling beer on the side at 5 cents per glass. Hundreds flocked to his bar, and finally he defied the law and sold liquor openly without a license.

He was brought before the late Colonel Peebles, who was then magistrate, and fined $100 and costs of court for the offense. He smiled and said he could well afford it.

The fine did not put a stop to his operations, however; he continued and was "pulled" again and again, until his appearance in court became a daily occurrence.

"I would go and get a shave at Ed Kelly's barber shop every morning," he said to a reporter for the Telegram, "and then go down to the police court, whether I had got my summons or not. If I had not got it, I knew the policeman couldn't find me, and I didn't like to get him into trouble. You see.

"The last three months I had the Victoria theater I never missed a day but Sundays, but that I appeared at the police court. During that time I paid out $8,400 in fines."

"Did the business pay you?"

"Did I ever do anything that did not? I had the barrels running all day. The taps were never turned. We filled up the beer from pails; we could never have served our customers otherwise; it was simply a fright the business you could do here then on 5-cent drinks.

"I was a little foolish, too," he added, shaking his head. I might as well have had those $8,400 plunks in my pocket; but it was great fun to be able to defy the law and make money at it. Of course, my continual appearance at the court was as good as a page ad. in a paper, and better. Nobody ever came to Winnipeg who didn't come to drink with Dan Rodgers."

"You had a workingman's club here?"

"Yes, and that was a howler, too. I sold 5-cent beer to the members, and I soon had a membership of 4,000; all good drinkers and spenders, too, when I gave it up to go into the theater business. Those were good old days, and they were days when a man with brains could make money, and spend it, too."—Winnipeg Telegram.

BEST METHOD OF SMOKING.

One Who Knows Describes the Use of the Narghile.

A young man who journeys over the country with a dozen Cairo girls presenting miniature midways to the patrons of state fairs said the other day: "The narghile is the best instrument to smoke tobacco through provided you use it in the right way. Most people use it in the wrong way. They load it with tobacco and light up with a match, as though it was a pipe that they were smoking. This is incorrect, and the narghile, so abused, has an abominable taste and odor. The right way to use the narghile is first to dip your tobacco in water, squeeze the water out and place the soaked, damp mass in the pipe bowl. Then you take a lump of burning charcoal and set it on top of the wet tobacco and begin to smoke. The tobacco itself, you see, is not really alight; it's the charcoal that is alight. It is the burning charcoal that eats the tobacco up. This is the secret of narghile smoking. I learned it from an Egyptian girl in my employ. And a narghile smoked properly is delicious—makes, in fact, the very best smoke in the world."—Philadelphia Record.

Toy Monkeys Now the Fashion.

Go up the avenue any morning, or walk into Central Park or one of the public squares; and you will see a new toy for the children of the wealthy. No longer does a train of cars "like papa's, only smaller," appeal to the baby aristocrat. Express wagons have made their way to the east side hospitals, and even the miniature motor cars have had their day. Toy monkeys are the newest things for little boys. The children's playgrounds are peopled with the monkeys robed in scarlet serge. They are wonderfully natural, with eyes that roll, and the fur covers such pliable material that Jocko may be draped without injury. Even the eyes refuse to be gouged out for the edification of budding oculists. Two Fifth avenue toy shops are displaying many varieties of the monkeys. It may be suggested that an alleged dinner in Newport is responsible for fashionable folk taking up this toy.

Man is ever greater than his tools. The best self-help is helping others.

AGRICULTURE

Lima Bean Growing in California.

While the lima bean is grown in vegetable gardens for local or home use in nearly every state in the Union, its culture on an extensive scale as a commercial product is confined to California, says a report of the California station. In Ventura county, in the southwestern portion of the state, and in counties adjacent thereto, on the Pacific coast, between 40,000 and 45,000 acres are devoted to the lima bean industry.

The acreage is much smaller than in former years, due to extremely low prices prevailing prior to 1900, to three seasons of drought resulting in crop failure except on irrigated lands, and to the growing of sugar beets on large areas formerly devoted to beans.

The lima, which is a pole bean in other sections of the United States, is grown without poles or other support in the California "bean belt." The vines pile themselves along the rows and bloom and pod profusely unless checked by drought. The beans ripen during September; those grown farthest from the sea ripen first and cure more quickly when cut than those grown nearer the coast.

The crop is harvested by means of sleds with knives attached to the runners and drawn by horses or by the more modern wheel cutters. In from two to four weeks after cutting, the beans having cured, are thrashed, either by steam thrashing outfits which move from field to field, or by the method known as "tramping," which separates the beans by means of horses and carts or other vehicles driven over the vines previously piled on prepared earthen floors, the straw being constantly turned and moved with pitch forks. The latter method, while slower than the former, is said to be not more expensive if the weather is dry.

The average cost of production is in the neighborhood of $2.25 per cental. When properly cultivated, from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds can be produced per acre on good land in favorable seasons; in the best localities as high as 2,000 pounds per acre have been grown. The prices realized by the growers fluctuate considerably. The crops of last and the present season will probably average $4.00 per cental, yielding handsome profits.

Accurate statistics of production are not obtainable, but the estimated yield last season was 550,000 sacks of 80 pounds, and it is believed that this year's production will equal, if it does not exceed, that of last year.

Grasses in Porto Rico.

A government bulletin on Porto Rico says: Porto Rican cattle will not eat hay, as they have never been accustomed to it. Coarse green grass is available the entire year, and it is claimed that none other of the West Indies equals Porto Rico so far as this resource is concerned. Cattle or horses seldom receive any food other than grass. "Malojillo" and Guinea grass are the varieties principally depended upon. Either of these becomes permanent after once being planted. The former flourishes on the low alluvial lands, especially where there is considerable moisture, and the latter is found chiefly in the higher and cooler districts of the interior. There are numerous other native grasses upon which cattle depend more or less. We publish two illustrations relative to these grasses. The first shows a native at work with a long machete! the second shows the size of a bundle of this grass that retails at five cents.

Rate of Wheat Seeding.

A fertile soil will stimulate and support more tillering than a thin soil, so under usual conditions more seed should be put on a thin soil than on a fertile one. There are conditions under which an extra heavy seeding may be more desirable on a rich soil than the usual rate. Where the grain is inclined to lodge, very thick seeding will dwarf the stalk enough to lessen this damage very much. In the districts of light rainfall, the number of plants per square foot should be less than in a humid region, as a thick stand would suffer more than a thinner stand would when there was a lack of moisture in the soil. But in these localities the tillering is less and the growth of the plants smaller so the usual amount of seed is generally used.—Oklahoma Bulletin.

To Kill Morning Glory Vines.

From the Farmers' Review: In last week's Review I saw the question asked: "How can I kill the morning glory vines?" I wish to contribute three ways in which they have been killed in my own neighborhood:

To kill the morning glory vine: First, by plowing deep in August; second, by putting the ground in broom corn three successive years; third, a herd of good hungry swine will clear a piece of ground of the morning glory vine quicker than anything else, as they will dig and eat every root a foot or more in the ground.—Chas. E. Freeman, Champaign County, Illinois.

Now is a good time to take stock of what is on the farm and the cost and profits of operating during the past season.

HORTICULTURE

Orchard and Berry Notes.

From the Farmers' Review: Here in Central Illinois apple trees are usually set 30 to 35 feet apart each way, two rods being thought the best distance apart. There was a fair crop of apples here this year, and fair winter apples are selling at 50 to 75 cents per bushel wholesale, when hauled in by farmers. Small fruits are often set among apple trees and usually with advantage to both kinds of fruits. When starting fruit growing over twelve years old, I set all my berries among the trees, running all rows north and south and parallel to the tree rows. These berry plats all did well, and raspberries, currants and gooseberries seemed to be better for some shade. The finest currants and gooseberries I ever saw were grown in the partial shade of an apple and peach orchard, where the apples and peaches were planted together, the peaches to be cut out when room was needed by the apple trees. These trees and berries have been planted ten years and are still in fine shape. The peaches and berries have been much more profitable than the apples, the latter not having amounted to anything as yet. But with twelve years' experience I would not again set berry plants (except perhaps strawberries) among peach or plum, cherry or quince trees, these coming into bearing so soon that the berries are in the way before bearing many crops. Before most berry plants are in full bearing the trees mentioned need all the room. Among apple trees I would still set all kinds of berries, setting the first berry row eight feet from a row of trees, the rows running north and south.

In regard to the apple orchard written of in the Farmers' Review that was entirely killed by being plowed and cultivated in August, I have no personal knowledge, but the trees must have been rather old and have made practically no growth till that year. Then a good working of the soil caused every bud to start, making the whole tree tender and easily killed by zero weather. Perhaps the growth was hastened and kept up late by a fall like the present one. Today, the 16th of November, I gathered out of doors, roses, gaillardias, chrysanthemums and quite a bunch of ornamental bean blossoms.

Peach buds here are thought to be in very poor condition to stand the winter, and it is likely there will be no peaches in Central Illinois next year unless the winter proves to be a very mild one.—Frank Aikin, Macon County, Illinois.

Garden Note.

From the Farmers' Review: As the round-up is complete, excepting the rye, some 225 head of late cabbage and a bushel of turnips, we will tell the amount of the garden's produce. An acre of naturally thin clay soil, not yet well enriched, produced as follows: Rhubarb, in a poor situation, partly improved and partly old roots, out two and three years, 225 dozen bunches, six stalks to the bunch; gooseberries, out three years, yield 20 gallons; currants, out three years, Red Dutch and white variety, yield 18 gallons; strawberries, out two years, Jessie, Bubach and Haverland varieties, yield 19½ gallons; lettuce, improved Hanson, 30 large bunches; radishes, White Vienna and Long Scarlet, 50 large bunches; onions, common white sets, 50 large bunches; sage, out three years, improved, 2½ pounds dried leaves; peanuts, one-half gallon from five seeds; corn, Adams Early and Stowells Evergreen, 69 dozen ears; bunch beans, Jones Wax and Byers, 50 gallons; pole beans, Golden Cluster, 72 gallons; lima beans, King of the Garden (pole), 40 gallons hulled beans; tomatoes, Success mostly, New Imperial, New Stone and Matchless, 157½ gallons ripe tomatoes, 40 gallons green ones; muskmelons, strawberry, 90 fine ones; cabbages, Jersey Wakefield for early, flat Dutch and Drumhead for late, 143 heads (this doesn't include those out now). The above includes only the salable stuff. The cracked and otherwise defective tomatoes, muskmelons and cabbages were fed at once to the cow; the amount was considerable. From three rows of Adams Early corn, each row 120 feet long, thirty dozen salable ears were gathered; corn planted the 14th of May, first roasting ears the 20th of July, the last the 7th of August. Keep an account of the stuff gathered from the garden next year.—Emma Clearwaters.

Testimony for Spraying.

At a horticultural meeting an Illinois fruit grower said: I had a little orchard of sixty trees that were ten years old, and we never had secured a plum from that orchard. Every plum rotted last year, and this year we sprayed three times with the Bordeaux mixture and Paris green, and we produced a good crop of plums on the trees that we sprayed, while on the trees that we did not spray the plums all rotted, just the same as they had before; in fact, we got so disgusted with them that we cut out most of those trees, and only saved about eight or ten trees to experiment on, and now we wish we had them back again.

Farmers will do well to give the question of fuel for the future some consideration. The wood lot should be carefully looked after.

Help for the Woman Without Ideas.

A charming gown for afternoon autumn wear is of soft blue wool veiling, trimmed with bands of rich guipure lace dyed to match the material in exact shade. There are two box pleats on each side of the skirt, narrow at the waist, graduating to the knees, and ending in a graceful flare at the foot. The Eton jacket, with narrow pointed front, is also trimmed with the blue lace, and the sleeves of the veiling are elbow length, and finished by full white chiffon undersleeves, drawn into a band of the lace at the wrist; a most effective completion to this smart toilette is a white duchess lace collar falling over the shoulders and reaching in points almost to the belt in front. A hat of white tulle heavily trimmed with clusters of red salvia blooms, makes an exquisitely tasteful autumn afternoon outfit.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, and in the end I was cured by it. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health."—Miss Alice Bailey, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The symptoms of inflammation and disease of the ovaries are a dull throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with occasional shooting pains. The region of pain sometimes shows some swelling.

Rheumatism?

WHY SUFFER LONGER?

RHEUMO

The latest scientific medical discovery of the age, is a guaranteed cure for rheumatism, lumbago, sprains, stiff joints, etc. RHEUMO is a powerful liniment that penetrates immediately, affecting the tissues that surround the large joints, also attacks the ligaments, tendons and muscles.

HENRY H. ROBERTS, for ten years a clerk at the West Hotel Drug Store, says:

"I was confined to my bed for two weeks with lumbago. A physician prescribed for me, but I received no relief from his medicine. RHEUMO was recommended by a friend, and it affords me pleasure to state that after using one bottle I was up and felt as well as ever. RHEUMO is certainly a wonderful liniment, and I shall always say a good word for your remedy."

EMPEROR'S KINDLY ACT.

Austria's Ruler Has a Kind Heart—ave Protection to a Widow.

Whatever his faults, it cannot be denied that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has a kind heart. Not long ago the widow of a certain colonel, being by the rules of the service, unentitled to a pension, had an audience of the emperor-king to beg him to grant her one as an act of grace.

His majesty granted her request and graciously dismissed her. Then some candid friend in the anteroom turned the smiles of the widow into the wanness of despair by gratuitously informing her that, as the sovereign had not attached his signature to her petition, this was as good as dismissal. She, therefore, burst into such a paroxysm of weeping that his majesty came from the audience room to see what was wrong. When he discovered how matters stood, he ordered a thousand gulden be given to the widow from his privy purse, and, for the benefit of his candid friend and others like him, gave (after the manner of the Eastern caliph) utterance to what may pass into the language as a proverb: "An emperor's word needs not the confirmation of his signature."

Popular in Iowa.

Grand View, Iowa, Dec. 28th.—The most complete satisfaction is expressed in this district over results obtained recently by using Dodd's Kidney Pills for those complaints resulting from diseased Kidneys. This satisfaction finds frequent expression in words. People who have been cured seem to take pleasure in telling of it. Take what Mrs. Lydia Parker says, for example:

"I was troubled with Back Ache," says Mrs. Parker. "And all the time when I was stooping over a stitch would take me in the back, and I could not straighten up for a while.

"I sent and got a couple of boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and before I had finished taking the first, the stitch had gone, and it has not been back since."

Other people here have had similar experiences with Dodd's Kidney Pills and their popularity is steadily on the increase.

Molting.

Molting period generally lasts from July to December. The old faded feathers become deficient in the nitrogenous and mineral matter that compose them and are cast off.

The molting season may be shortened so as to cover a period of but six to ten weeks.

To do this and to bring about an early molt breed from those pullets, or hens rather, which molt the earliest and most rapidly and which prove your earliest winter layers.

During the molting season give the fowls the following care: Feed systematically and scientifically. Provide plenty of good drinking water, given fresh twice a day, in a drinking vessel that is kept clean and in the shade. If fowls are confined give plenty of shade and scratching material in a cool, airy place. Provide plenty of good grit and ground oyster shells. If they have no grass run provide clover meal for mixing in the morning mash. Provide plenty of road dust and see that the hens use it. Be sure and keep down the lice. Provide charcoal. Keep the hens healthy and condition powders are not necessary, but use them twice a week if the hens show the need of it. Feed a variety and only all that they will eat up clean.

For a morning feed take one quart of coarse corn meal, one pint of good beef meal, one quart of wheat bran and one quart of white middlings and one quart of ground oats; mix thoroughly. Take one quart of clover meal which has been scalded the evening before by enough boiling water to wet the whole and left to steam and stir the clover and clover tea into the mash until it is thoroughly mixed and feed to your flock.

Increase or diminish this amount of feed according to the size of the flock.

In this mash every other morning stir in while dry one tablespoon of sulphur to every twenty-five hens. Stir in charcoal every other morning. Every other morning omit the quart of middlings and substitute oil meal one quart. The oil meal and the sulphur will aid in hastening the molt and are needed in the composition of the new feathers. In the evening feed whole grain, oats and barley, which are flesh and bone forming; rotate this with corn and wheat. Use charcoal as a corrective for bowel trouble and as a preventive of indigestion. Use linseed meal to loosen the feathers.

As feathers contain lime, sulphur, oil and nitrogen; clover meal and beef meal or a run in a clover field among the grasshoppers is a necessity to produce rich, brilliant-colored feathers. Pea meal and sunflower seed are rich in nitrogen.

Corn helps to hasten the molt; wheat is rich in nitrogen. An all-round ration is necessary to produce healthy birds, and only healthy, vigorous birds on plenty of food rich in nitrogen, as beef meal, corn meal, clover meal, sunflower seed and linseed meal, can product glossy, rich colored plumage.—W. E. Dean, in American Poultry Journal.

Popularity of Incubators.

The great increase in the use of incubators is a matter worthy of special note. Poultrymen generally are realizing the advantage of using incubators found that thousands of fanciers have adopted the incubator as a more satisfactory hatcher than the hen. They are made in different sizes and capacities to fill the needs of both the large and the small breeder. An immense amount of time and thought has been devoted to incubator construction and wonderful strides toward perfection have been made during the past few years. Manufacturers have such confidence in their machines that they are willing and anxious to sell them on trial and risk the machine and the chances of a sale in the hands of amateurs who never before saw an incubator. The result is that thousands of them are being sold and the business this season bids fair to figure up to an almost incredible amount. The old prejudice against incubators is fast disappearing as a result of improved machines and the unqualified success of breeders with them. Nothing counts like facts before one's eyes, and in the case of the incubator the evidence of this character is overwhelming. Incubator chicks properly raised will make just as hardy, vigorous, healthy fowls as will those hatched under hens, and it is a common thing to see them win the best prizes in the show room. The fact of the matter is that a poultryman who pretends to do any business at all cannot afford to ignore the incubator and brooder. They are practically necessities if we wish to get the most from our work. It is well to bear in mind that while old methods are good ones, the world moves and progress is the watchword all along the line. Twentieth century methods count in the poultry business the same as they do in other lines of trade, and it is best to keep up with the procession.

Fowls Need the Open Air.

Fowls should not be forced to exposure in cold winter weather, neither should they be closely confined in over-heated houses. There is a proper medium and ideal condition between compelling them to roost in the trees and keeping them all the time in warmed houses. They need a certain amount of liberty in the open air.

The Thorough Milking of Cows.

The importance of thoroughly and effectually milking cows so as to remove every drop of milk from the udder during the milking process is frequently overlooked or not fully understood. Omission to do this not only very obviously causes a reduction in the quantity of milk obtained, but what is not so generally recognized, it results in the production of milk of a poorer quality than would be the case if the udder were thoroughly stripped and relieved of its last drop of milk. The result of numerous milking experiments in regard to this question are available to show that the milk, as taken from the cow, is not of an average composition—that is to say, that the first drawn milk is abnormally poor in fat content; whilst the quality of the milk improves as the process of milking continues, the last drawn milk being richest in butter fat, containing a much higher percentage than a sample of normal milk. Whereas the first drawn milk may have as low a fat percentage as 1.2 or 1.5, the last pint withdrawn from the cow may contain as much as 6 or 7 per cent of fat.

It is evident from this that unless the strippings up to the last drop are included in the milk, the latter will contain less butter fat than it should do, if the milking operations were satisfactorily carried out. To the dairy farmer who produces butter, this means a decreased butter yield, but this point is also of great importance to milk dealers. Although in average dairy herds in this country the mixed milk of the whole herd comes up to a fair standard, yet the thorough milking of the cows so as to include the last drop in the udder is a safeguard to some extent against the quality of the milk falling below standard requirements.

Apart from the reduction of the yield and the quality of the milk by incompletely milking the cows, this slovenly practice in the case of heifers and young cows, whose milk secretion has as yet not reached its maximum limit, involves a deterioration of their milk yielding qualities, or at any rate prevents a full development of the latter in succeeding lactation periods. Although the milk-yielding capacity is primarily an inherited quality, yet to some extent it depends on other factors, one of which is the stimulation of the udder by means of the milking process.

The greater the stimulation is, the more beneficially will the development of the milk organs be influenced. Hence thorough and complete milking of heifers and young cows is especially to be desired as tending to improve their mild-yielding qualities; whilst if the milking process is carried out in a careless and perfunctory manner, the opposite effect results in that it deteriorates the milk-yielding qualities to a certain extent. This question receives a great deal of attention by some of the dairymen in different countries. I have known of some instances where the operation of milking was continued in the case of heifers and young cows, especially the former, in their first lactation period for some time after all the milk has been drawn, solely with the view of stimulating the udder. With a view of developing the milking qualities and to increase the milk yield in future lactation periods, it is further desirable to prolong the first few lactation period of a young cow as much as possible, within reasonable limits, of course, and not to allow them to dry off too soon, as this has an adverse effect on the quantity of the future milk yields in succeeding lactation periods. This applies only to dairy cattle of course.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Warm Water for Cows.

The Germans have been trying the effect of warm water on milk production. They found that while the cows drank on an average 73 pounds of warm water per day, they drank but 63 pounds of cold water. The cows that had the warm water consumed three-quarters of a pound of food more daily, but there was a smaller quantity of dry food required for each quart of milk.

The increase in water drank was accompanied by an increase of water in the milk, with no increase of total solids. Here is a good opportunity to speculate on increased metabolism and assimilation of food owing to the warm water, but in such cases it is better to let the cows do the talking, there is less of having to revise theories, but there is not much doubt that on the whole cold water does not assist in butter or milk production.

Corn Meal vs. a Balanced Ration.

The Maryland Experiment Station went into an extended experiment to know the comparative effect of feeding corn meal or a balanced ration to cows. It was found that on the balanced ration the cows keep more healthy, in much better breeding condition, give more milk and are in much better condition for the next year's work.

The effect of the corn meal ration was the same on all the cows, differing only in degree. With one cow, corn meal caused her to dry off, remaining so for three months before calving. This leads us to wonder if much of the shy breeding often complained of may not be due to the feeding of an unbalanced ration.

In These Automobile Days.

The earnest young man in the shabby clothes spent several hours every day in the reference department of the library, and, finally, one of the attendants spoke to him.

"You seem to be studying hard?" suggested the attendant.

"I am," replied the man. "I spent a month in a machine shop, and now I am reading up on machinery."

"Expect to invent something?"

"Oh, no."

"Perhaps you aim to get sufficient theoretical knowledge to outstrip the other men, and become a foreman, or superintendent, or something of that sort?"

"Not at all."

"Does the study of machinery fascinate you?"

"No; I find it very tiresome."

"Then, what is your aim?"

"I'm studying to be a coachman."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Moon Blind," Said the Stranger."

Flagman Durham, of the Dudley station of the Pennsylvania railroad's Camden annex district, had just left the flag house to flag an approaching train, early one morning recently, when he saw a man sitting on the track, apparently asleep. He hustled the stranger from the track just as the train passed. The man refused to give his name. He was perfectly sober, and said to the watchman:

"I didn't know where I was sitting. I'm a stranger here. When I visited the town last night I was attacked with 'moon blind,' and couldn't see. I wandered after that, believing I would recover my sight."

He was cared for, and, strange to state, when the moon disappeared, he says he partly regained his sight, and went on rejoicing.—Philadelphia Record.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

ARE NEVER WITHOUT PERUNA IN THE HOUSE FOR CATARRHAL DISEASES.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

UNDER date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past 25 years.

"Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"She also was passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life. In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for these wonderful remedies.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of 25 years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me.

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Success to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh."

John O. Atkinson,
Box 272, Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safe-guard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

WEEKLY MARKET LETTER.

The following letter furnished by the Edwards, Wood & Co. Commission Merchants, 110 Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis, 310 Board of Trade, Duluth.

The market the past week has been interrupted by a two day's holiday and of course affected with the usual holiday dullness at home and abroad. The statistics for the week are of mixed effect but chiefly bullish. There a small increase in the visible supply but the figures are still some 9,000,000 bushels under those of last year. There was another large decrease in the amount on ocean passage which is now about 23,000,000 bushels, or 10,000,000 bushels less than at this time last year. Western primary receipts last week were fair but for this week showed a sudden drop which we predicted ten days ago. Primary receipts for today are only 487,000 bushels. Price changes have been very small as we expected at this time. May wheat is now at the same price it was a week ago and two weeks ago. A feature of the week is the selling out of Patten's line of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels of May wheat. As we told you some time ago the existence of this line was the chief obstacle to the advance of prices by the leading long interests which feared too much company, and the closing out of this line leaves the market in a very much better position to advance. The final government report on the crops of 1902 is out. It makes the crop of winter and spring wheat almost exactly what as long ago as May and June we estimated it would be, viz: 670,000,000 bushels. The report makes the area of winter wheat, and also spring wheat, about the same as has been estimated respectively 28,581,000 and 17,621,-0.0 acres. The report may be construed as bearish because it makes the crop larger than it was popularly supposed to be during the last three months, but it shows a crop 78,000,000 bushels less than that grown in the year 1901, and the difference in the visible supply and amount on passage between this year and last will easily make the amount 100,000,000 bushels. We think wheat is cheap enough and if the market sells off on this report, as it may do temporarily, we strongly advice purchases. Area and yield of corn and oats agrees very closely with the last government report. The yield of corn is made 2,523,000,000 bushels; of oats 987,842,000 bushels; of flax 29,295,000 bushels; barley 135,-00,0,000 bushels; rye 33,630,000 bushels; potatoes 28,633,000 bu; hay 50,857,000 tons.

Yours Truly,
Edwards, Wood & Co.

The Chicago Tribune

a newspaper for bright and intelligent people. It is made up to attract people who think. It is not neutral or colorless, constantly trimming in an endeavor to please both sides, but it is independent in the best sense of the word. It has pronounced opinions and is fearless in expressing them, but it is always fair to its opponents.

Matters of national or vital public interest get more space in THE TRIBUNE than in any other paper in the West.

For these reasons it is the newspaper you should read during the forthcoming political campaign.

THE TRIBUNE'S financial columns never mislead the public.

Its facilities for gathering news, both local and foreign, are far superior to those of any other newspaper in the West.

It presents the news in as fair a way as possible, and lets its readers form their opinions.

While it publishes the most comprehensive articles on all news features, if you are busy the "Summary of THE DAILY TRIBUNE" published daily on the first page gives you briefly all the news of the day within one column.

Its sporting news is always the best, and its Sunday Pink Sporting Section is better than any sporting paper in the country.

Some of our exchanges say that festive wire fence swindler is already abroad in the land, and our farmer friends had better look out. His game is to sell a bill of fence wire at a ridiculously low price, and offers to throw in a fancy gate if the victim puts up $10 or $20 cash—and that is the last seen of him. They say the game usually works. When dealing with strangers you had better be careful. It is always the best policy to buy of your old established firms. It pays in the long run.

One Good Vein At Least.

Fergus Falls, Minn.—C. S. Marden, county attorney of Clay county, was down from Barnsville today, and gives the latest details regarding the coal situation. Some of the accounts have been exaggerated, but there is certainly one vein of coal of very good quality not far from the village. This vein is about six feet in thickness, and the land has been leased by the company of which the late D. M. Sabin was president. The same company has secured mineral leases on about 2,000 acres of land in the immediate vicinity and is supposed to have secured everything that is likely to prove valuable. It has sunk one shaft two miles from the point where the vein has been struck, but found no coal and is now sinking shafts closer in order to ascertain in what direction it runs.

Tomorrow Night.

An entertainment will be given in the Odd Fellows' hall tomorrow (Friday) evening by Bob and Eva McGinley. The following is taken from the Buffalo, N. Northwest News

TOO MUCH HARD WORK.

Teachers Break Down Very Early in Life.

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—The fortieth annual meeting of the Minnesota Educational association will close this afternoon. Secretary Bryant estimates that 12,000 teachers have attended the convention. An attack on summer schools by Supt. J. K. McBroom of Elgin was one of the features of the general session yesterday afternoon. Mr. McBroom's point was that teachers were working so hard anyway that they broke down early in lift, and one reason for this was that so much professional study was required. Teachers should do less work outside the school room, and the vacation should be devoted to rest and not to study in summer schools.

Mr. McBroom's ideas encountered some vigorous opposition among the teachers, and the point was made that professional study helps both the teacher and the schools.

Dr. David Starr Jordan made an instructive address in the evening.

In the section meetings there was an interesting discussion of coeducation. Most of the teachers in coeducational colleges approved it heartily. Papers also urged shortening the time required to complete the educational system, urging a minimum age limit for teachers, and advocating county truant officers.

ENGINEER KILLED IN A FOG.

Collision in the Yards of the Great Northern.

Minneapolis, Jan. 3.—James M. Olds, locomotive engineer employed by the Great Northern Railway company, met a sudden and horrible death as a result of a collision in the Union yards of the Great Northern railway yesterday morning. The property damage amounts to many thousand dollars. The accident is one for which no one can be held responsible. It was due to a dense fog—so dense that the trainmen could not see a rod ahead. The collision was between a transfer train and a long string of Great Northern freights which was being pulled by two engines. Both trains were going at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. The force was sufficiently great to practically telescope the engine proper and tender. Engineer Olds was thrown from his seat with great force. He was caught between the tender and boiler and was crushed to death. The steam gauge was broken and the unfortunate engineer's body was frightfully scalded.

HE CAN'T GET LOST.

Arrested After Being a Fugitive Eighteen Months.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 3.—Fred Bauer, indicted by the Winona county grand jury for assault about a year and a half ago, was arrested yesterday afternoon in this city by chief Schoenig of the police department. Bauer worked on a farm for a man by the name of Julius Hoppe. All went well until Bauer quit his job, and when the time came for a final settlement there was a difficulty, with the result that Bauer slugged Hoppe, and although it was a year and a half ago Hoppe has not yet entirely recovered from the wounds. The grand jury indicted Bauer, but he slipped away and could not be located. He came here a few days ago from Milwaukee to spend the holidays, and was on the way to the depot to return to Milwaukee when arrested. His trial will take place this month.

MRS. CLARK DEAD.

Mother of Million Dollar Baby Passes Away at Butte.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 3.—Mrs. William A. Clark, Jr., died at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Mabel Foster Clark was born twenty-three years ago near Pittsburg, Pa., the daughter of John R. Foster, who came to Butte nearly seventeen years ago. She was married to William A. Clark, Jr., the youngest son of Senator W. A. Clark. Her baby boy, for whom she gave her life, was born Dec. 2. Mrs. Clark was a young woman of rare grace and qualities of mind and character which endeared her to a legion of friends.

MUST KILL FATHER.

Queer Hallucination of an Amherst Man.

Stevens Point, Wis., Jan. 3.—Suffering with a mental hallucination that the ghost of a man for the murder of whom he had been tried and acquitted constantly appeared before him and told him that he must kill his father and mother before the visits would be stopped, John Lombard was declared insane at Amherst and taken to the Northern hospital for insane at Oshkosh. Lombard was arrested after the death of Ole Ellefson in a saloon in Amherst in 1897. He had a quarrel with Ellefson.

STEALING OF HAY.

Sensation at Miller Caused by Arrest of a Leading Business Man.

Miller, S. D., Jan. 3. — Svep Pauly and one Joseph were arrested and tried before Judge Watterbury on the charge of stealing a load of hay. Pauly has the largest furniture store and undertaking business in this part of the state. He was found guilty and fined $40. Joseph was fined $10. He will appeal the case to a higher court.

Charged With Burglary.

Clinton, Iowa, Dec. 3. — Frank Pierson of Delmar, this county, and John Connors of Sioux City, have been arrested, charged with having broken into the residence of Dr. E. C. McMeel and the Davis general store of that place. They secured valuables to the amount of $200, it is alleged. The articles were found in their room. They were brought here and bound over to the next grand jury.

Granite, Not Coal.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 3.—The hopes of Buffalo county that it had a coal mine is blasted, the product proving to be blue granite, which burns when pulverized only. A bed of it was found on the farm of J. Shep.

HAMLINE SECURES $300,000 FUND.

Methodist College Enriched by Big Endowment Started by J. J. Hill.

St. Paul, Jan. 1. — Hamline university has been enriched by an endowment of $300,000. This endowment is the result of a generous offer made the university by James J. Hill three and a half years ago. At that time he offered an endowment of $50,000 provided a sufficient additional sum be subscribed to make a total of $300,000. Subscriptions have at last been made to reach this magnificent sum, nearly all of it being secured within the limits of Minnesota. The endowment now secured will enable Hamline university to vastly increase its efficiency and size, and make it one of the largest institutions of its kind in the Northwest.

HOEFFLER GETS DAMAGES

Because Northfield Would Not Allow Him to Present "Jesse James."

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 1. — John Hoeffler, manager of the theatrical company now touring Minnesota with a production of the melodrama entitled "Jesse James, the Bandit Hero," has recovered the sum of $250 from the city of Northfield, Minn., which he alleges are damages resulting from the refusal of the municipal authorities to allow his play to be produced in that city. The judgment was allowed on the grounds that this amount was lost by Mr. Hoeffler through the preliminary arrangements made for the performance. The city of Northfield is said to have entered practically no defense.

LOST ON LAKE PEPIN.

Small Boy Is Badly Frozen Before He Is Rescued.

Pepin, Wis., Jan. 1. — Simon Norstrom, a small boy, had a narrow escape from freezing to death at Lake Pepin Sunday night. While skating on the lake he became lost in a blinding snowstorm. With a small handsail he had allowed himself to be blown far out on the lake. In trying to reach shore he fell over a reef and was rendered unconscious. While in that condition his hands, feet and face were badly frozen. Guided by the noise of a Burlington freight engine he finally reached the shore, where some boys assisted him to reach home. He will be confined to the house for a month.

MOVE PLANT TO ST. PAUL.

American Can Company Will Quit Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Jan. 1. — March 1 the American Can company will dismantle and close up its plant here, distributing its machinery and other manufacturing material among its other plants in various parts of the country. Hamilton, Ohio, and St. Paul will get most of the material and will do work hitherto done in Milwaukee. The closing of the plant will mean the removal from the city of many mechanics, who have been offered and have accepted positions at other plants of the company, who, with their families, will leave for these points as soon as the local plant is shut down.

HIS HEAD SPLIT OPEN.

Peddler Fatally Assaulted With a Hatchet.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 1. — Edward Strauss, a peddler, was fatally assaulted at an early hour yesterday at his home in the town of Greenfield, three miles south of Milwaukee. The weapon used was a hatchet. The victim's head was split open in three places, exposing the brain. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive for the tragedy. Joseph Jordie, a farm hand living in the vicinity, is being detained pending an investigation.

POSTOFFICE ABANDONED

Because No One Will Accept an Appointment as Postmaster.

Grand Rapids, Wis., Jan. 1. — The postoffice at Oleson has been discontinued for the reason that the postmaster resigned and no one else could be secured to take his place. The former postmaster is a camp cook by trade, and has left the office in charge of his sister during his frequent absences, but recently the sister was married and moved away, leaving the office without an attendant.

FARMER FALLS DEAD.

His Body Remains Undiscovered for Two Days.

Ridgeland, Wis., Jan. 1. — Ole Rolstad, a farmer near this place, fell dead in the road Saturday while on his way to his brother's place, one and one-half miles distant. His failure to return home caused no alarm and his body was not discovered until Sunday evening, when his brother chanced to pass over the same road.

TWIN CITIES TO OSAGE.

New Route of the Great Western Almost Ready.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 1. — Within the next two weeks the Chicago Great Western road will discontinue its through train service on the line from Winona to Osage, and will install train service over the new line through Rochester from the Twin Cities to Osage, running a stub from Rochester to Winona.

News of the State.

RAILROADS OF MINNESOTA.

The Year's Business Reviewed in State Railway Commission's Annual Report.

The annual report of the state railroad and warehouse commission, just issued from the press, makes formal announcement of the new tax sheet agreed on by the commission and the accounting officers of the railroads, which will go into effect the coming year. In introducing the subject it is noted that as usual the Great Northern and its proprietary lines failed to make their report of interstate earnings on business carried into or through Minnesota. This much reduced the showing made for Minnesota earnings in the report. However, with the new tax sheet the commission hopes to arrive at accurate reports in the future. This sheet includes numerous items which the researches of the public examiner have discovered some of the companies were not reporting for taxation. The items are all named in detail, and the method of computing is laid down, so that there will be no means of escape in the future.

Resources All Itemized.

The form comprises the following:

Freight Earnings—All business local to the state and interstate to be divided on the actual mileage over which business is carried.

Demurrage—To be localized.

Switching—To be localized. Gross amount received for switching to be returned by company receiving same. Where switching charge is a part of the through rate and is paid by the carrier assuming the same, the sum so paid may be deducted from the amount of freight received by that company.

Storage—To be localized.

Wharfage and Dockage—To be localized.

Passenger Earnings — All business local to the state and interstate to be divided on the actual mileage over which business is carried.

Mileage and Interchangeable Mileage—On same percentage as passenger business in Minnesota bears to the passenger business of the whole line.

Excess Baggage—On same percentage as passenger business in Minnesota bears to the passenger business of the whole line.

Baggage Storage—To be localized.

Sleeping Cars—All business local to the state and interstate to be divided on the actual mileage over which business is carried.

Chair Cars, Parlor Cars and Observation Cars — All business local to the state and interstate to be divided on the actual mileage over which business is carried.

News Agencies—On same percentage as passenger business in Minnesota bears to the passenger business of the whole line.

Mails—All business to be divided on road mileage basis of routes established by United States postoffice department.

Express—Where express companies pay railroad companies a given figure per mile of road that figure must apply to the road mileage in Minnesota. Where express companies pay railroad companies a percentage of their gross earnings, or at a given figure per month, the division should be on a basis of what the state's loaded express car mileage bears to the whole of the loaded express car mileage.

Telegraph—To be localized.

Rents From Buildings, Yards, Sites, Etc.—To be localized.

Rent for Hire of Equipment (including rents from chartered cars, trains and locomotives; car mileage or per diem charges received from interchange of freight and passenger cars, working equipment and rolling stock of all kinds)—Balance only to be divided on the basis of what the mileage operated in Minnesota bears to the whole of the road mileage operated.

Elevators—To be localized.

Station Privileges—To be localized.

Weighing—To be localized.

Milk—All business local to the state and interstate to be divided on the actual mileage over which business is carried.

Other Items—"Other items" to mean items not included in the above schedule and to be so itemized in tax returns.

Note—Bridge toll arbitraries paid by railroad companies to other corporations to be deducted before earnings are divided for taxation.

Several of these items are now in controversy between the railroads and Public Examiner Johnson, who is trying to make the companies pay what they owe for the past five years. Back of that period the taxes are outlawed.

New Bills Suggested.

Legislation recommended by the commission includes the following:

A statute prohibiting railroad companies from removing stations or closing them without the consent of the commission.

An act giving the commission power to order the erection and maintenance of interlocking plants.

A law imposing a severe penalty for car sweeping or otherwise removing grain from cars without authority.

Statistical features of the report are interesting. The mileage for all Minnesota railroads in the state is now 7,165.93, an increase during the year of 70.30. The mileage of terminal and transfer railroads is 86.94, an increase of 6.38 miles.

The gross earnings of the entire systems were $280,118,790, on which an average tax of .0307 was paid.

Three small roads showed deficits. They were the Minnesota & North Wisconsin, the Albert Lea & Southern, and the Winona Bridge railway.

The total capital stock of the roads entering Minnesota is $686,782,444; and funded debt $891,189,484. The increase during the year was $83,225,768.

In reference to the car shortage, the report says that while the railroads greatly increased their equipment this year, the increase of traffic was still greater and the shortage more pronounced than ever.

Accidents to persons in Minnesota resulting from the movement of trains during the year were: Passengers, 7 killed, 151 injured; trainmen, 34 killed, 316 injured; switchmen and yardmen, 4 killed, 37 injured; other employes, 13 killed, 43 injured; trespassers, 71 killed, 93 injured; non-trespassers, 10 killed, 50 injured; total number of people killed by the roads in the state during 1902 was 139, and 680 injured, as against 120 killed and 846 injured during 1901.

Figures for Two Years.

Summaries of statistics for Minnesota roads for the past two years are as follows:

	1901.	1902.	Increase
Gross earnings	$42,459,262	$51,868,192	$9,408,930
Operating expenses	25,703,735	28,007,439	2,303,704
Net incomes	16,755,527	23,860,753	7,105,226
Dividends paid entire lines	35,360,066	44,874,775	9,514,709
Surplus, aggregate	66,288,832	85,886,821	19,597,989
Taxes paid, Minnesota	1,441,548	1,659,071	217,522

STATE TEACHERS ARE HONORED.

Many Life Professional Certificates Held by Minnesotans.

The state department of public instruction has issued 177 life professional teachers' certificates since its establishment. There were 56 life certificates issued before 1894, and 56 have been issued since Nov. 1, 1898.

During the last two years 29 college or university graduates have received life professional certificates, and 251 graduates have received limited certificates, 112 for five years, 133 for two years and 7 for one year. Two life professional certificates have been issued on examination. Forty-one limited professional certificates of the first grade have been issued on examination, and 26 limited certificates of the second grade.

The diplomas of 127 graduates of state normal schools of other states have been indorsed as five, two for one-year certificates, and the diplomas of 42 graduates of the department of pedagogy at the University of Minnesota have been indorsed as life certificates. Life professional certificates are granted only to graduates of colleges who have spent several years as successful teachers of several years' experience, who have passed examinations covering the branches taught in a college course.

The graduates of colleges or universities who have received life certificates since Nov. 1, 1898, are the following:

Clara E. Bailey, A. F. Bechdolt, Lillian Burlingame, S. A. Challman, H. M. Coldren, L. P. Cravens, R. C. Dewey, H. R. Edwards, Fannie P. Farnsworth, A. N. Farmer, Mary G. Fanning, Mrs. Catherine F. Foster, Flora J. Frost, Gertrude Gibbs, Chestine Gowdy, M. J. Griffin, Charles E. Guthrie, Mary E. Higgins, H. S. Hillebee, W. H. Hollands, Dora M. Jones, Joseph Jorgens, C. F. Koehler, William F. Kunze, Irwin Leviston, R. L. H. Lord, John C. Miller, Andrew Nelson, Ellen A. Norton, C. A. Patchin, Eugene M. Phillips, Katherine Roney, Alexander M. Rowe, William H. A. Rutherford, Joseph H. Seal, W. F. F. Selleck, Fred S. Shepherd, W. A. Shoemaker, Edith M. Shortt, Charles Alden Smith, William E. Stewart, I. A. Thorson, James A. Tormey, V. E. Wasson, Henry E. White, A. J. Woolman, G. W. NEW COUNTIES PROCLAIMED.

The Governor Declares for Columbia County, but Courts Must Decide.

Gov. Van Sant has declared the creation of two new counties. His proclamation announces that Clearwater county has been set off from Beltrami and Columbia county from Polk. As far as the executive is concerned the contest is over, but it will immediately be carried to the courts.

The governor acted on advice of Attorney General Douglas, who held that Columbia carried rather than Nelson. However, he is not sure as to the validity of a law which permits four propositions to be submitted when the individual voter is restricted from voting on more than one of them. In his opinion submitted to the governor, he says:

"To deprive a voter, where no question of the right to have his vote counted or to have it given some effect and force upon each of the propositions submitted, it seems to me is beyond the power of the legislature.

FURIOUS GALE ON THE COAST.

Feared That Shipping Will Suffer Considerably.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 30.—Another furious gale has been raging here for the past thirty-six hours and has caused much damage along the coast line. It is feared that the shipping will suffer considerably. The Allan line steamer Peruvian passed Cape Race yesterday morning but she has not yet been able to make port because of the storm and fog. She has on board 300 Canadian cattle which were shipped at Halifax because of the embargo against American ports.

ELEVEN VILLAGES IN RUINS.

Earthquake Disaster in Russian Asia Proves Greater Than First Reported.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—Later advices from Ashkabad, Russian Turkestan, say that in the country around Andijan eleven villages are in ruins as a result of the recent earthquake and that fully 6,000 houses have been destroyed in these scattered settlements. The villages are sufficiently provisioned for some time, but the government will be obliged to supply the wants of the working people at Andijan until the spring.

JUST A MAN AND A WOMAN.

By EDWARD E. WEBB.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The small cabin of logs looked eyrie enough high on the knoll, scarcely discernible amid the torrents of rain that enveloped it as with a mist. The fringe of trees between it and the river wept in sympathy with the mournful soughing of the wind through their tops. The patter on leaves, roof and river steadily increased in volume until the fall partook of the nature of a deluge. The stream, swollen by heavy spring rains, flowed swiftly between its dripping banks and on the opposite shore a rude blockhouse and barracks were dimly outlined against a sky almost as black.

From out the gloom on the fort side a small boat emerged. Although pointed directly across it bore more down than over the stream. For a minute the solitary occupant permitted it to take its course, then, apparently becoming conscious of the digression pointed the bark up stream at an angle of forty-five degrees. After much effort the prow stuck in the soft clay and a slight water-proof-enveloped and hooded form arose, and that the figure was feminine was evidenced as skirts were raised and a girl stepped to the shore. Tying the boat she passed quickly through the fringe of trees to the cabin.

Grasping a cudgel she shattered the solitary window and after an instant's hesitation and some difficulty, entered. Once inside she drew from the folds of an inner garment a small candle and matches. With these she made a light and pressed the waxen taper into the yielding earth.

A stalwart fellow of perhaps five-and-twenty years lay on a thin bed of straw, his hands and feet manacled to iron stakes. As the feeble light waxed penetrating it disclosed that he wore the fatigue uniform of a cavalryman of the United States army. Evidently it has been no easy task to thus spike him to mother earth, for his face showed an ugly gash and he appeared a man who loved not inactivity.

The girl's face was pale; her large blue eyes were dilated and her full red lips trembled. For an instant she stood as though forgetful of her errand, then sank to the straw and drew from the folds of her dress a large coarse file. Intense femininity showed in every action of her graceful, almost childish figure and she smiled apologetically, almost indiscernibly, as she pushed the dank, blonde hair, which moisture had robbed of its waves, back into the recesses of her hood and vigorously applied the edge of the file to the man's chains. Neither spoke. A slip of one of the tender hands brought blood to the tip of one of the white fingers and without a word the man took the stained digit into his mouth and dried it on the edge of his shirt. The chains severed, the man sat erect. Still mute she took his hand, assisted him to arise and drew him to the shattered window. As his cramped limbs trembled and he leaned against the rude wall, his companion, with a sob passed her arm about him and lent the support of her body. Reverently, fearfully, his arm stole around the little figure and after a minute the girl broke the long silence.

"Come," she said, withdrawing from the close contact.

"Where? Why?"

"Never mind, come."

In respectful, obedient silence, he passed out and half drew, half lifted her through the aperture. Still holding his hand, she led him beneath the dripping boughs and down the slippery path now glittering in the rays of the moon. At the boat he hesitated.

"You are making a mistake, little girl"—and the great voice trembled.

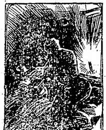
She turned on him fiercely.

"If I did not believe you innocent, do you think I would release you?"

A storm of passion shook the soul of the man. He essayed to speak, hesitated and finally said:

"I am glad you believe me guiltless, Madge. I did not kill him."

"There! I knew you didn't! Come."



Applied the edge of the file to the man's chains.

His feeble objections availed nothing and for half an hour the boat urged on by current and the swift strokes of the girl sped down the stream, while the man sat with bowed head.

"Why don't you talk to me, Jim?" asked the girl at length, resting her oars save for an occasional splash to keep the course clear of the shore. "See, how fast we are drifting!"

"Yes, we are drifting fast," he replied sadly. Then with sudden energy, as though his powerful frame were forcing utterance against his will, he exclaimed:

"Madge, I killed Lieutenant Beverly!"

"Jim, I know you did."

Both were white to the lips and the wide lustrous eyes of the girl were on him with an intensity that rivaled the brightest star above.

"I know what he said about me, and I love you for what you have done, Jim."

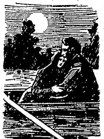
"But—you were to have married him."

"Yes."

"Then you can forgive me?"

"That question is answered."

"I couldn't tolerate the things he said about you, Madge. He boasted and talked of the time you were in St. Louis at school and he went there on a furlough. I wouldn't speak of this but to justify myself in your sight—but he said—"



"I'm not going back home, Jim."

"Don't tell me, Jim. I know what he said."

"He lied! He lied! and I'm glad I killed him!"

Never for an instant did the girl's eyes leave his as she crept to where he sat and put her arms about his neck.

"Kiss me, Jim."

After a moment she said sorrowfully: "I was engaged to him when I was but sixteen—before I knew you, Jim. But I love you too much to lie to you. What he said was true!"

The man smiled tenderly as he caressed the wind blown tresses and kissed the white lips.

"That was why I killed him, Madge," he said.

The girl sobbed and her arms tightened around his neck.

"I'm not going back home, Jim. I'm going with you!"

THINKS DOLLIVER A HOODOO.

Congressman Hopkins Has Bad Luck Through Iowa Statesman.

Congressman A. J. Hopkins of Illinois says that Senator Dolliver of Iowa is a hoodoo. A year ago when the congressman was starting to Washington to attend the opening of congress he met Dolliver in Chicago. The senator at once brought his persuasive powers into play and induced Mr. Hopkins to share Dolliver's stateroom to Washington. The train was wrecked, and although neither the senator nor the congressman was injured they arrived too late to hear the chaplain make the opening prayer. This year when Mr. Hopkins reached Chicago from Aurora on his way to Washington whom should he meet but Senator Dolliver. "Come, ride with me to Washington," said Dolliver to Hopkins in his most alluring tones. "No," said the Illinois senator-to-be resolutely. "I am going as I planned." Dolliver hated the prospect of a lonesome twenty-four hour ride and he argued accordingly. The upshot of it was that he won Mr. Hopkins over and they started together to the capital. Just west of Pittsburg the train was wrecked. Mr. Hopkins' head was jammed so hard against his berth that he thought his neck was broken. A special train was hitched up and the senator and the congressman were landed in Washington in time to participate in the doings of the first day of the session. Nevertheless Mr. Hopkins asserts that Dolliver is a hoodoo.

The World Becoming Smaller.

The world is indeed becoming smaller. First, exploration made all men acquainted with all others. Then steam navigation vastly facilitated and expedited travel and transportation. Then the telegraph made, for purposes of exchange of thought, all nations next door neighbors. Finally, or latest, for we know not what yet may come to pass, the growth of industries and commerce has caused all nations to reach out in every direction, so that to-day whatever concerns one does in a measure concern all. The Atlantic ocean is mathematically as wide and deep as ever. But for purposes of travel and transportation its width is now measured in days instead of weeks, while for purposes of communication it has been practically annihilated. New York and London are nearer together to-day than New York and Brooklyn were within the memory of men now living and not yet grown old.

STORIES OF COL. OCHILTREE

Many Witty Anecdotes Are Credited to the Jovial, Large-Hearted Texas Statesman

When a man gains the reputation of being a wit and a story-teller, and when he supports this by constantly appearing in those expensive and expansive places where many people congregate, it is not well to inquire too closely into the authenticity of the stories that are credited to him.

Especially was this true of the late Col. Thomas P. Ochiltree, native of Texas, citizen of the world. A good many of Col. Ochiltree's best stories were not his own, but some were indubitably of his manufacture. He told all stories well, however, which may be a sufficient excuse for appropriation.

One of Col. Ochiltree's favorite tales was supposed to point a moral. When he was a youth and joined the Texas Rangers his father gave him a Bible with the suggestion that it would do the youth no harm to read it occasionally. Tom took the Bible and promised to do as his parent suggested.

When Tom returned home some months later the Judge asked him if he had read his Bible, and Tom virtuously declared that he had, and frequently. Also he had brought the Bible back with him to show how much he prized it.

"Whereupon my father asked to see it," Col. Tom went on in his narration. "He carefully opened it, turned over a few pages and drew forth a twenty-dollar bill. For weeks I had been broke and had suffered for the necessaries of life. When I discovered that I had been carrying money about wo me all the time I thought I would collapse. And the worst of it was that I couldn't say anything. The old gentleman had me in a fix where I couldn't wriggle. He showed his appreciation of the situation and went on turning over the leaves. Presently he found another twenty-dollar bill, which he folded with the first and placed in his pocket.

"'It's a great pity, Thomas,' he said, dryly, 'that when you read the Bible you didn't happen to open it at the places where I planted the bills.'"

During the inauguration of President Harrison Col. Ochiltree was thrown from a Pennsylvania railroad cab and broke his leg. He sued for $50,000 damages. Some months afterward he walked out of a hotel and met President Thomson, of the Pennsylvania road, who asked him to go to luncheon.

"I can't walk," said Ochiltree. "I've forgotten my crutches. Thereupon he walked up a flight of stairs to secure them.

"Tom, I thought you could get along without those things," said Mr. Thomson when the Colonel returned.

"I can," was the reply, "but my lawyer has ordered me to wear them until my suit against your company is settled."

It was settled that day, Col. Ochiltree getting $5,000.

WINTER FARMS UNDER GLASS

Land in the East Where "Out-of-Season" Delicacies Are Raised For Lovers of Good Living.

In recent years the rich epicure, with his "pampered taste that knows no abstinence," has not had to deny himself during the winter of fruits and vegetables he is so fond of "in season." That is, in nature's season; for man's ingenuity has changed the seasons so far as the markets are concerned.

Winter gardening in America has grown to large proportions, especially in the neighborhood of New York, where the winter demand for summer luxuries is very heavy. On Long Island and hundreds of acres of land are now under cultivation beneath glass roofs, and there are other large farms in New Jersey similarly protected from the cold.

Hothouse fruits and vegetables multiply in quality and quantity each year. Big shipments in protected cars are sent into the city each day. In the South, where the climate is more favorable to the cultivation of garden crops and where less artificial protection is needed, large quantities of strawberries and other fruits are raised and shipped to cities in the North.

Hothouse products, being out of season luxuries, command high prices; but the competition of many growers and the decrease in the necessary expense have served to lower them so as not to be prohibitive. The hothouse gardener has learned to diversify his industries and also to follow the profitable practice of rotating his crops.

By the use of fertilizers he also is able to make his gardens produce three or four crops each year, the variations in temperature being regulated so as to give each of them the degree of heat and moisture they would get from the time of planting in the spring until maturing early in the summer, although this "season" may extend from the first of November to the end of February, when his products will be rare luxuries for the table, and bring correspondingly large prices.

One of the most important auxiliary considerations in winter gardening is transportation, the same as in the summer when protection against the withering heat is necessary. But this has been satisfactorily arranged, and little difficulty is experienced in getting the valuable vegetables and fruits from the hothouses to the markets in distant cities.

The increased cost of coal, hothouse gardeners say, has made necessary raising the prices of garden products raised this winter. Large quantities of fuel are used, and the increased expense of maintaining the hothouses, they say, has been severely felt. Florists, too, who must keep up their hothouses during the winter months, say that higher prices for flowers will be inevitable.

FISH CAUGHT IN LASSOO

Angler Has a Strange Adventure With a Bass—Finny Prey Escapes at the Last Moment.

George Benz of St. Paul is probably the only man in the country who ever caught a bass, or came near catching one, with a line on which there was not hook, bait or sinker. It happened in this way:

The line, a silk No. 5, had become considerably twisted in trolling, so twisted, in fact, that it would kink badly when reeled in; all lines get that way, though spoons and most other artificial baits have swivels on them.

To straighten out the line Benz took the bait and hook from it and trolled it behind the boat. It is an old trick, but known to comparatively few fishermen. The line in going through the water without a spoon on it reverses the twist and straightens out in a little while.

While trolling in this fashion Benz felt a jerk and then a succession of sharp tugs. With no idea other than that his line had become fouled by a floating weed or branch, he reeled in slowly.

When not more than twenty feet was out he became convinced that he had fastened to a fish in some manner. He then played it as carefully as he could, anxious to see the outcome of the strange happening.

The fish fought gamely and tried all it knew to get away, but was brought in until it showed plainly in the water. It was a half-pound red-eyed bass, and it was caught about the body near the middle. It was brought to the boat's edge all right, but in the attempt to lift it in gave one final flirt and got clear, falling back into the water and darting away.

When Benz removed his spoon from the line he left in its end the plain loop which is known as the fishermen's bend. This loop was about four inches long and when the line was dragging through the water must have floated open.

The fish either struck at the line, or was swimming fast when it ran into the loop, which was just big enough to permit of the passage of a part of its body. In fighting the rod it kept the line at a stiff tension, and there was no chance for the loop to slip off.

Benz would have given something to land that fish, but, as it was, had an experience that will never come to him or to anyone else again. Fish have been caught, or partly caught, in many ways, but a red-eyed bass in the loop of an unhooked, unbaited line is unique.

ONE TRAIT OF AN OUTLAW.

How Desperado Helped a Friend to Escape Justice.

While Monrow was low-minded, ignorant and brutal, he had one big quality that in some measure redeemed him in the eyes of the men who followed the rough life of the range. He would not desert a comrade in trouble. Down in El Paso, in the early part of his career, before he had become bold enough to allow evidence of his misdeeds to become apparent he was ostensibly running a ranch and struggling along with the rest of the pioneer cattlemen. A man in his employ was caught driving off a bunch of cattle from a neighbor's herd. By some mischance the fellow fell into the hands of a newly elected sheriff and was not hanged. He was duly arraigned and held under bond of $3,000. Monrow was present at the time and offered to go on his bond. The justice would not accept Monrow. "Nothing but cash goes in this here court," he said.

Monrow rode away. Five days later he appeared, deposited the cash bond for his friend, furnished him with a horse, and together they headed toward the South. Within an hour a band of cattlemen picked up the trail and followed it to Rio Grande. Monrow had stolen an entire herd, rushed it across to friends in Mexico, and in that manner raised the security the court demanded for his friend. Of course the man never returned for trial and Monrow began open operations shortly afterward.—World's Work.

Part of Ancient Times.

The George Inn, in the village of Norton St. Philip, Somerset, is supposed to be the oldest licensed village alehouse in England, the license dating from 1397.

Breeds for Caponizing Work.

T. Greiner, in "Capons for Profit," says: There is a great difference in breeds and birds. Of all the breeds that I have tried I find the Langshan the easiest subject to operate on, because the bird makes bone first and flesh afterward. It is usually lean when young, and shows the ribs quite plainly. It offers little difficulty to the prompt removal of the testicles, and apparently is suffering the least while under the operation. Besides this the Langshan has the advantages of large size and great hardiness. My next choice would be the Langshan and Plymouth Rock Cross. Most of the ordinary mixed fowls of our barnyards are easily operated on. Cochins I have never tried. They are large and should make good capons. Brahmas will grow to largest size, and may prove the most profitable of all breeds for this purpose, yet the beginner will be apt to have trouble with them. The ribs do not show prominently on the outside. Although this makes little difference to a person after he has operated on a number of fowls, it may puzzle the beginner. The most serious stumbling block, however, is the shape of the testicle, which in young Brahma cockerels is about a half-inch long, extending close and worm-like along the big artery. To slip a horse-hair loop around the Brahma testicle, so that it will catch on and cut its way between the testicle and the big artery, is no small job for the beginner. I would not have succeeded quite so well with the Brahmas except for the use of steel wire in the place of horse-hair. My emphatic advice, therefore, is to make the first trial with easy caponizers, especially the Langshan or Langshan cross, or with ordinary smaller breeds, never with Brahmas. I find it is less trouble to operate on young birds than on older birds. It is also a good plan to use a dead bird for the first lesson. Shut the victim up without food or drink for 36 hours. This is important, as you want the intestines empty. Then chop his head off, put him on the operating table in good light and go ahead making your examinations in cockerel anatomy.

Why Some Novices Fail.

Frequently the novice has never even seen a well equipped poultry plant, and has no knowledge at all of good methods of doing the work, says John H. Robinson. Often he makes very hard work of very simple things just because he has no one to tell him or show him what to do. I had some correspondence not long ago with a man who was having a great deal of trouble with roup and rheumatism in his flock. He used the most approved remedies for both without securing any permanent improvement in the general condition of his flock. After repeated inquiries as to conditions I learned that his houses were located on low damp ground, where both soil and atmosphere were objectionable from a poultryman's points of view. He had bought this land for a poultry farm because he had made up his mind to try poultry keeping, and this was the only farm he had been able to find within the limited time he allowed himself to find a farm that came within his means. There is another way in which poultry keeping is hard for most people—and very hard for some—which few think of until they learn it by experience. The business is very confining, and so in time becomes monotonous.

No Standard of Egg-Production.

There is as yet no standard of egg-laying toward which the poultry raiser can work. He does not know how many eggs a hen should lay. The men that judge the poultry do not know how many eggs a hen should lay to be a good and valuable fowl. The work of breeding toward a standard for flesh-production is well under way. It has at least half a century's start of the work of evolving a standard for egg-laying. This will require the work of many breeders through many years. The road is long and the labor of traversing it arduous; but the goal when reached will repay all labor. Doubtless the next generation will see a well-defined standard for the judging of fowls especially adapted to the production of eggs. At the present time the standards for such fowls are made by their external points, not by their ability to produce eggs. In fact, a good layer is very apt to lose a contest in the egg-laying classes at poultry shows because the act of laying many eggs "puts her out of shape," so the showmen say.

Value of Hen Manure.

The eggs and chickens are not all that the hen gives you. There are the droppings as well. An experiment, with a view of determining the value of these, was conducted at the Raleigh (N. C.) Experiment Station. This experiment showed that the commercial value of the droppings of the hen was equal to at least half the cost of maintenance. This experiment showed that the amount of nitrates in hen manure was 67 to 11 in the same bulk of farmyard manure; that the proportion of phosphoric acid in hen droppings was 48½, as compared with 6 in barnyard manure, and that the proportion of potash stood at 41 in the former case, as against 10 in the latter.—A. G. Gilbert.

Foes without are less to be feared than faults within.

Care of Milk for Cheese.

Geo. H. Barr, a cheese instructor, says: Cows should not be allowed to drink impure water from dirty watering troughs, stagnant pools or ponds, or soakage from barnyards. They should not receive any rye, rape or turnips—these things cause tainted or gassy milk, which is the cause of a very great loss in the manufacture of milk into cheese, and, hence, a loss to the patron. Sour, or over-ripe milk is caused by leaving or keeping it at too high a temperature. Milk for cheese making should never be left at a temperature above 70 degrees. Evening's milk should be cooled to about 65 degrees. If the milk is to be kept from Saturday till Monday, it should be cooled to 60 degrees Saturday night, and kept as near that temperature as possible, without any stirring on Sunday. The cow's udder and flank must be clean before commencing to milk; wipe them with a damp cloth, and milk with dry hands into clean, bright tin pails. Wooden or galvanized pails should never be used for milk. Strain the milk as soon as it is drawn from the cow, through either two thicknesses of cheese cloth, or a very fine wire strainer, or both, putting the cloth over the wire. Cool the milk by putting the cans or pails into cold water. Stirring it with a clean, long-handled dipper will allow the animal odor to pass off, and aid in cooling the milk more rapidly.

New Move by the Finns.

The Finns have been exporting butter to England for some years and have built up a pretty good trade there. Butter is one of the principal articles of export of that cold country. The Finns have found hard competitors in the Danes, but have managed to survive the competition. Now, however, come the Siberians and with the help of the Russian government begin to make great inroads on the English market and to crowd out the Finnish butter. The Finnish senate has taken up the matter and evidently proposes to make a national issue out of it. The senate has determined to build at government expense three fast steamers equipped with refrigerators and constructed to carry large quantities of butter. These steamers will sail from Hango, the southernmost port of Finland, and make the trip to England in four or five days. The Russian government has introduced governmental aid in the export butter trade of the Siberians and the Finns will go the Russians a little better. It will be interesting to note the outcome of this rivalry.

Dairying in Cuba.

A government report on the dairy conditions existing in Cuba says: Cows from the states are often seen in dairies near the larger cities. Some of them do well and some do not. A few importers have made the serious mistake of taking cows to Cuba from the northern states and they have suffered heavy losses on this account. A wealthy planter took to southern Cuba fifteen cows, which he said had cost $150 each in New York, and $50 each for transportation. Soon after their arrival ten of them died of Texas fever. When northern cows are confined and carefully fed and cared for, they usually remain healthy, but as soon as they are put on pasture or neglected they are in great danger of exposure to the ticks and to Texas fever. During the war, American cattle were kept about a year in Santiago (their milk sometimes selling as high as a dollar a gallon). They were fed hay and grain from the North. It is reported that some of them died, but the calves usually did well.

Too Much Unripe Cheese.

Too much unripe cheese is being sent to market. Not only is the local market at this time of year full of unripe cheese, but large quantities are being sent abroad. This applies to cheese shipped from Canada as well as from the United States. Recent dispatches from England say that cheese arriving there is of too green a nature to sell well. The greatest obstacle to the development of both the foreign and home cheese market is green cheese. This subject has been discussed at about every cheese makers' convention held, but nothing has been done to prevent unripe cheese from being put on the market. It is evident that one man holding back his cheese till it is cured will not help the situation greatly. There must be some concerted movement to keep all out properly ripened cheese off the market. If only first-class cheese could be put onto the market its sale would be enormously increased within a very few years.

Skimmilk.

Skimmilk properly utilized is a great source of income to the American farmer. Its value in the country is put down at not less than $60,000,000 yearly, a truly immense sum. Yet much of it is wasted. Could it be made the most of it would wipe out many a farm mortgage and lift the financial burden from many shoulders. It is one of the dairy side-products not yet appreciated. It can probably be utilized in no better way than in feeding it to farm animals. By that method of disposal the farmer not only gets all the value there is in it, but he also gets a part of its value back in the way of fertility that goes onto his land.

A Daughter of the Beach

"Case of prodigal son and fatted calf, no doubt," in such a tone that Ralph felt himself color with anger; but he restrained himself, and only said:

"Sneer if you want to, Dick, but a fellow, however hardened he may get knocking about the world, does still have a soft streak in him somewhere. I hope you are not short for funds just now, Dick," changing his tone, abruptly.

"Too short to give you any," was the reply.

"That wasn't what I meant," answered Ralph. "I was going to say I hoped soon to settle up with you. By Jove! you may not believe me, but I shan't always be as short as I have been lately."

Dick looked at Ralph in amazement.

"Coming into some property?" he asked, taking the cigar from his mouth that he might stare harder.

"Well—mind, it's not certain—but I confidently expect to do so; and I shan't forget you, old fellow."

Ralph laughed, inwardly, as he thought how differently he meant his words from what his listener understood them.

"I should say you'd better not forget me," surlily responded Dick, "because I might make it unpleasant for you if you did, you know. By the way, is that girl really your sister, Ralph?"

Caryl's fingers tingled to knock the fellow down, but he only said:

"She is my sister. What do you ask that for?"

"Because I never heard you mention that you had one—in fact, I thought you were the only darling of your parents."

"Which shows that you are sometimes mistaken, my dear Dick. Julia was lonesome at home; besides, her health has not been very good this summer, and we thought it would be just the thing for her to get a breath of salt air."

"Mighty odd that you wanted the bother of her, though. Are you coming out as a model brother and son, or are you studying to join the theater?"

"Don't chaff, Dick; it doesn't become you."

And Ralph turned to go down in the cabin, when Dick detained him by saying:

"I think I can get her boarded with me."

"She won't stay a week."

"Why?"

"It'll be too slow for her."

"Pshaw! You don't know what powers of finding entertainment she has," was the answer.

"True; she may find amusement in flirting with Vance Rothesay—when he gets well enough. I can't think of anything else she can do."

"Jule doesn't flirt," said Ralph, with every appearance of truth.

And then he left Dick, secretly somewhat discomposed at the mention of Rothesay's name, for Ralph had, for the moment, forgotten the sick man at Purcell's.

Julia Caryl had rarely been so curious about anyone as she was about this girl whom both her brother and Dick Burt wished to marry, though from different reasons.

She had not asked Ralph to describe the girl, because she knew men saw girls so differently; but she was prepared to dislike her. Julia did not like women, anyway, and this particular one she was ready to despise.

It was the next day after Julia's arrival. She had walked along the beach and seen the houses of the fishermen, and been surprised at the poverty of their appearance.

Ralph had pointed out the clump of dwellings, saying that Miss Purcell lived in one of them.

Julia was alone, and she wandered on the beach, hoping to see someone thinking she would recognize Kate Purcell immediately.

"I suppose she does look a little different from a fishwoman," she soliloquized, "or they wouldn't have called her the "Daughter of the Beach."

She remained half an hour near the houses, but there was little sign of life in the group, for the men were all out fishing and the women at work in the houses.

Kate Purcell, as she washed dishes and swept and tidied the house, saw the unknown, graceful figure on the sands, and paused in her work to contemplate it. But she did not pause long; she hurried through her tasks, and then took her basket to go over to the other side of the pond blueberrying.

With her broad hat fastened securely against the brisk east breeze, she left the house, and was soon toiling up the rocky hills where the berries grew in profusion.

Now along these hills nestle the cottages of the Bostonians—then they were solitary—given up to a wilderness of trees and bushes, from amid whose leaves glimpses of the bay could be seen—rare marine pictures in the loveliest of frames.

Not an hour later, Julia Caryl, having left the shore in despair of seeing what she sought, was wandering along over the hills, near where Kate Purcell was industriously picking berries, happy in the wild beauty of the place and exhilarated by the salt air.

Kate did not know why, but it seemed to her that never before had the world been so beautiful—never had she been so happy, and this, notwithstanding all her anxiety about her father.

She was not thinking definitely of anything, but her mind was in a pleasant revery, when she was disturbed by a cry above her—higher up on the hill.

She paused in her work, almost thinking it was a call of some bird; but it came again, this time unmistakably a cry for help, and a cry in a woman's voice.

Kate set down her basket and began to climb upward, not making very rapid progress on account of the steepness and the briers.

She paused to utter an answering cry.

"Where are you?"

For she could not tell which way to turn, as the voice had not again spoken.

"This way! Make haste!" was the reply, so near as to surprise the girl.

She turned to the right, went down a little declivity where there was an opening in the trees and underbrush, and paused in astonishment; and, in spite of herself, there was a good deal of amusement in her surprise.

Clinging to the lower branches of a savin, her hat off, her scarlet shawl swinging from the bough, was a woman whose handsome face was flushed with anger and fear, who seemed ashamed of her fear, but not enough ashamed to overcome it.

At the foot of the tree stood a young cow whose horns just could not reach the woman.

As Kate came in sight the cow made a short run at the tree, tossing her horns wildly and shaking her head with great apparent fierceness.

"Oh dear!" said Julia Caryl—for the "treed" one was she. "It's only a woman, after all! You can't do anything with that brute!"

Kate took a long switch from a birch tree and advanced, saying:

"I know the cow. She's playful and not malicious. You must have run from her, and your red shawl excited her."

"Playful!" cried Julia, in a tone as furious as it could be from her position. "She may seem playful to you, but she doesn't seem that way to me. You can't do anything with that switch. You'll have to call a man, and how I am going to keep in this position while you do it, I don't know."

Kate smiled as she said:

"If you really refuse to be rescued by a woman, I'll call some masculine aid; but there's not the slightest need of a man."

Julia was too much flurried to notice that the newcomer did not speak like one of the "masses," as she scornfully called them, and Kate's humble dress deceived her, and Julia was one of those who never cared particularly to be polite to those below her "set."

"Don't talk like a fool!" she said, in response to Kate's words, "but drive the beast away."

It was not strange that Kate Purcell was human enough not to feel like hurrying when she was addressed in such an insolently imperious tone.

If she had not been very tender-hearted she would have delayed still more, as it was, she only paused an instant, a tinge of anger coming to her cheeks. But she felt that it was contemptible for her to care for words like that, and she made a rush with her stick, at the cow which turned and scampered down the declivity, kicking up her heels as she went, as if she, too, were laughing at the tricks she had served the girl in the tree.

"You see, she was not malicious. If you had caught up a stick and turned upon her she would have run from you as well," said Kate, pleasantly, as she returned to the tree.

"Very likely; but I don't pretend to understand cows," was the reply. "Now how in the name of wonder am I to get down from here? I've torn my hands already."

Julia's hands were bleeding where she clung to the tree.

"Let go, and let yourself fall," advised Kate; "it's but a few feet."

"But I'm not used to such things; it seems a great way. How in the world I ever got here I don't know."

Kate stood in silence. She had no other advice to offer, and what she had suggested was easy enough. She was looking, in some curiosity and admiration, at the face above her.

She decided to herself that the lady must be a visitor at some of the country houses which the people of Boston had begun to build not far from there.

"Well, aren't you going to help me?" crossly cried Julia.

"I can't lift you down. I assure you it's perfectly eady. Just let go, and you can't help falling on your feet."

Julia muttered something, but her common sense told her that she must do as the girl said, and finally she made up her mind to let go her hold.

She came down with very little of a jar; but she was thoroughly out of humor now, and, as there was no male auditor present, she did not try to conceal the fact.

"It's easy enough to stand and look on and see one jarred out of one's senses," she said, crossly; "but it is not so easy to the one to be shaken up. I feel as if I had displaced every bone in my body."

The tone was precisely as if Kate had been the cause of the whole, and Kate herself was conscious that she felt a desire, as in childhood, to slap the girl who talked thus. But Kate Purcell was a lady, a thorough gentlewoman, and overcame her vexation immediately.

"I am very sorry," she said. "Will you allow me to bind up that hand? And let me suggest that you bathe it in arnica as soon as you can."

Julia submitted, and proffered her handkerchief to the deft fingers that were very soothing to their touch.

And while Kate bound up the hand Julia examined her with scrutinizing gaze, and found that she possessed a rare beauty—a beauty that was not within any set rules, but that might be all the more attractive. Who was she? came to Julia's mind now for the first time.

Kate's dress was a brown linen, scrupulously neat, with a white collar at the throat; but it was just such a dress as any poor person might wear. But for all that, and the fact that she was picking berries, Julia began to fear that she might be some rich girl who had taken the whim to spend the summer in disguise.

She certainly looked, spoke and acted like a lady, and Julia now began to be conscious that she herself had certainly not spoke and acted like one. But she would not have cared if she had not suspected that her companion was other than she had thought at first.

Ralph Caryl, in spite of his crimes, possessed a good deal more of what is known as good breeding than did his sister.

With her new suspicions, Julia thought it might be well to begin to be civil, and she said:

"I fear I have not been courteous; but I was so alarmed that I hardly know what I did say. I hope you will pardon me."

"Pray don't speak of it," was the polite response, but spoken rather coldly.

"You have been very kind. I hardly know what I should have done without your assistance," went on Julia, still more cordially; for she began to be fully convinced that this must be a girl of wealth and social importance.

"I beg you not to talk thus," said Kate. "I did very little. I am sorry you should have met with such an accident. Your hand will be painful for several days, I fear."

Julia did not speak directly; she was occupied in looking for a letter she had missed from her pocket; and Kate took up the scarlet shawl and waited to throw it over the shoulders where it belonged.

"You will not wear scarlet again without thinking of your mishap here," she said, as she arranged the drapery.

"And the thought will bring to mind my gratitude," said Julia, now speaking in her softest tone and with her most winning manner. "May I not know to whom I am indebted?"

"Certainly. I am Kate Purcell."

And again Kate thought it was curious that she should be always telling people her name.

Julia did not reply by giving her own name—something prevented her—but she held out her hand, saying, with great apparent cordiality:

"I am almost tempted to be glad of the accident which has made you known to me. I am stopping at Mrs. Blanchard's, on the hill near the beach, and I hope to see you again."

Kate reciprocated that hope; though she could not do it very sincerely, for she was certain there was nothing in common between the two.

"Do you know the way down?" she hastened to ask.

"I am not sure; but I can find it if you direct me."

"Go in that direction," pointing, "and in a few minutes you will come to a path, which you will but have to follow down the hill."

After a few more words, interspersed with thanks, Julia left and began the descent, glad to be alone to compose her thoughts.

"So that is Kate Purcell?" she soliloquized. "Well, I hate her! I should have hated her anyway, but more especially as she saw me in that absurd predicament. I suppose I must have said some very rude things; but the amusement on her face, when she first saw me, made me frantic with rage. No; I won't forgive her for that; and I'll pay her off one of these days! So she doesn't care for Dick Burt? Well, she shall have the satisfaction of soon learning that he doesn't care for her any more. I only wish there was a lover for whom she did care. It would be such pleasure to get her away from him, and I think I could do it. Let us hope there'll be a chance. Yes, I hate her horribly! It' be good enough for her to get to be my brother's wife. I wonder if he is smitten with her? He didn't say anything about it. He might, at least, have described her, and I shouldn't have so demeaned myself as to have been rude to her—and then to have to apologize. Oh, I will pay her off! If nothing else was the matter, she's too nearly beautiful for me not to dislike her—and her clear eyes have a way of seeing right through anyone; they look as if they could detect deceit by a glance. But, of course, they can't—that's all folly! If they did, my brother would have a poor chance."

Thus thinking, Julia Caryl hurried down the hill and to Mrs. Blanchard's.

To the inquiries she met there, as to what had happened to her hand, she merely replied that she had torn the flesh with a thorn.

As for Kate Purcell, she went on picking berries, her heart much less light than it had been before she had seen Julia. But she tried to put the thought of the woman from her. She should probably never see the stranger a dozen times in her life.

She thought it very odd that such a woman should choose to stay at Mrs. Blanchard's. And then she resolutely thought of something else.

When she reached the road, Julia Caryl met Dick Burt slowly sauntering along with his hands in his pockets. His stolid way of taking her presence piqued Julia more than anything he could have done. She passed him with a frigid bow, having her own notion of the way she was to pursue with him.

"Cold, stuck-up thing!" was his thought as she went on. "What in the deuce Caryl brought her here for I know not."

And he was far from guessing that her mission here referred almost exclusively to himself.

CHAPTER XI.

Rothesay's Swoon.

"I've seen my lady," said Julia Caryl to her brother the first time she saw him alone.

"Seem whom?" Ralph asked, looking up from his newspaper.

"The girl—Kate Purcell."

"How did that happen? I was thinking we'd both call there to-night."

"She's a despicable, underhanded thing, and I'll do my best to demolish her! She's just hateful!"

"Whew! how women do love each other!" exclaimed Ralph. "But Kate isn't mean, nor underhanded nor despicable."

"Never mind. I don't care what you think. But we won't discuss the matter. You need not be afraid but I will be all velvet to her. I know how."

"True enough. We will begin the siege directly."

"Yes, let us. Only I do wish she was in love with Dick Burt."

"Why?" in surprise.

"Can't you see? If she loved him 'twould be still better fun to get him away from her. As it is, I'm afraid it will be rather tame, and she'll thank me for doing it."

Julia paced up and down in front of her brother.

"You'll have put up with the present state of things," he said. "You can't expect a woman like Kate Purcell to love Dick Burt; that's asking too much."

"Do you love her?" facing about and gazing at him sharply.

"I? No; I'm past the time for loving in that way. I fear my salad days are over," he said, easily.

She believed him; anyway, it made little difference to her.

"Let us call over there to-night," Ralph said, after a few moments.

"But it's the thing for her to call on me."

"Bosh! We don't mind such things here. Will you go?"

"Of course, if you say so."

But she did not go, for before night it came on to rain heavily, and her brother was forced to go alone.

When he came back his sister, who was waiting for him, asked eagerly concerning his visit. He was surly and discontented.

"Didn't see Kate more than ten minutes, and was forced to talk with the old man, thinking she'd come in every minute. He said Rothesay was going to try to get down stairs and out of doors to-morrow."

(To Be Continued.)

Where Woman Is Boss.

There is a remarkable community in Abysinnia where the women, without holding meetings or agitations of any kind, have emancipated themselves. All the women work hard, while the men are idle; but, by way of compensation, the house and all it contains, belong to the wife. At the least unkind word she turns her husband out at night, in storm or rain, and he cannot come back until he makes amends by the gift of a cow. The wife considers it a duty to abuse the husband, and if she were weak enough to show any love for him in life or grief at his death she would be scorned by her tribe. The wife, without any reason, may strike her tent and go, taking with her one-third of the joint possessions. The husband, unless he is traveling, may not live out of his tent.—Golden Penny.

Zola's Way to Die.

It was not long before the tragedy that stirred not only all Paris, but all the intellectual world, that someone asked the late Emile Zola how he would wish to die, if the choice could be his. In the light of later events, the reply was remarkable:

"It cannot matter," the novelist is said to have answered, "providing only that death comes so suddenly as to give me no time to 'prepare' for it, as they say."

Quite as characteristic, though less pointed by tragic fact, were some of Zola's replies to other questions in the same interview.

"My favorite authors? Those who can see clearly and tell clearly what they see.

"My favorite heroes and heroines in real life? Those who are not the heroes. In real life I love best the men and women who are able to conceal their sufferings."—Philadelphia Press.

"Bachelor Cowgirls."

The eight bachelor girls, daughters of William Walker, the owner of a big cattle ranch in Oregon, do almost all the work of caring for the horses and cattle maintained by their father. Clad in picturesque but practical costumes of duck, buckskin and plain calico, the "cut out" cattle almost daily, break and train unruly horses, and if night overtakes them in the mountains or far out on the prairie, curl up in their saddle blankets and sleep the sleep that knows no fear. Withal, these daring bachelor girls are quiet-mannered and womanly, and they are only unmarried because every one of them is in love with her present lot.—Pilgrim.

His Iron Life Belt.

Some time ago a ship which carried a few passengers, while crossing the Atlantic, was caught in a heavy storm.

The captain of the ship, seeing the passengers in danger of being washed overboard, ordered them to lash themselves to anything that would keep them afloat in case the ship was wrecked.

But after a time, however, the storm passed off, and a Suffolk man, who was one of the passengers, was missed.

Thinking that the worst had happened, a search around the boat was at once made, and after a time he was found up in the bow of the boat, fast asleep, with the anchor tied to him.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

An Intelligent Dealer.

In preparing children for their summer outings, under the fresh-air fund, it is often necessary that the bodies, and especially the scalps of the youngsters be cleansed.

With this end in view, a young minister on the Lower East Side entered a near-by drug store and asked for a fine-tooth comb. The dealer, much surprised, exclaimed:

"Tooth comb! No; but we have some fine tooth brushes."—New York Times.

NO TRAINS MOVE

RAILROADS IN THE STATE OF WASHINGTON ARE ALL TIED UP.

NO PROMISE FOR THE FUTURE

CHINOOK PREVAILS AND WATER POURS DOWN CASCADES IN TORRENTS.

MANY WASHOUTS AND LANDSLIDES

PASSENGER TRAINS STALLED AND PASSENGERS FED BY COMPANY.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 6. — Business was at a standstill on the Northern Pacific yesterday, not a train leaving the city and the railroad officials are unable to make any definite statement as to the future. The chinook still prevails and water is pouring down the Cascades in torrents. At Martin, on the east side of the tunnel, there is a washout of nearly 300 feet, while several places between the tunnel and Ellensburg are under water or the tracks covered deep in mud.

There are five washouts on the main line between Castle Rock and Kelso. There are innumerable slides all the wak from Cosmospolis to the terminus on the Gray's Harbor branch. The Auburn cut-off is under water for a mile. Nearly a mile of track is gone in one place on Green river. Five or six other washouts are reported between Lester and Palmer. The big washout at Martin is followed by a and landslides all the way to Ellensburg. The South Bend branch is under water and covered with slides from Willapa to the terminus.

The company has two passenger trains ties up at Maywood and are taking the best care possible of the passengers. There are slides ahead and washouts behind, and arrangements are being made to get supplies to the trains. There is no way to get the passengers out at present owing to the washing out of all the road bridges in that section. Not a county road can be followed a single mile in any direction.

One passenger train is bound up at Lester, where the passengers are also being cared for by the railroad. No communication is possible either way until the water shall have abated. The Great Northern is in exactly similar predicament.

Town Is Flooded.

[illegible] overflowed its banks near O'Brien's station, fourteen miles below Seattle, early yesterday. The people of the town were awakened by the water in many cases creeping into their beds. A relief train was ordered from Seattle, and on arriving with boats the rescuing party found several families, the women and children of which were huddled on chairs and tables in order to keep from the water that was more than two feet deep on the floors. All persons were taken to places of safety. No lives are reported lost, but much property has been ruined or lost. The flood was caused by the recent nine days' rain and the chinook winds which melted the heavy snows in the Cascade mountains.

AT HOLD-UP BEND.

Lone Highwayman in Overalls Makes a Haul.

Calistoga, Cal., Jan. 6.—A lone highwayman, wearing blue overalls with a hole in the right knee, held up the Calistoga and Clear Lake stage on Mount St. Helena. The express box was taken and the passengers were relieved of a few dollars. The hold-up took place at Dusty Bend, where many former hold-ups have occurred. The six-horse stage was driven by William Conner, and the passengers were Attorney T. C. Vanness and wife of San Francisco and Rev. Henry and John Nelson of Middletown. It is thought that the express box contained much treasure.

ROLLS DOWN EMBANKMENT.

Passenger Train Wrecked and the Engineer Killed.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 6.—A passenger train on the Southern railway, bound from Atlanta to Birmingham left the rails last night near Weems station. The baggage and mail cars rolled down an embankment and were demolished. Although the train was filled with passengers Engineer White was the only person killed. His mangled body was found under the locomotive. Twenty-seven passengers were slightly injured. A relief train brought the injured to Birmingham. The passenger coaches remained on the ties.

"Get Coal" Committee to Meet.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—Mayor William C. Maybury of Detroit announced last night that a meeting of the "get coal" convention which was held in Detroit, had been called for the latter part of next week, probably Saturday, in Chicago, to discuss means for obtaining a supply of anthracite coal. Mayor Maybury said several members of the committee had already signified their intention to be present.

Burned to Death.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 6.—J. H. Williams, a stable boy, and twenty-three horses burned to death yesterday in a fire at the plant of Hughes Bros.' Extract company. A warehouse was also consumed. Loss, $50,000; insurance half.

Castle at Rest.

Stillwater, Jan. 6.—The remains of Hon. J. N. Castle were consigned to the grave yesterday in Fairview cemetery. The funeral was under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity. The pallbearers were past masters of the order.

AMPUTATES HIS OWN FOOT.

Engineer's Heroic Act Saves His Life.

St. Paul, Jan. 6. — Charles John Wood, a Burlington freight engineer, saved his own life yesterday morning during a wreck near the state fish hatchery, by his remarkable nerve and presence of mind. He was pinioned under two engines and was unable to escape from the cloud of scalding steam as his left foot, which was almost cut off, was caught in the debris. He took out his jack-knife, severed the foot and then crawled from under the wrecked engines. He escaped just in time to escape being crushed to a pulp, as the engines settled soon after he had reached the side of the tracks. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital. He was unconscious during most of yesterday, but the physicians say that he will probably recover.

EATS, THEN HANGS HIMSELF.

North Dakota Farmer Suicides for No Known Reason.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 6. — Gjermund Knutson, a farmer living near Reynolds, killed himself by hanging in a shed near his house. Knutson was fifty-five years of age, a prominent farmer, well fixed financially, and a man whose family relations had always been pleasant. No cause can be assigned for the deed, as he had not at any time given evidence of insanity. He had been in to breakfast and had gone out to the barn. His wife wanted to speak to him later, and went to look for him and found his body dangling from one of the rafters in the shed.

FORT BRADY BARRACKS BURN.

Lack of Water Pressure Results in Total Destruction.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 6.—The fine barracks at Fort Brady, which were built in 1892, were completely destroyed by fire. The loss is placed at $80,000. The barracks were occupied by a battalion of the Fourteenth United States infantry. The men saved their accoutrements and the furniture of the building. There was little water in the standpipe when the alarm was turned in and consequently not sufficient pressure in the mains for the firemen to cope with the flames. An investigation of the lack of water is now being made.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Well Known Eau Claire Lawyer and a Pioneer of Wisconsin.

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 6.—Henry H. Hayden, a well known lawyer, was found dead in bed yesterday morning. It is believed the cause of death was a heart affection of long standing. Mr. Hayden came to Oshkosh, Wis., in 1864, was admitted to the bar in 1871, and came to Eau Claire in 1872. Besides winning a high place at the bar and in Democratic politics he engaged in manufacturing, banking and timber enterprises, and was the richest lawyer in Eau Claire.

PAYMASTER IS HELD UP.

One of Bold Trio in Iowa Severely Wounded.

Bussey, Iowa, Jan. 6. — W. R. Sullivan, paymaster for the Bussey coal mine near here, was held up by three robbers and robbed of $1,800. After the robbers had obtained the money several secured shotguns and began firing at them. One of the men was seriously wounded, being shot in the face and arm. He was captured and taken to Knoxville for treatment. He refuses to give his name.

KNEW SHE WOULD DIE.

Duluth Woman's Presentiment Proves to Be a True One.

Duluth, Jan. 6.—Mrs. Cheska, wife of August Cheska, died at St. Luke's hospital while under the influence of chloroform. The drug was being administered by physicians preparatory to performing an operation and she died before they were ready. The woman said before she had become unconscious that she had a presentment she would not live through the ordeal.

MOVE CRAZY INDIANS.

Patients to Be Taken to South Dakota Asylum.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Arrangements have been perfected for the transfer of the insane Indians now confined in St. Elizabeth hospital in this city to the government asylum at Canton, S. D. There are about ten patients here. They will be taken West in a special car in charge of one of the hospital attendants.

TWENTY DOLLARS APIECE.

Leech Lake Indians to Get Aggregate of $195,000.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The roll containing the names of the Leech Lake Indians entitled to a share in the stumpage fund created by the sale of dead and down timber was submitted to the secretary of the interior. The Indians at Leech lake will get about $20 per capita, the total aggregating about $195,000.

Killed by a Train.

Blackduck, Minn., Jan. 6.—Andrew Kvisland was killed on the Minnesota & International tracks two miles south of this place shortly after noon yesterday. He was on the way to his home and was walking on the track. The engineer blew the whistle and the man stepped aside, but miscalculated the distance and was struck in the side and hurled into the ditch. Trainhands brought him to the depot, where he died. Kvisland was among the first settlers, well-to-do and leaves several grown-up children in this village.

Grants Requisition.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 6.—Gov. Herreid granted a requisition on the governor of Wisconsin for Lewis H. Turck, wanted in Beadle county on the charge of embezzlement. Turck was an employe of the Great Northern road and is said to have left with funds of the company in his possession.

Dead Man Is Identified.

Sturgis, S. D., Jan. 6. — The frozen man found on the roadside ten miles south of the South Moreau has been identified as Chris Nelson.

PEOPLE RECEIVED AMPLE WARNING

CAVE-IN OCCURS BENEATH THE HEART OF THE TOWN OF OLYPHANT.

BUILDINGS GROUND TO DEBRIS

THREE-STORY HOTEL TURNS OVER AND LANDS ON ROOF IN ABYSS.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 5. — Abandoned workings of the Eddy Creek colliery of the Delaware & Hudson company beneath the very heart of the town of Olyphant caved in yesterday afternoon and engulfed four frame buildings, covering an aggregate ground space of 6,000 square feet.

The settling was gradual and the people in the affected territory escaped without being immediately endangered. A gang of men and boys who were at work in the mine beyond the fall encountered a flooded depression in a vein in making their way out by a circuitous route and had to swim across. No one was injured.

In a half-hour, O'Brien's three-story hotel, Mrs. Ann Evans' double dwelling, Mrs. Jane Ackerly's double store building, and a one-story barber shop were ground to debris in the yawning pit, with the uppermost part of the mound forty feet below the surface. O'Brien's hotel, which plunged first into the opening, entirely disappeared. A few houses are projecting over the edge of the pit. The vein that caved in is 110 feet below the surface. The settling just in front of the hotel property. The brick pavement was seen to be working and the telegraph poles and trees along the curb were noticed to be wobbling. The cause was apparent and the alarm was spread. Two sick guests were removed from the hotel.

Started in the Street

Twenty minutes after the disturbance was first noticed the opening had widened until it reached across the street and half-way beneath the hotel. Then, with a terrific crash the building pitched forward, turned over and landed on its roof in the bottom of the abyss.

An immense amount of earth from the edge of the hotel went down with it, and a moment later the adjoining double dwelling of Mrs. Evans fell over the edge and was demolished on the ruins of the hotel. The Akerly store building and the Evans barber shop property slid into the chasm about the same time and piled themselves, broken and twisted, on the debris. The property damage is estimated at $30,000.

TO KILL BLACKMAIL.

New Police Commissioner Makes Plain Clothes Man Patrol Beats.

New York, Jan. 5.—After a consultation with Deputy Commissioners Ebstern and Peter Piper and Chief Inspector Cortwright, Commissioner Greene yesterday issued the following order:

"All precinct detectives and patrolmen doing duty in plain clothes, whether in the district or in the precincts, and whether detailed to duty by the police commissioner or by inspectors of districts, or captains of precincts, are hereby returned to duty as patrolmen, to take effect Jan. 7, and they will not be eligible for detail of any kind during ninety days from that date."

By this order 262 men are ordered to duty as patrolmen, and each is transferred to a new precinct. Commissioner Greene is taking this action, it is understood, with a view of breaking up the system of blackmail alleged to exist in the department.

ILL LUCK FOR "LUCKY" BALDWIN.

Millionaire in Obscure Lodging House and Treated by Cancer Specialists.

San Francisco, Jan. 5. — With death from cancer threatening him, the old millionaire, E. J. Baldwin, better known as "Lucky" Baldwin, is in an obscure lodging house, being treated by cancer specialists. He has been there since the day after Christmas, but his identity has been hidden under the assumed name of Edward Jackson. His family has been calling on him daily. The old man is suffering from cancer, and there are no less than three growths developing. The most serious is in the middle of the lower lip, and the others are under the chin. His doctors say he will recover, as the two cancers under the chin were caused by X-ray treatment, from which Baldwin derived no benefit, but as the patient is over seventy the danger of complication is grave. Baldwin did not tell the doctor who he was, but the doctor says he drove a very shrewd bargain with him for treatment.

"Bobs" Is Coming.

Boston, Jan. 5. — Lord Roberts of Kandahar, otherwise "Bobs," the idol of Tommy Atkins and the conqueror of Cronje, has accepted the invitation of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston to be its guest at the company's field day next September.

Bottling Works Burned.

Montevideo, Minn., Jan. 5. — The Montevideo Bottling works was destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning. The fire originated from a defective flue. The loss is $1,000; insurance, $600.

Wrecked a Lighting Plant.

Yankton, S.D., Jan. 5.—An explosion of the main steam pipe in the electric light plant wrecked the plant and left the city in darkness. F. O'Neill, one of the employes, was badly burned by escaping steam.

PUSH ON TO MANILA.

Pacific Cable Will Be Completed to Manila by July 4.

New York, Jan. 5. — Clarence H. Mackay, president; George G. Ward, vice president and general manager, and the other officials of the Commercial Pacific Cable company, are greatly pleased at the completion of the company's cable between San Francisco and Hawaii, a work to which they have devoted much energy and time during the last few months. They do not proposed to stop at Hawaii, however, and now say that by July 4 they expect the cable will have been completed to Manila. Speaking of the project, Mr. Ward said:

"The Commercial Pacific Cable company's cable to Hawaii was connected through to San Francisco at 8:43 p. m., Jan. 1, Honolulu time. The cable will open for public business on Monday morning, Jan. 5. The widespread interest created by bringing the Hawaiian island into electric touch with the Pacific coast is evidenced by congratulatory cablegrams received to-day. It is a particular satisfaction to us to have the cable completed on the first day of the new year, because it fulfills our promise to congress. Rapid progress is being made in the manufacture of the sections to be laid between Honolulu and Manila, and over 3,500 miles of this cable have already been manufactured. I fully expect messages will be exchanged with Manila by July 4, next. The laying of the remaining sections will commence from Manila the first week in May next."

NOT FOR UNCLE SAM TO SAY.

No Dictation as to Priests Who Are Sent to the Philippines.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The attention of the officers of the administration charged with the direction of Philippine affairs being called to a dispatch from Rome that Secretary Hay has written to the Vatican that Mgr. Messmer of Green Bay, Wis., is impossible for the position of bishop of Manila because of the speech which he recently made before the Catholic Truth Federation, the statement was made in the most emphatic terms that there was absoluty no foundation for the story. It was further declared that in no single instance has the United States government allowed itself to be placed in the position of dictating the personality of any priest or church official who was to go or stay in the Philippines.

SMALLPOX IN LUMBER CAMP.

Secretary Bracken of the State Health Board Orders Action.

Park Rapids, Minn., Jan. 5.—Smallpox has been reported from a lumber camp about thirty miles north of here, and Secretary Bracken of the state board of health has ordered Dr. Winship, the local superintendent, to use the most stringent measures in stamping out the disease. Dr. Winship and all the local authorities are making every effort to prevent the spread of the disease, and it will be quarantined wherever found.

ONCE LIVED AT MENDOTA.

Victim of Murderous Robbers a Former Minnesotan.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 5.—Napoleon Le May, the victim of a peculiarly atrocious murder near Williston about a year ago, in connection with which one man has confessed his guilt and another has been arrested, was once a well known resident of Mendota, Minn. Many relatives of Le May still live in the Twin Cities and various parts of Minnesota.

STATION AGENT ROBBED.

Held Up Twice in Two Weeks—Small Roll Secured.

Mason City, Iowa, Jan. 5. — The station agent at Portland was held up last night and $125 in money belonging to the Milwaukee road and $25 United States express money was taken. This is the second hold-up at that place within two weeks.

Reciprocity in Poultry.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 4. — A large number of Winona chicken fanciers have sent birds to the chicken show being held in Sparta, Wis. In return the Sparta poultrymen will send birds to the Winona show next week. This promises to be one of the biggest shows ever held in this city, and birds will be shown here from all over the southern part of the state.

Paroled From Prison.

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 5.—Vernon P. Chappel, ex-treasurer of Schoolcraft county, who a year ago at Manistique was convicted for the embezzlement of several thousand dollars of the county's funds and sentenced to the Marquette penitentiary for five years, has been paroled by Gov. Bliss.

Porter Becomes Professor.

Family Is Homeless.

Estelline, S. D., Jan. 5. — The residence of W. F. Bast was entirely destroyed by fire last night during the absence of the family. Building and contents are complete loss.

Kicked by a Horse.

Stephen, Minn., June 5. — S. Rendstrom, living eighteen miles east of here, was kicked in the face by a vicious horse New Year's day and his death is expected.

Pioneer Farmer Dead.

Plainfield, Wis., Jan. 5. — William Patton is dead. He was one of the early residents of Plainfield, having resided on the same farm for over forty years. He was about seventy-two years old and leaves a family.

Unidentified Dead Man.

Faribault, Minn., Jan. 5.—Coroner D. W. Ray was called to a farmhouse near Dundas to view the remains of a strange man who had been found dead in a straw pile near the house. An inquest will be held.

ALASKAN SCANDAL

REMOVAL OF UNITED STATES MARSHAL RICHARDS IS ASKED.

CONVICTED OF JURY BRIBING

CONTINUATION IN OFFICE A MENACE TO THE PEACE OF THE DISTRICT.

ROUGH RIDER WANTS THE JOB

DELEGATION FROM NOME GO TO WASHINGTON TO PUSH THE MATTER.

Washington, Jan. 1. — Alaska is boiling with another official scandal.

A delegation representing the business interests of Nome has come to Washington to urge the president to dismiss peremptorily United States Marshal Frank Richards, not alone because he has twice been convicted of contempt of court and once for alleged participation in jury bribing, but because his continuation in office is a menace to the peace of the district.

Bob Bruce of Nome, a former member of President Roosevelt's rough riders, is here with the delegation and wants to succeed Richards. It is said unofficially that he will be appointed marshal.

The jury bribing enterprise in which Richards is alleged to have engaged concerned the former postmaster of Nome, who in his accounts of $8,000. A postoffice inspector from San Francisco caused his arrest and he was placed on trial for embezzlement. The jury acquitted him. Judge Wickersham, who presided at the trial, ordered the acting district attorney to bring before the bar all persons whom he suspected of having tampered with the jury.

United States Marshal Richards and a saloonkeeper named Jordan, who is the political boss of Nome, were arrested and adjudged to be in contempt of court. They were fined $300 apiece. Jordan paid his fine, but Richards appealed. Richards is a relic of the regime which existed in Alaska during the incumbency of Judge Noyes.

RELIEVED BY DEATH.

Ossified Woman Who Puzzled Physicians Passes Away.

Rome, N. Y., Jan. 1. — Miss Stella Ewing, one of the ossified women who for ten years have been living wonders to physicians and scientists, died here, aged thirty-nine years. At an early age she was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, which physicians failed to relieve. At the age of twenty-five she lost the use of her limbs and eminent specialists said she was gradually turning to bone. During the last ten years of her life, Miss Ewing was totally bling and unable to move a muscle. A sister, Mrs. Emma Ewing Palmer is afflicted in the same manner.

ONE KILLED, SEVERAL INJURED.

Head-on Collision on the Pennsylvania Road.

Sharon, Pa., Jan. 1. — In a head-on collision on the Pennsylvania railroad near West Middlesex last night the engineer of the passenger train, Neal Daugherty of Erie, was killed, four persons were seriously injured and almost a score were hurt. The wreck was caused through a misunderstanding of orders. Both engines were demolished and the express, baggage and smoking cars are almost totally wrecked.

Soldiers Are Bound Over.

Sturgis, S. D., Jan. 1.—Albert Hill and Thomas McGrath, privates of the Thirteenth cavalry at Fort Meade, who were arrested here on a charge of burglary, were bound over to the next term of Meade county circuit court in the sum of $1,000 each. Hill is also charged with shooting at Chief of Police Rouse, and McGrath with attempting to shoot at Policeman Beaver. They are now in jail.

Boost for Good Roads.

Albert Lea, Minn., Jan. 1. — A good roads convention was held here yesterday afternoon, with good attendance. G. W. Cooley of Minneapolis delivered the principal address, but there were remarks by Mayor Morgan, W. A. Morin and others. An association was started, with Hon. Ellend Erickson president and J. C. Staige secretary. Another meeting will be held Jan. 8, when other officers will be elected and the organization completed.

Accused of Fraud.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Jan. 1. — Henry Russell was arrested by the federal authorities for alleged fraudulent use of the mail. He is accused of defrauding a Milwaukee firm. In one case a check used had the signature of a party long since dead.

Both Duelists Shot.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 1. — As the result of a quarrel Albert McLean and William Wilson, attaches of the Phoenix Theater at Hobart, fought a duel yesterday with revolvers and both were shot. Wilson's wound resulted in his death. McLean will recover. He is under arrest.

County Officers Discuss Duties.

St. Paul, Jan. 1. — The Minnesota County Auditors' association met yesterday at the state capitol and a state association of county attorneys was organized. Both organizations discussed measures relating to their duties, and in the evening they were entertained at a banquet at the Commercial club.

Ten Persons Drowned.

Madrid, Jan. 1. — Ten persons were drowned as the result of the capsizing of a fishing boat off Ondarrer, Viscaya.

SQUEAL BY VANDERBILT.

Reggie Tells All He Knows of Gambling.

New York, Jan. 1. — Reginald C. Vanderbilt has made a clean breast of his knowledge not only of Canfield's Forty-fourth street gambling house, but of other gambling houses in New York to District Attorney Jerome, in connection with the latter's "John Doe" crusade. This was done through the young millionaire's lawyer. The information given by Mr. Vanderbilt was voluntary, although it was not given until after Mr. Jerome had summoned him as one of half a hundred men of wealth and prominence, of whom Jesse Lewiston has heretofore been the most conspicuous. In what form the information was given has not been made public. The fact remains, however, that the information is full and complete, and is in Mr. Jerome's possession. Mr. Vanderbilt not only told Mr. Jerome of his own losses and winnings, but it is understood that he gave the names of his friends and acquaintances, the character of their playing and the amounts of their gains and losses. Mr. Jerome regards this information as the most important he has yet obtained.

TROUBLE FOR GOODNOW.

Charges Against Consul General at Shanghai.

Washington, Jan. 1. — John Goodnow, United States consul general at Shanghai, has been made the object of formal attack by the American association at Shanghai, and the charges will be duly investigated by the state department. The principal charge is connected with the transfer from the Chinese to the American flag of a vessel. It is alleged the consul general charged excessive fees for his part in the transfer. Again it is charged he refused to perform his duty in ordering a court of inquiry to examine into the facts connected with the wreck of a ship. Mr. Goodnow has put in a vigorous defense, asserting that the first charge, based principally on the affidavit of a Chinaman, is untrue. To the second charge he replies that he was not approached by any authorized person to order the court. It is expected that when the state department comes to take up this case the question at issue being mainly in fact, it will refer the matter to the United States legation at Pekin for examination and report.

FOUGHT BLOODY DUEL.

Prominent Young Men Hack Each Other With Knives.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 1.—James Chambers, a prominent young man living in Barboursville, is dying, and George Thompson of Huff Creek, Logan county, is thought to be mortally wounded, the result of a duel with knives fought near Logan yesterday morning. The men were both employed by a prominent lumber company and for several weeks had been at outs over the fact that both loved the same young woman. They met and hot words passed. Each drew a knife and they plunged at each other demon-like. Chambers was the first to fall, having his body punctured in half a dozen places, the keen blade of his antagonist's knife having at one stroke almost completely disemboweled him. Before he fell, though, he inflicted injuries to Thompson that will, it seems certain, cause death.

BAREFACED SWINDLE.

Syracuse Postmaster Alleges One and Gets Warrants.

New York, Jan. 1.—Willis T. Gridley, a lawyer of Syracuse, and Edna Ranney, a bookkeeper, also of Syracuse, have been arrested, the former here and the latter at Syracuse. Gridley was secretary-treasurer and Edna Ranney the bookkeeper of the National Mercantile agency of this city. The complainant is Cornelius Van Cott, postmaster and president of the company, who charges that Gridley, as secretary-treasurer, issued worthless papers and prevailed upon Mr. Van Cott to sign them. The paper being of no financial value, Gridley, with the assistance of the Ranney woman, in her capacity of bookkeeper, had false entries made in the books, it is alleged. In this manner the books of the company, instead of showing a balance of $18,000 in round figures, to the credit of the postmaster, showed a debt on his part of $2,000.

CRUELTY IN PESTHOUSE.

Official Investigation Begun at Toledo.

Toledo, Jan. 1.—The first official acknowledgement of repeated charges of cruelty and neglect of smallpox patients at the Toledo contagious disease hospital was made yesterday when the board of police commissioners subpoenaed witnesses for purpose making a public investigation. It is charged by various ex-patients that some persons suffering from smallpox were struck by nurses, that they were neglected and in their delirium were allowed to wander about in the snow, clad in thin raiment; that they were miserably fed, even when their convalescent condition would permit of substantial food. The charges were first preferred by Dr. S. L. P. Cook and his son, the latter a medical student. Both were patients at the pesthouse.

New Land Office Official.

Washington, Jan. 1.—John H. Fimple of Carrollton, Ohio, has been selected as assistant commissioner of the land office to succeed ex-Gov. Richards of Wyoming, who has been selected to succeed Binger Hermann of Oregon, as commissioner. Both Mr. Richards and Mr. Fimple were slated for these offices by the late President McKinley.

Sealing Vessel Lost.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 1.—Three of the four Japanese sealing schooners which hunted in Bering sea have returned to Hakodate. The fourth, the Yu Ten Maru, is overdue and probably has been lost with all on board.

Divorce for Prince.

Dresden, Jan. 1.— King George has appointed a special court of seven judges to try the suit for divorce which the crown prince has decided to institute against the crown princess.

PANIC AT CARACAS

FINANCIAL DISTRESS CAUSES MUCH EXCITEMENT AMONG MERCHANTS.

BANK PUTS A LIMIT ON EXCHANGE

SITUATION OF GOVERNMENT IS GROWING WORSE AND RESOURCES FAILING.

REBELS ARE MENACING CARACAS

AGGRESSIVE MOVEMENTS BEING CLOSELY WATCHED AT WASHINGTON.

Willemstad, Curacao, Jan. 6.—There was a financial panic at Caracas yesterday afternoon. A large number of small traders and private depositors went together to the office of the Bank of Venezuela for the purpose of exchanging the bank's notes into silver. The bank refused to exchange more than $20 worth of notes for any one person, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon closed its doors. The panic continued. Bulls issued by the bank are now selling for 80 per cent of their face value. The leading firms at caracas, notwithstanding the present situation, have presented no notes for redemption, as they are all interested in supporting the bank.

A partial payment to the troops was made yesterday, but it is not believed that these payments can be continued to-day.

Government in a Bad Way.

Paris, Jan. 6.— In a dispatch from Caracas the correspondent of the Matin says that in spite of the successes of the Venezuelan revolutionists, their finances are not sufficient to permit them to obtain munitions of war. It is undeniable that the situation of the government is growing more aggravated, continues the correspondent, and that its resources are failing.

Rebels Menace Caracas.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The aggressive movements of the Venezuelan revolutionists are being watched closely here. Late unofficial advices indicate great activity on the part of the rebels and reporting a menacing movement toward Caracas give the impression that President Castro's position is critical. It has been confidently hoped there would be a cessation of hostilities against the government, so that there might be prompt action with respect to arbitration of the claims against Venezuela by the European allies.

Castro Will Not Abdicate.

Caracas, Jan. 6. — The report that President Castro proposes to abdicate or resign the presidency of Venezuela is untrue. The correspondent of the Associated Press saw President Castro with regard to this matter. The president laughed when questioned, and then said thoughtfully:

"You are at liberty to say that I have fought during two years to retain the supreme power which was invested in me by the people of Venezuela. I will no more abdicate than I will resign. The Matos revolution without assistance from foreign powers will soon be a past story."

The decision of the powers to continue the blockade of La Guayra has caused astonishment among the foreign residents of this city. When the Dutch steamer Prince Wilhelm arrived off La Guayra to take off the European mails the authorities at LaGuayra sent the mail out in a small boat. This boat was stopped by the boat of a British cruiser on blockade duty and the mail bags were taken on board the cruiser and opened.

"TOPSY" ELECTROCUTED.

Elephant Executed in Presence of Hundreds of Spectators.

New York, Jan. 6.—Several hundred spectators yesterday witnessed the execution by electricity at Coney Island of "Topsy," an elephant who had killed three men and had recently become unmanageable. Immediately after 200 grains of cyanide of possassium had been administered, concealed in carrots, a current of 6,600 volts was turned on through copper plates on which the animal stood. Almost instantly the elephant fell, and at the end of ten seconds, when the current was turned off, was pronounced dead. An autopsy showed that the poison had not had time to take effect. The execution was conducted under the supervision of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. "Topsy" was about twenty-nine years old and was the first baby elephant exhibited in this country; when she was brought here by Adam Forepaugh twenty-eight years ago.

ENDS HIS LIFE.

Silverton Banker Who Disappeared Is Found Dead.

Silverton, Colo., Jan. 6. — At noon James H. Robbin, the missing president of the Bank of Silverton, which was closed yesterday on account of the president's disappearance, was found dead three miles from town. He had shot himself in the head. The liabilities of the bank are said to be about $300,000; assets unknown. It is generally believed that the bank is in sound financial condition and that Robbin was mentally deranged.

Peacemaker Is Shot.

Manchester, Iowa, Jan. 6. — Will Work, a butcher of this city, was shot by Richard Rogers, a blacksmith, the bullet entering his arm, producing a wound which is painful, but not serious. Rogers was taken before a justice and placed under $5,000 bonds, which he was unable to furnish. Rogers had been drinking, and before the shooting became involved in a quarrel with a fellow boarder at a restaurant. Work had been called upon for protection by the proprietor of the eating house.

SUSPECTS ARE ARRESTED.

Men Thought to Be Implicated in a Bank Robbery.

Macon, Mo., Jan. 6.—Four men suspected of complicity in the robbery last week of a Union, Mo., bank, when $15,000 was secured, were arrested here last night. Fred Rawlins, one of the men, surrendered to the sheriff and betrayed his alleged confederates because, "they refused to divide fairly." The other three men disclaim any knowledge of the robbery. One of them gave his name as Thomas Nea of St. Paul and another gave the name of J. F. Bower of Kansas City.

Chinese Minister Will Marry.

Pekin, Jan. 6. — Sir Liang Cheng, minister-designate to the United States, will marry the daughter of the Chinese minister at Paris, Yu Keng, before leaving for Washington. The wedding probably will take place at Canton. Yu Keng's daughter was educated abroad and speaks English and French. She is one of the few Chinese women of modern education and modern ideas.

HAVE MANY BAD SLIDES.

Snow and Sand Slip Onto the Railroad Tracks.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 6.—Since Saturday night many snow and sand slides have been reported from points along the main line of the Northern Pacific railroad. The wires are down and railroad officials are unable to get information except from near-by towns. As near as can be learned none of the slides was of a serious nature, and it is thought, the track will be cleared within twenty-four hours.

THE WILES OF A WIDOW.

By NORMAN WRIGHT.

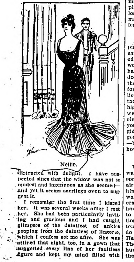
(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Of course, it was my fault—probably. I was young; we were both young; had we been older, or at least less callow, it would not have happened. But what's the use of talking about "ifs" and "buts"? It was as it was and there's no help for it.

I might as well state plainly at this juncture that Margery and I were in love, or at least we thought we were. We had been sweethearts ever since she was in pinafores and I in short pants. But at the time it happened I had blossomed into creased trousers and a downy mustache and carried a cane—had become, in short, quite a young man of fashion and wholly disinclined to be treated as a kid. Now, Margery was a most aggravating miss—and mischievous, and she declined wholly to accept me in the role of a young gentleman of fashion, preferring to maintain the old relationship as boy and girl. This was, as you can readily conceive, a constant source of annoyance and humiliation to me, and I was in no playful mood when Margery's cousin, big and bronzed and 30, and the possessor of a long and flowing black mustache, came out to visit Margery's family. Then came a series of odious comparisons—done always in Margery's laughing way and probably not intended to hurt. But they did hurt and mortally. What young cub of 20 with the first growth of down on his upper lip can see the humor in comparisons with the flowing mustache of a full grown man? And when on top of this the sweetheart of your fondest dreams deliberately refuses to accept your invitations and appears places with a big, handsome cousin with a piratical mustache, a man certainly is justified in taking radical measures.

It was just when I was feeling my worst that I met the widow. It was at a party, to which, by the way, Margery had refused to accompany me, preferring to see the look of impotent rage which adorned my face. As I stood biting my nails and wishing most heartily that I was somewhere else, when glancing across the room I was dazzled by a vision of loveliness which fairly drove the blood back upon my heart. It seemed that I had never seen eyes so black and saucy, a complexion so richly olive, lips so red and full and inviting, a chin so dainty and a form so altogether alluring. Well, I was formally introduced and most graciously received. With the art of a clever woman—and a widow—she made me feel that I was a most important personage in her eyes and that she liked me. I suppose that evening was the happiest I ever knew—unless I except the evenings following. Her flattery was incense to my spirit, wounded as it was by Margery's conduct. Immediately I became the devoted slave of the widow. She was a few years older than I, but the manner in which she looked up to me and deferred to my opinions convinced me that I was really her elder in knowledge of the world and that she was but a clinging vine wholly dependent upon my strength and wisdom.

Within a week I was wholly enslaved. I could think of nothing, talk of nothing but the widow. By that time I was calling her Nellie at her own suggestion delicately conveyed. I was ruinously extravagant in flowers and theatres, and matters were progressing rapidly. My affair with Margery was forgotten, or, if remembered, it seemed wholly childish beside the fiery passion of my new love-making. And the love-making was all so easy. There was none of the embarrassment so constantly arising in my relations with Margery. The widow's plump little hand seemed so invitingly near to mine at moments when it was propitious to give it a warm squeeze, and there were always so many perfect opportunities for quite tete-a-tetes. And those tete-a-tetes—there never were such delightful ones since the beginning of time. The modest blushes and sighs of the widow nearly drove me distracted with delight. I have suspected since that the widow was not so modest and ingenuous as she seemed—and yet it seems sacrilege even to suggest it.

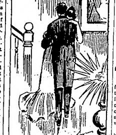


Nellie.

I remember the first time I kissed her. It was several weeks after I met her. She had been particularly inviting and gracious and I had caught glimpses of the daintiest of ankles peeping from the daintiest of lingerie, which I confess set me afire. She was attired that night, too, in a gown that suggested every line of her faultless figure and kept my mind filled with visions of gathering her in my arms. As I arose to go I came pretty near doing it—even started toward her—but my timidity got the best of me and I drew back. Just then, in some unaccountable manner she tripped and lurched toward me. Well, what could I do but throw out my arms to save her and in an instant I had that luscious morsel in my arms—and when she was securely there it all seemed so natural that I squeezed her tight and planted an ardent kiss full on her ripe lips.

Her cheeks were aflame and she drew several sharp breaths as she shrank from me, saying:

"Oh, don't, Fred, you mustn't. I really am afraid of you when you look like that."



"Oh, don't, Fred, you mustn't!"

But I only held her the tighter and rained kisses upon her. Then she sent me from her, telling me that she dared not trust herself with me longer. And I went home intoxicated with her beauty and charms.

Ah me, that was before Uncle Tom died, and instead of leaving his millions to me as everybody expected and had been led to expect, endowed a college with them. And I went to work in an insurance office, and somehow circumstances seemed to make it harder to see the widow, especially alone, and we gradually drifted apart—and only last week she married Nathaniel Sykes, 60 years old and worth three millions.

The Nerve of Some People.

The society editor is in receipt of many curious communications, both from people who are in the swim and those who aim to get there. The colossal nerve of some of these social climbers would appall any one but a society editor, who becomes inured to such things to the point of callousness. This one, received yesterday, is about the limit: "You will save me writing a multitude of letters if you can find room in your social chattings to say that Miss ——— is at Cambridge, Mass., attending the Harvard summer school. Kindly mail a copy of your paper containing the announcement to the subjoined list of persons." The list mentioned contains about 100 names.—Philadelphia Record.

Raw Egg for a Tonic.

A raw egg is an excellent tonic and is very strengthening. If prepared in the following way it is really a delicious drink, says the Philadelphia Press. Put the yolk of an egg into a dish with a teaspoonful of white sugar, and a teaspoonful of orange or lemon juice, and beat lightly together with a fork. Put the whites on a plate and add a pinch of salt; then with a broad-bladed knife beat it to a stiff froth. Now, as lightly as possible, mix all together in the dish, then as lightly transfer it to a clean tumbler, which it will nearly fill if properly made. It must not stand in a warm place, as it soon becomes liquid and loses its snowy look. Any fruit juice may be used in place of orange or lemon.

Missouri Editor's Defiance.

A Missouri editor who is about to pull up and leave for lack of support sarcastically remarks in parting that editors don't need money. "Don't worry about the editor," he says. "He has a charter from the state to act as doormat for the community. He'll get the paper out somehow, and stand up for you when you run for office, and lie about your pigeon-toed daughter's tackey wedding; and blow about your big-footed sons when they get a $4-a-week job, and weep over your shriveled soul when it is released from your grasping body, and smile at your giddy wife's second marriage. He'll get along. The Lord only knows how—but the editor will get there somehow."—Kansas City Star.

The Magic of a Name.

When Senator Hanna was on his way to Washington recently he and some other travelers got out for an airing at Pittsburg and were left behind, having made a mistake as to the waiting time. The party included several members of the Bonded Warehouse association, one of whom went to hunt for Pullman car accommodation. The Pullman division superintendent was very sorry, but he could do nothing until he learned that Mr. Hanna was among those present. Then a special was made up in a hurry and the travelers were soon on their way once more.

SOME SAYINGS ABOUT WOMEN.

George du Maurier Was Both Humorous and Sarcastic.

No woman's sleeve can be out of style this season, providing it bags somewhat. Would that such was the fashionable edict on men's trousers.

The only girl entitled to crow much now is the one who has a white leghorn rooster on her new hat.

Woman ever is, ever was and ever shall be an enigma in a man's mind.

Sarcasm is a woman's strongest defense, and her meanest.

Most women derive a great deal of satisfaction from being considered martyrs.

It sometimes happens that a woman's first admission that her husband has faults comes when she has to explain where the baby got his.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so good-day!

A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so good-night!

A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—good-by!

—George du Maurier.

NO PROBLEM AT ALL.

Legal Mind Took Little Time to Settle Controversy.

A famous lawyer once had a singular case to settle. A physician came to him in great distress. Two sisters living in the same house had children of equal age, who so resembled each other that their own mothers were unable to distinguish them when they were together.

Now it happened that, by the carelessness of the nurses, the children had become mixed; and how were the mothers to make sure their received back their own infants?

"But, perhaps," said the lawyer, "the children weren't changed at all."

"Oh, but there's no doubt that they were changed," said the physician.

"Are you sure of it?"

"Perfectly."

"Well, if that's the case, why don't you change them back? I don't see any difficulty in the case."—Tit-Bits.

Prehistoric Man in Burmah.

To the Zoologist, R. C. J. Swinhoe contributes some important notes on prehistoric man in Burmah. It will be remembered that in 1894 Dr. F. Noetling announced in the records of the Geological Survey of India the discovery of a bed of ferruginous conglomerate at the oil fields of Yenangyoung of worked flints in association with the remains of Hipparion antilopinus and rhinoceros perimensis, thus carrying back the existence of man in that country to the older Pliocene or upper Miocene. A year later R. D. Oldham expressed the opinion that, in the first place, the flints are not confined to the ferruginous conglomerate, and, secondly, that they are not chipped by man. As the result of a recent visit to the locality Mr. Swinhoe confirms Dr. Noetling's view that the chipped flints, and likewise certain facetted bones, are the works of men's hands, but, on the other hand, he regards them as of the Palaeolithic age, the place where they were found being apparently a workshop of that period.—Nature.

Is the Middle Class Going?

At a banquet in Chicago Judge C. C. Kohlsaat, while deploring the fact of perpetual strikes, of the growing resistance to law and the foaming, seething upheaval which keeps capital ever uneasy, said of American society:

There are two extremes in the saddle to-day, the exceedingly wealthy and the laboring man. The salvation of this country lies with the middle-class people, who read and think and think and read; the class that stands out and says: "You have your rights, but you have not the right to jeopardize the rights or the perpetuity of our country."

This is very true. The saddest social tendency, however, is that which gradually eliminates the middle class, the glory of every nation, and leaves nothing but the very rich and the very poor.

And all authorities are agreed that the trusts are the great agencies to-day that are accomplishing this worst calamity that can befall a nation.—Boston Globe.

He Knew.

They were sitting on a log in the twilight. "And you love me?" he asked.

"Can you ask it?" she answered, with a fond glance.

"I like to hear you say the sweet words over and over again."

"Then I do love you and love you."

"And I must leave you to-morrow."

"Don't say it, dear heart, don't say it," she cried in piteous tones.

"What will you do in the long, sad evenings when I am far, far away?" asked the swain with melancholy fervor.

"What will she do?" answered the grumpy old bachelor who, unobserved, had been resting at the other end of the log. "Why, she'll sit out here and make as big a fool of some other fellow as she's making of you now."

And he disappeared into the gloom.

Vast Wine Cistern.

At Asti, in California, a cistern 104 feet long by 24 feet wide and 21 feet deep was formed in a hillside for the storage of wine. The immense tank was lined with concrete two feet thick and coated inside with a glaze as impermeable as glass. The capacity of the tank is 500,000 gallons.

ISSUES OF THE DAY

GRAVE QUESTIONS ABLY DEALT WITH BY DEEP THINKER.

President Ingalls of the Big Four Railway System Points Out Dangers Which He Considers Confront the People of the United States.

An article written for the Social Service Magazine by one of the great railway magnates of America, Mr. Melville Ezra Ingalls, president of the "Big Four" system, advances views so fundamentally clear and discusses with such deep thought the great problems of the day, as to draw forth the highest praise from the Louisville Courier-Journal, in its issue of Dec. 9.

Mr. Ingalls first points out the danger in the overwhelming political ascendency of one party, showing that the only safe condition is to have two parties, strong and evenly divided. On the subject of "expansion" he says:

"The great danger as to our foreign possessions is that, with no colonial policy we shall drift along until in a fatal hour we will admit these different countries and islands as 'Territories,' and then it is easy to make them 'States.' Then where will our republic be, when Presidents are elected by votes in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines? You may say that this can never be; that I am supposing an impossibility, but let me assure you that the danger is already with us.

"Hawaii has been admitted as a Territory, and if by chance some party in power should conclude that it needed an electoral vote, it is very easy to admit it as a state, and then your presidential election may be decided in Honolulu. Do you dream that our republic will last under such a condition as that?

"Our mistake will be in drifting along without providing safeguards against the danger I have alluded to. We should at once provide by constitutional provisions that no state could be admitted to this Union unless it was composed of contiguous and adjoining territory. This would cut out Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. Then we should create a system of colonial government—or a protectorate, as you please—so that we may hold our trade and commerce in the Caribbean Sea, on the Pacific and in the Orient. For the sake of extending our trade, we cannot trifle with the life of a republic."

Turning from international issues, Mr. Ingalls shows how we are confronted with a further serious question—the struggle between capital and labor—a struggle brought prominently forward by the organization of the most immense trusts and combinations ever known. He says:

"Has the danger to labor increased by the organization of the vast combinations of to-day? The trust is no new danger. It is an aggregation of capital under a new name. How to control it is the question.

"Publicity and taxation, all agree, is one way of controling and keeping the trusts within the limits. Let the full light of day be turned on all their actions, all their statements and all their accounts, and provide either by a franchise or license tax that they shall pay their fair share of the burdens of the people. The tariff to a certain extent is used as a protection for the corporations, and the great danger to our institutions is that these great aggregations of wealth may endeavor to control legislation and do things that smaller bodies could not attempt."

The Courier-Journal says:

"These are pregnant words. They touch the marrow of the question treated. Here is another passage which is full of wise suggestion. Again we quote:

"After all, this danger must be met, as all danger in the Republic must be, and must be overcome by the virtue of the people. We must, so far as possible, protect our small landholders. In their hands is the future of the Republic. Large ownerships of land should be discouraged and prevented."

Mr. Ingalls criticises our present system of taxation, and declares for a franchise tax as one of the fairest ways of raising revenue. He goes on:

"I have always believed in an income tax, and have thought that the decision of our Supreme court against the constitutionality of such a tax was one of the most unfortunate occurrences of the age. We should have a tax on all incomes, large or small, exempting a moderate amount of property from execution and levy. This country is so rich that with a fair system of taxation and economy in expenditure, the tax rate will be so low that it will not be oppressive, and thus we will encourage and protect our small property holders."

Here is Mr. Ingall's conclusion:

"The doctrine of state rights is not a popular one, but I sincerely believe that we must come back to it if we would preserve our government. For a quarter of a century we have been drifting toward a strong government at Washington. Our people rush from state legislature to congress, from state courts to United States courts. Under one pretext or another the right of the state is broken down, and the cry is always for a strong government, forgetting that the more you condense and crowd into Washington the more danger of corruption and wrong. Change this and keep as much at home as you can, so you can watch what is done. Then, indeed, shall we transmit to our children this fair heritage that we received from our fathers."

Indigestion, congested liver, impure blood, constipation, there are what afflict thousands of people who do not know what is the matter with them. They drag along a miserable existence; they apply to the local doctors occasionally, and sometimes obtain a little temporary relief, but the old, tired, worn-out, all-gone, distressed feeling always comes back again worse than ever, until in time they become tired of living, wonder why they were ever born, and why they are alive unless to endure constant suffering. To such sufferers there is a haven of refuge in Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops, which was discovered more than 60 years ago, and which is a wonderful medicine. One trial will convince the most skeptical that any or all of these difficulties may be removed and a perfect cure effected, by taking Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops. About Cubans and Music.

"If there's any truth in what Shakespeare says about the man who has no music in his soul," said Lieutenant George Culver, who has seen service in Cuba, both in the army and out, "the Cubans will always be 'fit for treasons, strategems and spoils.' They have less of what one might call indiginous music than any other people I have ever seen. The Spaniards are essentially musical. So are the Mexicans. In Mexico one hears not only Spanish music, but 'greaser' songs, in which the Indian weirdness comes out strong.

"But over in Cuba everything is borrowed. The native Cuban sings less than the average American when he works. He doesn't begin to sing as much as the Southern negro does. He does not seem to originate melodies. His dance music, even, is not his own. The genius of the Cuban does not lean toward concord of sweet sounds, and that lack in him may account for the great difference between the Cuban and the Mexican character."

Policeman and Parson.

Policemen are, as other men, rather sensitive of allusion to their failures. Richmond has lately suffered at the hands of burglars, and the burglars are still at large. A well known minister met a policeman in the street the other day at Richmond, and could not avoid an allusion to the local topic. "What a number of burglars there are about," he said; "why don't you cops arrest them?"

The policeman regarded the minister solemnly. "Sir," he replied, "there are thousands of people going to hell every day. Why don't you ministers stop them?"—London Chronicle.

Spreading the Good News.

Whatcom, Wash., January 5th.—Mrs. A. M. Ferguson who came here from Winnipeg, Manitoba, relates how that great destroyer of Kidney Complaints, Dodd's Kidney Pills first reached the extreme North West corner of the United States:

"I had used Dodd's Kidney Pills for what the Doctors pronounced Bright's Disease in Winnipeg," Mrs. Ferguson says, "And the disease disappeared entirely. That was about three years ago and I enjoyed good health till about two years later when I removed to Whatcom.

"Whether it was the change of climate, I can't tell but my old trouble returned in full force. My legs were swelled to nearly twice their size. I could not go up or down stairs for about two months.

"My husband hunted Whatcom for Dodd's Kidney Pills but could get none till a Druggist sent away and got them for him.

"I began to get well as soon as I began taking them." Others in Whatcom have learned to know and appreciate Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Faith.

A mother in one of the suburbs of New York, wishing to prepare the minds of her two children for a coming event of great importance, told them that if they would like to have a little brother or sister, she thought, if they prayed earnestly every night and morning, God would send them one.

In due time the desired baby arrived, to the children's great delight, and evidently to the strengthening of their faith, for the next day the father came into his wife's room, saying:

"Look here, Lizzie, this thing has got to stop. I just went into the parlor and found both those children on their knees praying as hard as they could for goats."—New York Mail and Express.

Mrs. Emmons, saved from an operation for Ovaritis, tells how she was cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I am so pleased with the results I obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it.

"I suffered for over five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpleasant discharge, a great weakness, and at times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself once more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't dally with medicines you know nothing about, but take Lydia E. Nerve.

An automobilist was once halted on the highway by an ordinary person.

"You have killed my baby," said the ordinary person, displaying some temper.

"But why do you halt me? Am I not ready to pay for all the damage I do?" demanded the automobilist, with a severe look.

At this, the ordinary person was quite abashed, and drew back, stammering apologies.—Life.

Case No. 15,741.—Rev. Jacob D. Van Doren, of 57 Sixth street, Fond du Lac, Wis., Presbyterian clergyman, says: "A man or woman who has never had kidney complaint or any of the little ills consequent upon irritated or inactive kidneys knows very little about what prolonged suffering is. I had attacks which kept me in the house for days at a time, unable to do anything, and to express what I suffered can hardly be adequately done in ordinary Anglo-Saxon. As time passed, complications set in, the particulars of which I will be pleased to give in a personal interview to any one who requires information. I used plenty of remedies, and, ever on the outlook for something that might check or benefit my condition, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions.

PORTABLE SCHOOLS FOR CITIES

Temporary Structures Found to Be Very Useful in the Crowded Districts.

Although opinions are divided concerning it, there is much talk about the portable schoolhouse in New York. Only a few days ago the matter came up unofficially in the board of education, brought about by the success of an experiment made with them in the borough of Brooklyn and by the word from Boston, where portable schoolhouses have been placed here, there and everywhere when there was need of more room.

The objection that authorities in Manhattan raise is that playground space is so limited that there is hardly room to put portable buildings alongside of schools in the crowded sections of the city, where they would be most valuable. On the other hand, a portable building has been squeezed in by a school in a most populous section of Greenpoint, and it is proving very useful.

Three portable schools are already in operation in Brooklyn, seating altogether 250 children who could not otherwise be accommodated. The theory is that a city should own or hire a number of these portable schoolhouses and move them around to crowded districts. In practice, however, each portable school that has been put up in Brooklyn's limits seems in danger of becoming a permanent structure.

School No. 43, in Greenpoint in Boerum street, near Manhattan avenue, has a big portable house of two rooms, holding 120 pupils. School No. 114 in the Canarsie section in Remsen avenue has two of them, each 22 by 36, and each containing sixty desks. A day's work would bring them to the ground, for there is not a nail about them, and they could be erected, quite as quickly anywhere else. But in both Canarsie and Greenpoint there is no question of their being taken away at present, for no permanent buildings are likely to take their place.

Each schoolhouse has its little porch, says the New York Times, and is heated by the simple expedient of running a steam pipe from the main school. Each is a class-room by itself, except in the portable building in Greenpoint, which is so large that it holds two classes. The cost of these buildings, bought outright, is from $800 to $1,000.

QUEEREST CITY EVER BUILT

Town Founded by Julian Ericson and His Followers in New Mexico.

Of all queer cities ever built the queerest was undoubtedly that erected near the headquarters of the Rio Pecos, in New Mexico, by Julian Ericson and his followers in the middle of last century.

Ericson was an American of Norweg in descent, and inherited some money, together with a taste for occult mysticism, from his father, a Swedenborgian carpenter and contractor.

He early came under the influence of Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism; but quarreled with his leader, and started to found an entirely new sect of his own, the cardinal principle of which was the transmigration of the souls of the faithful while yet on earth. That is to say, he promised that his disciples should, at an early date, be changed into doves, eagles, lions, or, in fact, into whatever beast or bird they chose.

It seems scarcely credible that such an absurd, not to say nauseous, doctrine should have succeeded, even for a time, in attracting converts; but there would seem to be no limit to human credulity and gullibility in such matters. Some hundreds of enthusiasts threw in their lot with him, and, following the example of the Mormons, marched westward from the settled states into the great western wilds.

They finally brought up in what is now San Miguel county, and built a town of frame houses, at the back of each of which was a cage or den suitable to the needs of the particular animal or bird they expected shortly to become.

Of course, the promises of Ericson came to nothing, and in the end he and a number of his disappointed disciples were killed in battle with the Apaches. The others scattered to various parts, the majority going to California to dig for gold; and the stronger of the cages, those erected for the would-be tiger-men and lion-women, were afterward utilized for a brief period as places of confinement for refractory convicts.

BEES INFURIATED BY BLACK

Something in the Color That Calls Forth Their Hatred and Their Stings.

Bees are opposed to black as color. Whether this is because they dislike a symbol of mourning, think black typifies a cloud, or consider it the emblem of death is not known, but the fact remains that bees do not hesitate to display their hatred for things black upon the slightest provocation. I. L. Richards, an apiarist of Littleton, Colorado, can testify to this with regret.

Richards is a chicken fancier as well as a bee expert. He has some of the finest chickens in Colorado, and not long ago made up his mind to have more. He bought some imported chickens from Hong-Kong, and paid a fancy price for them. One great beruffled cock cost him $85, and was as black as a piece of coal, save for one red mark on its back. Richards proudly took the big foreigner from its box and showed it to his friends with exultation. Then he set it free in the chicken yard. The beehives occupy a corner of this yard, and had never caused any trouble. But with the advent of the black rooster, the living emblems of industry rebelled. Richards went back to see his new pet half an hour later, and was amazed to see the yard in a terrible commotion. The great chicken, which had stalked so proudly about his new home a few moments before, to the wonder of the old chickens, was now in pitiful distress. It rushed frantically about the inclosure, squawking strangely and flapping its wings in desperation. Around it swarmed 1,000 bees. Viciously they darted at the unfortunate fowl. The bewildered stranger from across the seas dashed vainly about for a few minutes, to the alarm of the other chickens. It struck out with its wings and feet. Turn as it would, it could not escape the infuriated bees. At last it fell, and the relentless winged torturers settled upon it, stinging it to death.

NOVEL KIND OF INSURANCE.

English Company Takes Risks Upon the Surgeons' Operating Skill.

In England people of moderate means are beginning to insure themselves against surgical operations. The plan is that subscribers who pay an annual fee shall be entitled either to free admittance to a hospital or nursing at home and a free operation or to a fixed sum paid down to defray the cost of an operation if one becomes necessary. In England, as here, the cost of surgical repairs to the human body has become oppressively great to persons who just manage to pay their way. People who are obviously poor get a great deal of excellent surgical and medical treatment in hospitals and elsewhere for nothing, but for the next class above them a serious illness—especially if it involves an operation—is almost ruinous.

It would seem as if the time was near when societies for insurance against specialists might be profitably organized in the larger American cities. The specialist has come to be a very important—indeed, an indispensable—institution, especially to families in which there are children. The office of the family doctor has now become simplified to the task of coming in and telling the patient which specialist to go to. It is not that specialists charge too much, for their honorable services are above price. It is that landlord, butcher, baker, grocer, milkman, coalman, dentist and trained nurse do not leave you money enough to pay them appropriately. To subscribe a considerable sum annually and have all the repairs and desirable improvements made in one's family without further disbursement would be a comparatively simple way out of a troublesome predicament.—Harper's Weekly.

Importance of Good Cookery.

More things are wrought by indigestion than this world dreams of. Napoleon lost battles through it; it helped Carlyle to reap immortality. A German lawyer, lately deceased, seems to have been of this opinion, and his form of practical philosophy likes us better than the obscurities of Hegel or the theories of Kant. Herr Botta, the lawyer in our mind, has left ten thousand sterling for the foundation of a school of cookery. This is better than many free libraries which underlies this generosity. He testifies that in his experience bad cookery is the cause of much conjugal unhappiness, and he hopes to set philanthropists an example which shall go far to remove the evil. We entirely approve his opinion. "Feed the brute" may be an exhaustive guide to domestic bliss, but the average housewife never seems to realize how much the word "feed" implies. Great virtue lies in a definition.

Hides of the Sea Elephant.

A New England sea captain named Cleveland has created a sensation by bringing home a few hides of the sea elephant, a giant seal thus far hunted for oil alone. The hides are said to be more flexible and tougher than those of cattle, and a process has been invented which produces from them a grade of leather superior to anything hitherto known. The elephants have increased rapidly in numbers during the last score of years on account of their comparative immunity from slaughter. Capt. Cleveland's ship is the first vessel to sail after sea elephant hides, and at present she is the only vessel after the seals for any reason whatever.

REED'S METHOD OF WORK.

Would Postpone It to the Last Minute for Light Literature.

Many stories are told illustrative of Reed's methods of work. He was extremely fond of what is called "light literature" and would postpone work on a task he had before him to the last possible moment in order to finish some story or romance. He always managed to get up steam, however, in time to complete his work.

For weeks before his graduation from college he was buried in the treasures of fiction contained in a friend's library. The number of speakers for commencement day had been changed that year from fifteen to ten, and Reed was reminded of the fact by a college mate.

"Time enough yet. Why I have five weeks!" he answered.

"But the other fellows have been working five months!"

"Never mind," he answered as he went on with his reading. "I'll have a place on the program." And he did so, standing fifth on the list of commencement orators.

Next to fiction he was fondest of oratory. He was a student of parliamentary law and of oratory long before he himself became an authority by the publication of the standard works, "Reed's Rules" and "Modern Eloquence."

Another time Reed was asked to contribute an article to a magazine by a certain date. As usual, he put it off. Finally the last night of the allotted time arrived, and Reed sat down at his desk, intending to scribble off an apology for his inability and a refusal to write the article. Suddenly an idea occurred to him. He wrote feverishly until after 2 o'clock the next morning and finished the article in the one sitting.

WAS SIMPLE WHEN EXPLAINED.

But Phonetic Spelling of Name Puzzled Hotel Clerk.

The man walked up to the hotel register and signed his name, with a flourish, "E. K. Phthologyrrh." "Look here, Turner," said the clerk, who knew him very well, "is somebody on your track? Where did you get that outlandish name?"

"My boy, you're slow," replied Turner, airily. "That's my same old name written in plain English and pronounced as it is written—just Turner. Look at it. Of course I do it just to make people guess. They wonder about my nationality and the pronunciation of my name. I can hear them talk about it. But, as I said before, it's English spelling."

"Will you kindly explain?" asked the clerk.

"'Phth,' there is the sound of 't' in 'phthisis,'" began Turner; "'olo,' there is the sound of 'ur' in 'colonel;' 'gn,' there is the 'n' in 'gnat;' 'yrrh' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now if that does not spell Turner what does it spell?"

"Well," said the clerk, "it is lucky for me that the majority of men don't register their names phonetically."

Charity Richly Rewarded.

Henry Douglas, an ice wagon driver of Paducah, Ky., cast his bread upon the waters, to some purpose. He learned recently that a man he befriended two years ago has left him the snug sum of $5,000. In 1900 a boy tramp, known as "Greasy Jim," struck Paducah sick, penniless and hungry. Douglas gave the lad clothing and food and a place to sleep. In a few weeks the youth was well again and left town. A few days ago Douglas received news that James Holman, a soldier in the Philippines, who died in a Manila hospital, had named him as his next friend. This recalled to Douglas' mind that "Greasy Jim's" last name was Holman. He later received a formal notice from an insurance company that the soldier Holman had left a life insurance policy to the amount of $5,000, Douglas being named in the policy as beneficiary.

The French Academy.

The French academy is one of the five academies, and the most eminent, constituting the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by the Cardinal Richelieu, and reorganized in 1816. It is composed of forty members, the new member elected by the remaining thirty-nine members for life, after personal application and the submission of their nomination to the head of the state. It meets twice weekly, at the palace Mazarin, 23 Quai Conti, Paris, and is "the highest authority on everything appertaining to the niceties of the French language, to grammar, rhetoric and poetry, and the publication of the French classics." The chief officer is the secretary, who has a life tenure of his position. A chair in the academy is the highest ambition of most literary Frenchmen.

Tidal Waves in Harness.

A proposal is on foot a Hikurahi, in New Zealand, for the utilization of the tidal waters of the place in the generation of electricity. The plan is to build a tunnel through a narrow neck of land at Pelorus sound, eighty-eight feet in length. The rise and fall of the tide at this place varies from six feet and seven feet to ten feet and eleven feet, and the tunnel would, it is said, command 50,000 acres of tidal water. It is not stated how the power would be generated, but presumably the tunnel would be made below the level of the lowest ebb tide and turbines would be installed at either end of the tunnel. The scheme has been taken up by a local company, which has a capital of $375,000.

$3.00 W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES $3.50 UNION MADE
W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 and $3.00 shoes than any other two manufacturers, in the world, which proves their superiority; they are worn by more people in all stations of life than any other make. Because W. L. Douglas is the largest manufacturer he can buy cheaper and produce his shoes at a lower cost than other concerns, which enables him to sell shoes for $3.50 and $3.00 equal in every way to those sold elsewhere for $4 and $5.00.
W. L. Douglas $3.50 and $3 shoes are worn by thousands of men who have been paying $4 and $5, not believing they could get a first-class shoe for $3.50 or $3.00.
He has convinced them that the style, fit, and wear of his $3.50 and $3.00 shoes is just as good. Placed side by side it is impossible to see any difference. A trial will convince.
Notice Increase: 1899 Sales: $2,820,000; 1902 Sales: $5,024,340; a gain of $2,203,450 in four years.

Too bad some people always go to an entertainment to make trouble.

Mr. Minkle has moved his office building to his store lot, and will open up a real estate and locating business there.

Our Xmas tree was voted a success by the majority of the crowd in attendance. Miss Forsberg is to be congratulated on her splendid work.

Lost or Stolen—At the Xmas tree in District 53, a yard of white ribbon and a cheap handkerchief. Finder return to our worthy P. M. for reward.

A certain young man in Breeze is seriously looking for a law suit for slander. If he is looking for trouble he might be able to find both hands full.

The law suit in the case of Cedar township grader occurs in a few days. It is to be feared some of our "town fathers" will see storms in consequence.

(Not) The Society Reporter.

For Kickers.

Here is something from the Belgrade Tribune that the chronic kickers of Thief River Falls ought to read over. Read it over and think about it you people who can't see any good in anything or any body.

"The kickers on the farm are not so hard to get along with as the kickers in town. On the farm there is the kicking cow and our long earned friend, and mule, while in town there is the old moss back, who is opposed to letting his business be known through the local press and who wants all the privileges of municipal living without paying for them, and blocks, as far as he can, every municipal improvement. The cow may be sold for beef and the mule traded for a shot gun, but nothing but a funeral will get rid of a town kicker.

There was another heavy increase in immigration this year. The complete statistics are not at hand, but at the port of New York 545,750 immigrants were admitted against 407,703 last year. If those admitted at the port of New York bear the same proportion to the total admitted as they did last year the figures mean an addition of about 700,000 foreigners to our population. From a fourth to a third of the New York immigration were Italians, with Austro-Hungarians of various races coming next and Russians and Finns third. Our national digestion will have to be kept in good repair to assimilate so large an amount of foreign substance.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

GOOD WORK

Fire Department Saves Town from Destruction.

By the timely discovery and the good work of the Fire Department, Thief River Falls was saved from what night have resulted in the destruction of the entere business portion of the city yesterday morning. The fire was discoved in John Morgan's saloon at a little after 8 o'clock, and alarm was at once turned in. At one time it looked as if the fire could not be controlled, but it was put entirely out inside of two hours. Considerable damage was done to the building and also to the one adjourning which was occupied by the Delmonico restaurant. Both buildings were owned by James Meehan and were insured for $500 and $300 respectively.

The greatest damage was done to John Morgan's saloon, but it is fully covered by insurance, he, having $2,000 in S. F. Staples companies. Knute Anderson, the proprietor of the Delmonico restaurant had no insurance and his loss was quite heavy. Most of the goods in the New Drug store were removed, but they were carefully handled and were not damaged to any considerabe extent. The loss is covered by insurance.

The insurance adjuster for S. F. Staples' companies happened to arrive in the city yesterday noon and will adjust the loss at once.

WATER WORKS

City Fathers Discussing This Subject.

The city council held an informal meeting last Saturday evening and discussed the matter of establishing a system of water works in Thief River Falls. The members of the council are all in favor of establishing a system here and it is probable that some action will be taken this spring or summer. An attempt will be made to drill a well on property back of the city hall which is owned by the city and if sufficient water can be found, a standpipe will be erected in some convenient place Electric power will probably be employed at the pumping station, and this would cost the city but a small amount.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

We have unlimited money to loan on improved farms. Will loan on final receiver's receipt. Interest reasonable. No delays. Northern Real Estate & Mortgage Co. Office next First State Bank.

MESSAGE OF THE GOVERNOR

VAN SANT REPORTS ON THE CONDITION OF STATE AFFAIRS.

FINANCES ARE IN GOOD SHAPE

COMMENDS THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

TAKES UP THE MERGER QUESTION

OFFICIALS ARE DOING ALL IN THEIR POWER TO DEFEAT CONSOLIDATION.

The following is Gov. Van Sant's message:

Pursuant to a duty imposed by the constitution of the state it is deemed expedient at this time to give your honorable body such information as is possessed in relation to state affairs, and to submit for your consideration suggestions and recommendations which I hope may be helpful. Understanding fully the necessity of co-operation between the legislative and executive departments, and appreciating our respective obligations, let us with mutual confidence and with the earnest desire to faithfully serve the people of our commonwealth enter upon the discharge of the duties assigned to us.

The treasury department being one of the most important, and as the demands upon that department for the next biennial period will be large, the matter of providing for necessary funds must receive your careful attention. The state auditor estimates the receipts and disbursements of the revenue fund for the fiscal year, ending July 31, 1903, 1904 and 1905, as follows:

Aug. 1, 1902. Amount in the treasury to the credit of the revenue fund	$799,563.01
1903. Receipts, including above cash balance	4,274,563.01
1903. Disbursements, including all appropriations in force Aug. 1, 1902	4,107,043.13
1904. Receipts	3,555,000.00
1904. Disbursements	3,280,000.00
1905. Receipts	3,655,000.00
1905. Disbursements	3,550,000.00
There will be an estimated surplus July 31, 1905, of	427,510.88

In the receipts the auditor has reckoned the state tax at one mill on $800,000,000. The item of disbursements for the three fiscal years contains $700,000 for new buildings and extraordinary repairs. The estimate of the amount for new buildings is no doubt near the limit. Under the most favorable circumstances it could not exceed $1,000,000 without increasing the tax levy, and that should be avoided. In order to avoid this I urge the strictest economy and the most careful investigation of every appropriation asked for.

STATEMENT OF FINANCES.

The state treasury had credit to the several funds as follows:

Balances in Treasury at Close of Business Dec. 31, 1902—

Revenue fund
Soldiers' relief fund	$24,294.17
Funding tax fund	80,823.19
Permanent school fund	184,810.93
General school fund	171,310.88
Permanent university fund	50,397.77
General university fund	7,718.32
Internal improvement fund	10,073.08
Internal improvement land fund	17,827.24
Internal improvement land fund interest	1,252.12
State institutions fund	60,701.00
State institutions fund interest	23,500.21
Swamp land fund	42,023.48
Grain inspection fund	110,188.34
Total	$811,720.73
Less revenue fund overdraft	161,151.24
	$650,578.49

Apparently we are in first-class condition financially. We are not obliged to borrow money. We have only a small bonded indebtedness, and this was incurred some forty or more years ago, and is being liquidated as rapidly as the law will permit. We have not had to incur a dollar of bonded indebtedness to build our new state capitol; in fact, we have $3,000,000 worth of the bonds of other states in our treasury, and in addition millions more of the very best securities drawing a large amount of interest. I refer to securities in the nature of loans to counties, cities, villages and townships, and to state land contracts. These investments represent our permanent school and university fund, as follows:

Permanent School Fund—
Cash in treasury	$318,285.41
Land contracts	3,650,873.42
Bonds as follows:
Alabama consols "A," 5 per cent	$494,200.00
Alabama consols "B," 5 per cent	54,000.00
Alabama consols "C," 4 per cent	10,000.00
Alabama funding, 4 per cent	140,755.00
Delaware, 3 per cent	4,000.00
Massachusetts, 3½ per cent	2,505,000.00
Massachusetts, 3 per cent	300,000.00
Minnesota capitols, 4 per cent	60,000.00
Minnesota capitols, 3 per cent	750,000.00
Minnesota school districts, city, county and townships, 4 and 5 per cent	1,721,715.23
Louisiana, 4 per cent	150,000.00
Tennessee, 4½ per cent	270,000.00
Utah, 3½ per cent	100,000.00
Virginia, 3 per cent	1,451,430.00
Minnesota funding, 3½ per cent	152,000.00
	$14,310,380.00

The sale of school lands and of timber on school lands during the fall of 1902 have added over a million dollars to the permanent fund, so that the fund now amounts to nearly fifteen and one-half million dollars.

Permanent University Fund, Aug. 1, 1902—
Cash in treasury	$50,237.41
Land contracts (including $86,703.48 transferred internal improvement land contracts)	381,503.00
Bonds as follows:
Alabama consols "A," 5 per cent	$42,800.00
Delaware, 3 per cent	131,000.00
Massachusetts, 3 per cent	80,000.00
Minnesota funding, 3½ per cent	214,000.00
Minnesota villages, 4 per cent	38,700.00
Tennessee, 4½ per cent	80,000.00
Virginia, 3 per cent	207,245.05
Experimental farm	8,500.00
	$1,334,035.55

It will thus be seen that our school and university funds amount to about seventeen million dollars. It is estimated that this fund, when all our lands are sold and all revenue from other sources secured will amount to $20,000,000 or more.

By a wise provision of law the fund is to remain permanent—only the interest can be used. Annually more than one-half a million dollars from this source is available for educational purposes.

HOSPITALS FOR THE INSANE.

There were on July 31, 1902, in our state hospitals 3,892 patients. During the past two years there was an increase of 201. The following table will give the entire number of custodial people in each institution and the total increase:

Institutions—	Aug. 1, 1900.	Aug. 1, 1901.	Aug. 1, 1902.

The number of wards of the state will increase with our growth and we must provide for their care and maintenance. It is a problem difficult of solution, and in this connection I desire to quote my message of two years ago:

"I particularly call your attention to the proposed law which the board urges your honorable body to enact regarding each county from which patients are committed to pay $1.50 per week for each patient for the purpose of partially defraying the expenses of his care and maintenance. While this would not to any great extent decrease the cost, it might have a tendency to the exercise of greater caution in making commitments. Other states have similar laws and I am informed that good results follow. Many times mildly insane patients, who could and should be cared for at home, by friends and relatives are sent to our hospitals, under the policy of paying the whole of the expense for the care of the insane regardless of their financial condition great abuses have arisen, for often weak-minded persons or those who are old and feeble, being somewhat demented, are permitted to become inmates of these institutions, whereas they should have been cared for by those who are in duty bound to support them and not have been sent to our hospitals. This practice must in some way be stopped."

After two years of observation and careful investigation I am satisfied that if the course above can be adopted that it would in a measure settle the question ever present with us of new buildings. I would rather go further this year and state that in my judgment where the patient or his immediate relatives are able that he or they should pay the amount named and not the county. In all other diseases (and insanity is a form of disease) the patient if sent to a hospital for treatment pays the entire cost. Then I am satisfied too, that scores, if not hundreds, of harmless people are in our hospitals that should be kept at home and would be if this plan is enacted into law. The board of control in its report urges this plan or one similar, and I trust that you will give the matter most careful consideration.

STATE PRISON AND BINDING TWINE PLANT.

Owing to public criticism concerning the management of the state prison, and especially of the binding twine plant, as soon as it was possible to make a change Hon. Henry Wolfer was reappointed warden. The new management took immediate steps to remedy some of the evils complained of. That it was most successfully accomplished is shown by the following facts:

During 1901 there was manufactured, in round numbers, 5,500,000 pounds of twine. This was sold at an average of about 3 cents per pound below the prices at which twine of equal grade and quality was sold by jobbers and manufacturers to the dealers of the state, which would make an actual saving of $100,000 to the purchasers of prison twine.

The profit to the state on binding twine, in round numbers, was $33,000.

The showing for 1902 gives better results than the preceding season. Amount manufactured, 5,500,000 pounds. The twine was sold at 2½ cents per pound cheaper than twine sold by jobbers. This will prove an actual saving of $125,000 to the farmers of Minnesota who purchased twine the present season, and if you consider the reduced price, at least 1 cent per pound, of all twine sold in the state, some 18,000,000 pounds, caused by competition with prison twine, there is a further saving of $180,000, or a total for the year of $305,000.

Not only has the twine been of superior quality and thus great saving to the purchaser resulted, but there has been a clear saving to the state of $64,000, which, added to the $33,000, makes a clear gain in two years in favor of twine plant of $77,000.

This splendid showing was made possible by the adoption of business methods and placing at the head of the prison a thorough business man and one who fully understands the duties required of him. So well has the twine plant been managed that there is now to the credit of the revolving fund $600,000.

The financial showing for the entire prison, too, is most excellent, as will be seen from the following statement:

For 1900 there was a deficit of $51.88 for each convict.

For 1901, $13.62, while for 1902, the year wholly under the management of Warden Wolfer, there was a gain of $70.57 for every prisoner in the institution.

I have gone somewhat into detail in order that you may be advised as to the excellent record made in the state prison during the past two years.

The prison is overcrowded and additional cell room must be provided for at this session of the legislature.

BOARD OF CONTROL.

At the last general session a bill was passed now known as the board of control bill, and pursuant to its provisions a board was appointed and immediately entered upon the discharge of its duties. The wisdom of the adoption of the board of control system has been amply vindicated. A brief year of the administration of the board has passed and its work has surpassed the most sanguine expectations of its friends. Prompted by the same abiding faith that recommended its creation, which has been strengthened a hundred-fold by its splendid work during the past year, it is safe to predict that the board of control system will be permanently maintained. The success of this system in Wisconsin and Iowa, coupled with its effective work in our state, will, in my judgment, eventually result in its adoption by every state in the Union. The system has proved so satisfactory in the State of Wisconsin that Gov. La Follette used the following vigorous language:

"Any party that goes before the state with a plank in its platform advocating the repeal of the law will be buried, as it should be, in ignominious defeat."

I firmly believe that the institutions in charge of the board of control have never been in a higher state of efficiency and that the inmates thereof are safe in the hands of the board, and I do not hesitate to say that the great saving to the state has been brought solely by the new department in the purchase of supplies and by enlarged and improved business methods; and not in the least at the expense of efficiency.

The impression seems to have gone out that under the present system our home markets are discriminated against and that markets outside of our state are unnecessarily favored. I find the following table in the report, which speaks for itself:

	1900-1901.	1901-1902.
Purchased in towns where institutions are located	$501,365.03	$140,706.75
Purchased in towns outside of institution towns	263,337.00	371,377.75
Purchased in other states	67,350.07	66,463.06
	$832,053.30	$578,547.56

The figures for 1900-1901 being compiled by the stewards from institution books, and for 1901-1902 from the books of the board of control. These figures show that the board of control not only purchased $53,505.83 worth of supplies less than during the former year, but nearly $7,000 worth less from other states. These facts certainly disarm the criticism suggested.

The board has saved to the state a very large sum of money, as will be shown by the following table:

	Decrease Per Capita Cost.	Number Inmates.	Savings.
Anoka asylum	$48 01	121	$5,809 30
Hastings asylum	34 51	133	4,611 00
Fergus Falls hospital	15 40	1,350	20,030 14

School for deaf	18 50	102	4,751 50
School for blind	15 16	79	1,203 70
School for feeble-minded	10 92	769	8,397 48
State public school	16 00	228	3,605 14
State training school	14 68	390	5,728 41
State reformatory	79 54	170	13,577 41
State prison	31 25	547	17,118 75
Total saving			$109,335 34

While considering the work of this important board, permit me to call your attention to the conflict between it and boards having in charge educational institutions. It is unbusinesslike, and in a measure destroys efficiency, to have these institutions cared for by more than one board. Because of the attempt to place state educational institutions under the management of the board of control much friction has arisen on account of the impossibility of determining where the authority of one board begins and the other ceases. I am strongly of opinion that the management of the university and the normal schools should be wholly removed from the board of control. It was not the intention of those who originally favored the measure to include them. In other states separate boards control their educational institutions. It is not for the best interests of these institutions, and, besides, the duties of the board of control are so enormous in caring for the other institutions that they cannot properly perform the extra work which is placed upon them by charging them with the control of the educational institutions. The affairs of the university and normal schools will be safe in the hands of the regents and the normal school board.

In view of the facts stated, and believing that the best interests of the institutions so demand, I earnestly recommend the enactment of a law removing the educational institutions of our state from the management of the board of control.

We find the same difficulty in the management of the school for the deaf and blind at Faribault, and the state public school for indigent children at Owatonna. Two boards are unnecessary; in my judgment the board of control should have the entire management of these institutions. This is in accord with the original intention.

In the report of the board many recommendations will be found, and I commend the report to you for your most careful consideration.

WORK OF THE RAILROAD AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION—GRAIN DEPARTMENT.

In this branch of the state service you will find the most thorough discipline. Practical service prevails. All high positions are filled by promoting men in the service. Helpers are promoted to be inspectors only after a thorough test and examination.

The cost of the service in the grain department has been decreased in the face of the fact that the capacity of cars has been practically doubled.

The department is so well managed that the grades established on all kinds of grain are accepted the world over.

The railway department for years has been hampered in its work from the fact that practically no two railway companies have the same system of bookkeeping, nor have the same basis for reporting the gross earnings for the purpose of taxation. This matter has been taken up by the present commission and an uniform system has been adopted and accepted by the various railway companies.

This question might properly be the subject of legislation, and your attention is particularly called to it in considering the new proposed gross earnings law. Much litigation has been successfully conducted by the commission, some of which is of particular importance.

Rates on live stock have been reduced over a large territory. All roads charging over 3 cents have been required to reduce passenger rates to a maximum rate of 3 cents per mile.

I would suggest for the consideration of your honorable body the extending of the state law so as to prohibit the railway companies from raising the rates on any commodities or merchandise or to so change its classification as to have that effect, between stations, in this state, without first obtaining the consent of the commission.

I take this occasion to say that the commission has at all times worked in harmony with the chief executive, and its work is commended.

It is proper to add that the work has been somewhat hampered by lack of funds, and as this is one of the most important branches of the state government, I suggest this matter be given your serious consideration at this session.

DAIRY AND FOOD DEPARTMENT.

During the past two weeks the efficiency of the state dairy and food commission has been brought to a greater state of helpfulness, to both the dairy and mercantile interests of our state, than ever before since its creation. At least 100 more creameries and 25 more cheese factories are now in operation. Every one of the 700 creameries and 100 cheese factories have been inspected once and many of them twice during the biennial period, and the excellence of the dairy products is in a large measure due to the efforts of the department in assisting creamery officers and patrons to better methods, and especially to the inspection and management of the state education butter and cheese contests conducted monthly from April 1, 1901, to May 1, 1902.

Minnesota butter commands a premium in the Eastern market of 1 cent a pound, which upon the output of 55,000,000 pounds means a net gain for quality of $550,000. This being true, how earnest should be our efforts to dot every one of Minnesota's eighty-two counties with creameries, especially in the twenty-one in which none are now in operation. No better or more promising dairy field is now open to the energetic husbandman than in Northern Minnesota, which, with its healthful climate, pure water and luxuriant grasses, awaits their coming.

Great credit, too, is due this department, for it not only advances the dairy interests, but gives encouragement to diversified farming, which is so essential to our future prosperity.

Food inspections have been equally meritorious and the results commendable. Approximately 12,000 food samples have been analyzed by the department chemists. These samples have been gathered from every city, town and hamlet in the state by the corps of inspectors, and wherever the result of any analysis has demonstrated the illegality of any article, prompt and vigorous means have been taken to drive them from the market. Thus the people of the state are sure that the food they consume is free from impurities or injurious ingredients and the public health thereby protected.

PUBLIC EXAMINER.

The office of public examiner is being conducted with the greatest efficiency. This department is rapidly growing in importance and the necessity of diligent and painstaking service in the administration of the office is appreciated by the public. At the last general session a law was passed making it the duty of the public examiner to examine the books and accounts of all corporations which by law pay taxes to the state on a gross earnings basis. Under this law the public examiner has been enabled to examine the books of the different railway companies and to ascertain whether the amounts required by law on gross earnings have been properly computed, and paid to the state. These examinations have brought a large sum of money to the state treasury owing to the discovery of errors and oversight in computations on the part of certain railway companies. This law imposes new and most important duties upon the department. I commend, for your careful consideration, the report of the examiner which contains many valuable suggestions. I especially urge upon your attention the statements in relation to the gross earnings law. In view of the importance of the work of this department, and in order that the laws pertaining thereto may be enforced, I [illegible] that an adequate appropriation be made.

[illegible] is necessary to prove that the prosperity and welfare of a people is vastly improved by a perfected system of highways. Good roads not only add value to every acre of land in their vicinity, but they also lessen isolation, so undesirable in rural life, by bringing people into closer social relations. The pecuniary benefits are also marked, for good roads lessen the expense of reaching the markets and railway stations with the products of the farm. Fully 90 per cent of all our people primarily have to pass over our highways. Good roads have their decided effect upon the establishment of rural free delivery routes. Where roads are good the free delivery system comes more quickly. The postmaster general of the United States is reported to have said:

"At present we are only installing the system in the most available places; when application is made for rural delivery we send an inspector to look the territory over. Particular attention is paid to the roads; if they are good the chances are just so much in favor of the system; but if the roads are of clay, wet and muddy most of the time, that settles it right there. We have got to have good roads for the system at the present time."

The State of Minnesota should not be found lagging in this work, for in my judgment much will be added to our growth and prosperity through a perfected system of good roads. In order to establish such a system, after the most careful consideration I am satisfied that the legislature should, under the authority given by the constitutional amendment adopted in 1898, provide for a state highway commission and enact the necessary legislation to carry out the provisions of that amendment.

VICKSBURG COMMISSION.

The legislature of 1902 passed an act for the appointment of four commissioners "to co-operate with the National Park commission in ascertaining and exactly determining the positions of Minnesota troops and organizations in the siege of Vicksburg, and also to recommend to the governor of the state such subsequent legislation as will, in the opinion of the commission, permanently and suitably mark the position of such troops so ascertained, and worthily commemorate the valor and services of Minnesota soldiers in the campaign of Vicksburg."

The commission was composed of the following gentlemen: Gen. John B. Sanborn, Gen. L. F. Howard, Gen. C. C. Andrews and Capt. Henry S. Hurter, a representative of each Minnesota regiment and of the battery engaged in the battles in the vicinity of Vicksburg.

These gentlemen met July 4, in Vicksburg, and organized by electing Gen. Sanborn, president, and Gen. Andrews, secretary. After a careful survey of the field and a personal examination of the park, the positions were located.

In closing their report the commission make the following recommendations:

"We therefore respectfully recommend that your excellency in your next message to the legislature ask for an appropriation of $25,000, to be expended in the erection of a suitable monument in Vicksburg National Park, to commemorate the services of the Minnesota soldiers that rendered military services in that campaign, and those who fell in the assault and siege of Vicksburg in 1863, and in additional appropriation of $15,000 for the erection of three permanent bronze tablets, suitably inscribed—one upon Baldwin's Ferry road on the spot or near where the officers and soldiers of the Fourth Minnesota Infantry fell on May 22, 1863; one on the graveyard road near the enemy's redan where the Fifth Minnesota Infantry made its assault, and a third designating the principal position occupied by the First Minnesota battery."

At least three of the commissioners live in St. Paul and I am sure would be pleased to meet with the committee to whom their report will be submitted, and discuss fully the desirability of appropriating the sum asked for, or one sufficient for the purpose mentioned in the act, and also as to the time for the commencement of the work.

Our state is justly proud of the record made by her valiant sons during the great war to save the Union. Very properly suitable monuments have been erected at Gettysburg and Chickamauga commemorating the brave deeds of her heroic sons. There was no more important victory won than Vicksburg during the terrible struggle. Not only the entire Confederate army surrendered but the Confederacy was cut in twain and the Mississippi river once more was flowing, as Lincoln declared it ever should, "unvexed to the sea."

Let this monument be erected and these tablets placed that future generations may know that Minnesota honors the men, living and dead, who then and there made so many sacrifices that the nation might live. It is to these men and their comrades that we owe all the rights and privileges that we enjoy under the flag that makes us free.

THE NEW CAPITOL.

The work on our new capitol has not progressed as rapidly as was anticipated. It was confidently expected that this legislature would assemble in the new building, and that the sum appropriated by the last legislature would be sufficient to complete the structure. While the work has progressed as rapidly as possible under the circumstances, it will take eighteen months more to complete it, and the amount of money necessary to do the work as suggested by the commission will amount to $1,500,000. This includes the entire cost of completion for occupancy, and also the purchase price of the necessary piece of real estate at the southeast corner of the present site.

There are many reasons for the delay and the increased expense; for the exact information and data I refer you to the report of the commission. Prices of labor and material have greatly advanced; contractors having plenty of work were slow to bid, thus lessening competition, and when bids were received they were often so high that rejection was necessary. New plans had to be prepared looking toward more economy of construction in order to come within the appropriation. This took time and every article used or to be used was increasing in price. These are some of the difficulties under which the commission had to labor. Much progress, however, has been made. "The dome has been completed; the grand entrance steps and platforms and walls and balustrades (built of Minnesota granite) are nearly finished. Roofing and skylights, interior fireproof floors and partition walls are in place, the structural work being thus completed."

The building is enclosed and the steam plant is furnishing sufficient heat to enable work to progress during the winter, and plastering and lighting equipments are now in progress.

I would recommend that the amount deemed necessary to finish the capitol be appropriated. This will be sufficient to do this and complete the interior to correspond with the beautiful exterior. This edifice, if finished as contemplated with Minnesota stone and marble, will compare favorably with any state building of like character in the United States. Our capitol should be the pride of every citizen of the commonwealth, and in order that it may be it should be completed as designed by the architect and recommended by the commission. The sum should not only be appropriated, but appropriated early in the session, so that the commission may at once accept bids already submitted and thus complete the building in the shortest period of time. The building should be prepared for occupancy as soon as possible, for many of our state departments, such as the board of health, the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners and the board of control, are located some distance from the present capitol building, thereby causing great expense and at the same time great inconvenience in transacting business of the state. With sufficient funds provided there is no reason why the new capitol should not be completed and ready for occupancy July 4, 1904.

GROSS EARNINGS LAW.

A matter of much importance and one in which the people of our state are greatly interested will, without doubt, enlist your attention. I refer to the gross earnings system under which railway companies pay into the state treasury in lieu of taxes 3 per cent of their gross earnings. Our state seems committed to this policy and the simple question for your consideration is, should the rate now fixed by law be increased? At the last general assembly of your body, after the most careful deliberation and thorough discussion, it was concluded that the rate should be changed from 3 per cent to 4 per cent and a law to that effect was passed. This law could not, however, take effect and be in force unless the same was adopted and ratified by a majority of the electors of the state voting at the election at which the same was submitted.

Pursuant to this requirement of the constitution the law referred to was submitted to the electors of our state at the general election held on the 4th day of November last. The required majority was not received. This result is, however, not to be regarded as an expression of the people against the measure. It was due to the fact that many of the voters did not vote upon this important measure because their attention had not been called specifically to it, and its import was not sufficiently understood; and also the fact that the measure appeared upon the general ballot, which led to oversight and confusion on the part of the voter; and from the further fact that great doubt existed in the minds of the electors whether the measure as submitted did increase the revenue or not. This result suggests most emphatically that some plan should be devised which will require electors to give attention to measures requiring ratification and to proposed constitutional amendments. Under an old law measures of this character were placed at the bottom of the ballot, but owing to the fact that the voters failed to heed them, the law was changed requiring such measures to be placed at the top of the ballot. It was hoped that this change, which gives measures of this character the most conspicuous place upon the ballot, would solve the difficulty. The result has not been what was anticipated and it seems imperative that your body should so legislate that the attention of voters will be more definitely called to these measures. To meet the difficulty referred to, I would suggest a plan, to which I am advised there is no legal objection, and I submit the same for your careful consideration. It is to so amend existing laws that each proposed constitutional amendment or measure requiring ratification, be placed upon a separate ballot, and that such ballot upon being voted, if deemed necessary, be placed by the judges of election in a separate ballot box. This plan seems to be feasible and I believe would effectively meet the difficulty referred to.

Before leaving the gross earnings subject permit me to call your attention to an important difference between the language in the present law and the law submitted to the people for adoption at the last election. This difference gave rise to considerable discussion during the recent campaign, and in view of the fact that the difference referred to makes a radical change in the method of computing gross earnings, great care should be exercised in framing a bill relating to this subject. That the difference may be fully understood I quote from the present law as follows:

"Gross earnings . . . . shall be construed to mean all earnings on business beginning and ending within the state and a proportion based upon the proportion of the mileage within the state to the entire mileage over which such business is done."

In the law passed at the last general session and submitted to the people at the late election the term gross earnings is declared and construed, "to mean all earnings on business beginning and ending within the state and a proportion of earnings on all interstate business passing through, into or out of the state as the mileage operated within the state bears to the entire mileage operated by such company."

Hence, under the present law, gross earnings upon interstate business is arrived at by taking the proportion based upon the proportion of the mileage within the state to the entire mileage over which business is done, while under the law recently submitted to the voters the gross earnings upon interstate business is arrived at by taking a proportion of earnings on all interstate business passing through, into or out of the state as the mileage operated within the state bears to the entire mileage operated by such company.

In the one case the basis for computation is the proportion of mileage within the state to the haul, while in the other the basis is the proportion of mileage within the state to the actual mileage operated by the company.

If, in your wisdom, you conclude to pass a law increasing the rate, I earnestly recommend that you adopt the language of the present law, unless you are thoroughly satisfied that there are serious legal objections thereto. In any event, let the bill be so drawn that there can be no question of an increase of one per cent above the present rate.

In view of the fact that officials and others who have given the matter thorough consideration have concluded that a rate of 4 per cent is just and equitable and substantially exacts from railway companies what they would be required to pay if they were subject to direct taxation, I recommend that the rate be fixed at 4 per cent.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

At the last general session a law was passed providing for a tax commission whose duty it was to frame a tax code for our state and also to prepare a bill or bills providing for necessary constitutional amendments. Pursuant thereto a commission was duly appointed, which commission made its report and presented a proposed tax code for consideration by the legislature. The commission reported that owing to constitutional limitations it was very much hampered and restricted in the preparation of the code proposed. At the extra session, called immediately after the filing of the report of the commission, and after the most thorough consideration of the subject matters it was deemed wise to present to the people of our state for adoption or rejection at the next general election a certain proposed amendment to the constitution. The said amendment was submitted to the electors of the state at the election held on the 4th day of November last, and owing to failure on the part of the voters to vote upon the proposed amendment the same failed to receive the majority provided by the constitution and was lost. The proposed amendment, if the same had been adopted and ratified by the voters of the state, would have removed many of the restrictions of which the commission complained, and would have enabled the legislature to pass many tax measures which seemed to be imperative and required under existing conditions.

I earnestly recommend that you provide for the resubmission to the people of the amendment as submitted at the last election. Should such proposed amendment be submitted to the people and be adopted and ratified, the door would then be open for new methods of taxation. Under such conditions the legislature would be enabled to pass a graduated income tax; also a registry tax on all mortgages, a tax on franchises, and if desired, to provide for a gross earnings system as to public service corporations in lieu of direct taxation. In a word, it would permit tax reform and all the property in the state could be brought under equal and uniform taxation.

Should an amendment of the character indicated be passed and ratified the legislature would then be enabled to pass such legislation as would largely increase the public revenues, which, together with the proposed gross earnings law pertaining to railway companies, would make it possible to do away entirely with taxation for state purposes. Experience has taught us that it is utterly impossible to pass a code changing the entire system. Legislation along tax lines must come by evolution, and until the constitutional limitations are removed, in my judgment, it would not be wise to enter upon general tax legislation.

Would also recommend the resubmission of the amendment permitting the investment of school and university funds in the bonds of counties, school districts, cities, towns and villages to the amount of [illegible] per cent instead of 7 per cent. The security would be ample and the rate of interest higher than can be secured from other sources.

NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY.

In November, 1901, a corporation called the Northern Securities company was organized under the laws of New Jersey by certain stockholders of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, for the purpose of acquiring the capital stock of those two companies; thus effecting a consolidation of the property and franchises of these two competing lines of railway in this state, in violation of the laws of Minnesota.

The attorney general retained special counsel to assist him in enforcing the laws of this state and preventing such consolidation. An application was made on behalf of the state to bring this suit in the supreme court, for the reason that the Northern Securities company was a New Jersey corporation, and it was questionable whether or not jurisdiction could be obtained over such corporation in this state. Owing to peculiar conditions this application was denied, and shortly after that suit was begun in the district court of Ramsey county, and an effort made to acquire jurisdiction over the Northern Securities company. The Northern Securities company and the two railway companies involved then made an application to remove this suit to the federal court, filed an affidavit that the company did not own any property situated in Minnesota and was not doing business therein, and a order was made transferring the suit to the federal court, where it is now being pressed.

Before acquiescing to the removal to the federal court the attorney general and his associates became convinced that it would be very doubtful if jurisdiction could be obtained over the Northern Securities company in the state court, owing to the fact that our statutes made no provision for service upon a foreign corporation, where such corporation had not appointed an agent within the state upon whom service could be made, and for the further reason that the Northern Securities company was not doing business in Minnesota.

I have been informed by counsel for the state that prior to 1899 we had on our statute books an act which would enable the state to have made service upon such corporation, but this act was repealed in 1899. The Northern Securities company has submitted to the jurisdiction of the federal court after declining to submit to jurisdiction in the state court.

A large amount of testimony has already been taken in the federal court, and this testimony shows, among other things, that the stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway company have already exchanged more than [illegible] per cent of the total capital stock of that company for the stock of the Northern Securities com[illegible] also shows that the stockholders [illegible] Great Northern Railway company [illegible] already exchanged 80 per cent of the total capital stock of that company for the stock of the Northern Securities company; thus giving the latter company complete control of the property and lines of railway of both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies. The testimony also shows that during January, 1902, a joint circular was issued by the officers of the two railway companies, withdrawing an equalizing or competitive rate between junction points in this state where the distance was greater by one route than the other, and requiring the freight to be shipped by the shorter route unless the shipper was willing to pay distance tariff or higher rates by the other road. I refer to this only for the purpose of showing the effectiveness of this consolidation.

The executive officers of the state are doing and will continue to do all in their power to defeat this consolidation. It may be that the courts will decide that the laws of one state can be evaded or violated by means of a corporation organized under the laws of another state; if so, all the benefits of the "more perfect union," so earnestly sought by the framers of the Constitution, and so much desired by all law-abiding citizens, will not be realized. I have an abiding faith, however, that the laws of this state will be sustained, and that the attempt to evade them in the manner stated will be defeated.

The law of this state prohibiting the consolidation of competing lines of railway is declaratory of a wise public policy and any effort to weaken or undermine it should be defeated, and every effort put forth to enforce and strengthen its provisions.

We hear much these days of "good" and "bad" trusts. I do not wish to take any of your time in discussing the fallacy or correctness of such a term. I do assert, however, without hesitation, that no trust or combination is more dangerous to the public welfare than a combination of transportation companies, or facilities, which either has the power to or does stifle or remove competition in freight and passenger business.

It seems to me that few, if any, combinations of trusts can be successfully maintained unless they are connected with, or in such a position that they can control the avenues and means of transportation.

This Northern Securities company is the most ingenious scheme ever brought into existence to promote transportation monopoly and stifle competition.

If you agree with my conclusion in this matter you will use every means in your power to strengthen and aid the state in its efforts to enforce the laws already upon its statute books against such consolidation, and pass any additional legislation which you may be advised by the legal representatives of this state is necessary to accomplish this object. Every well wisher of both the state and nation is seriously considering the complex problems involved in the solution of the so-called "Trust Question." The first great duty of a corporation through which such consolidations as are called "Trusts" are made possible, is to obey all constitutional laws adopted for their regulation or control, whether such regulation or control can be successfully accomplished through national legislation is a question about which there seems to be much difference of opinion. Each state, however, can very largely regulate and control corporations of its own creation. It thus becomes the imperative duty of this state to do what it can, and to enact such additional laws as may be necessary for the accomplishment of this object.

I call your attention to the condition of the suit of the state against the Northern Securities company and the two railway companies involved, so that you may be informed of the situation and pass such legislation as I am informed the attorney general will submit to you, provided it meets with your views, looking toward the removal of some of the obstacles encountered by the state in its suit.

Our state is engaged in a great legal battle to protect our rights. The State of Washington has a suit pending in the supreme court of the United States, and by order of the president, Attorney General Knox has commenced action looking to the dissolution of this company. Realizing the power of corporate wealth, congress has appropriated $500,000 to aid the legal officers of the government in prosecuting this and all other illegal trusts and unlawful combinations. Whatever the result, there need be no apprehension, for there is a power greater than corporate wealth, greater even than the supreme court of the United States, and that is the power of the American people, and when once aroused no evil can resist this mighty force.

Before closing I desire to commend Attorney General Douglas and his associates for the able manner in which they are conducting this suit, and I will state that it is their intention to press this action until finally decided by the court of highest jurisdiction.

PRIMARY ELECTION LAW.

After a trial of the primary election law the consensus of opinion seems to be that the law will be a permanent method of nominating candidates for office. Experience has suggested amendments and will continue to do so from time to time. Many amendments have been suggested and discussed in the public press and otherwise, and undoubtedly some of these suggestions are meritorious. A change in the time of holding the primaries seems to meet with popular favor, and after mature consideration I recommend that a change be made providing for the holding of the primaries late in June or early in July. I also recommend that the filing of certificates of candidates be limited to thirty days prior to the date of the primary election. I am also of opinion that it would be advisable to so amend that law that a person desiring to become an independent candidate be compelled to take the necessary steps prior to the primary election law and not afterwards, as he may do under the present law. It would be well, also, for you to consider whether it would not be wise to so amend the law that the different tickets would appear on one ballot rather than for the elector to call for the ticket representing his political views, as under the present law. With such an amendment the voter would vote only the one ticket representing the party with which he affiliates. Many other amendments will probably be suggested and will undoubtedly receive your careful consideration. It is desirable to perfect the law as nearly as possible at this session, as there are many defects, as experience has shown.

PUBLISHING EXTRA SESSION LAWS.

It has been customary to publish laws in newspaper supplements immediately after a legislative session, so as to acquaint the courts and the public at the earliest possible moment with the new enactments. This has been regarded as essential and necessary because the bound volumes of the laws cannot be procured for a number of months after the close of the session. It has been customary to appropriate the sum of $40,000 for this purpose. At the extra session a bill providing for an appropriation for this purpose was introduced near the close of the session, but owing to there being inadequate time for the full consideration of the matter, only $20,000 was appropriated. The publication of the laws was regarded as a necessity, and when it was discovered that the appropriation was inadequate the auditor, the secretary of state and the governor pledged their recommendation for reimbursement to those who were willing to publish the laws. Upon the faith of this pledge of recommendation the laws were published, and I hence recommend that an appropriation of $20,000 be made by you for the purpose of reimbursing those who caused these laws to be published in the newspapers of the state.

I desire to thank the state officers and all other associates with me for their earnest and active support, and whatever success has attended this administration is due wholly to them.

Our state has a great future. Situated in the center of the great American continent, her market facilities are unexcelled. Nature has dealt us her favors with a lavish hand; a fertile and productive soil in which all cereals thrive; a realm of forest domain, rich deposits of ore, unrivaled facilities for commerce by lake and river. But better than all, we possess an enterprising and intelligent people; a people who have taken the rude wilderness of fifty years ago and made it an ornament of civilization, a habitation of nearly two million American citizens; a people who have not only made a veritable garden of their domain, but who have enriched the world with the products of the field, mine and forest, and who have inspired other peoples with the example of enterprise, thrift, public education and much wise legislation.

We have an opportunity by legislating wisely, not only to serve the present, but to lay the foundation of the future greatness of our state. Let our motive be high and our purposes firm, that we may place upon the statute books enduring enactments, which will insure an equality for all men before the law; which will provide a system of just and equal taxation; which will encourage tariff, stimulate enterprise, promote industry and aid our development.

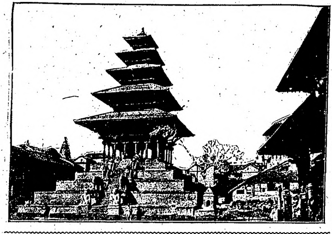
TEMPLE IN BHATGAON, INDIA



HISTORIC HOUSE IN CAPITAL.

Famous Old Colonial Mansion Is to Be Preserved.

The Octagon House, at New York avenue and Eighteenth street, will soon become the property of the American Institute of Architects. This organization has a five-year lease on the property and as Washington has been made its permanent headquarters, the members have decided to purchase the building. Edward D. Tayloe and Mary Lomax Tayloe of Norfolk, Va., are the owners of the house, and have entered into a contract to sell it to the architects for $30,000. Col. John Tayloe began the erection of the famous old Colonial mansion in 1798, and completed it two years later. It is considered one of the finest specimens of Colonial architecture in the country, and has always been especially admired by architects. Col. John Tayloe used it as his town residence for many years. When the White House was fired by the British, President Madison occupied the Tayloe mansion for a short time, and it was there that he signed the treaty of Ghent. The house has always been owned by members of the Taloe family. It is of red brick trimmed with red sandstone, and was planned by Dr. William Thornton, who designed the Capitol and many other buildings in Washington.—Washington Post.

USES OF THE FLAG.

Small Boy Tells Why It Was Placed on the Wall.

During the campaign preceding the last municipal election a prominent speaker for the Union party had occasion to refer to the campaign buttons worn by the followers of the Quay party.

The small tokens of loyalty to Quay, it will be remembered, bore the red, white and blue stripes of the American flag, and the speaker demonstrated his attitude towards thus using the colors by relating the following story:

A district school was paid an official visit by the Board of Education. The occasion was made memorable by appropriate decorations, including the American flag, which was placed upon the wall in such a manner as to cover an unsightly spot, caused by rain leaking through the roof and running down the side. After the Board of Education had listened to the recitations for some time, one of the Directors questioned a small boy as to the significance of the flag.

"What does that flag represent?" asked the Director.

"Liberty, independence and civilization," answered the boy.

"And why is the flag placed upon the wall?" again asked the Director.

The small boy promptly replied: "To cover the dirt."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Marriage Custom.

At Cardiff each Mayor has to award a marriage dowry to a domestic servant, who, having been in her situation for at least eight years, wishes to marry. She has to declare that the money will be of use to her, and has to possess an excellent character. The money itself is the interest of a gift of £1,000 by the Marquis of Bute, himself a former Mayor of the town. Last year the interest amounted to £28—surely a nice present for a servant about to marry. When the Mayor is presenting the gift to the intending bride, she must be accompanied by the intending bridegroom, and his Worship has to read a passage from the Gospel appropriate to the occasion, and to deliver a short sermon to the two on the solemnity of matrimony.

Phonology New Art.

Persons who are interested in phrenology, graphology, chiromancy or astrology will be glad to learn that a new predictive art has been invented. It is known as phonology, and it is based on the assumption that the character of every person can be learned from his voice.

A voice which is clear and melodious, we are told, invariably indicates frankness, honesty and strength of character, whereas a voice which is gruff and husky is always an indication of ill temper and other undesirable qualities.

It naturally follows that a soft and sweet voice is an index of loving kindness and philanthropy, though it is hardly so clear why a shrill, squeaky voice should generally indicate a discontented and suspicious nature.

What a Blind Man Saw.

The passing of Chaplain Milburn removes a picturesque figure from Congress. The "blind chaplain," as he was known throughout Washington has made his personality felt on both sides of the Atlantic. An American who was spending a summer wandering idly through London describes his astonishment at entering a chapel in Holloway road and seeing Chaplain Milburn in the pulpit. The sight of the familiar face and figure was a joyful one," said the American, in telling the story, "but I think my greatest surprise was when I listened to the subject of his talk, 'What I Saw in England.' I had been doing England in a half-thorough fashion myself, but it was a revelation to learn what this blind man had 'seen' in England and even the natives were astonished."—Indianapolis News.

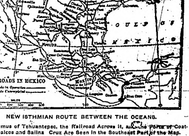
RAILWAY ROUTE BETWEEN OCEANS



NEW ISTHMIAN ROUTE BETWEEN THE OCEANS.

The Isthmus of Tehuantepec, the Railroad Across it, and the Ports of Coatzacoalcos and Salina Cruz Are Seen in the Southeast Part of the Map.

While we are negotiating with Colombia over the Panama canal route the leading commercial countries of Europe are beginning to turn their eyes again to the great work now far advanced on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in Southern Mexico. The harbors of Coatzacoalcos on the Gulf of Mexico and Salina Cruz on the Pacific ocean are being fitted for the largest vessels. This is all that is needed to make the railroad across the narrow isthmus of Tehuantepec available for the commerce of the world. The improvements are now nearing completion, and the Tehuantepec railroad is certain to be numbered among the great commerce carriers even after the completion of the isthmian canal, which we may expect will be ready for traffic in a few years.

EDITOR A MAN OF RESOURCES.

Oklahoma Journalist Rose Grandly to the Situation.

Senator Burnham of New Hampshire, who does not wear a full beard, had a rare experience with one of the progressive weekly journals of Oklahoma during his recent Southwestern trip. It was in Woodward county, and the editor was apparently short on photographs of the distinguished members of the subcommittee on territories. Nevertheless, he had plenty of patent medicine pictures, and from the assortment did the best he could to show his readers what kind of looking Senators they had in their midst. For Mr. Burnham he guessed badly, having selected a statesman of long, flowing beard.

To make good, the territorial editor wrote an article around the picture, just as though he had seen them and talked at great length about statehood with them. Of the New Hampshire Senator he said in part:

"Just here Col. Wiggins clapped old man Burnham on the back and asked him if they had anything in old New Hampshire bigger than Woodward county. The Senator studied a few minutes, combed out his oiled whiskers, bit off the end of a cigar, and drawled:

"'Well, there are the White mountains; they are chock-full of granite, and will furnish more tombstones than will ever be needed in Oklahoma.'"—Washington Post.

MOLASSES A CURE FOR CANCER

Alleged to Have Been Tried With Success in Australia.

In Australia they have more uses for molasses at the present time than in this country. Owing to the unprecedented drought, animals are being fed in many places on chaff and straw mixed with molasses to make them more palatable.

A correspondent writes from Mackay, Queensland, describing in a Sydney paper "what is believed to be a simple and wonderful cure for cancer." He states that a resident who had what had been diagnosed as a cancer under his tongue, casually applied some molasses to the affected part, and suffered intense pain for about an hour. Then the pain abated, and the spot in his mouth felt less troublesome than before. After a further daily course of molasses he was "completely cured."

Another resident whose case had been diagnosed as internal cancer also claims to have been cured by taking a dessert spoonful of raw molasses five times a day for five weeks.

Ravenous Horde of Fishes.

Prof. C. F. Holder writes: "Several years ago I witnessed a sudden run of dogfish—a small shark—on the New England coast. In the morning the men were cod-fishing on the banks, but suddenly the dogfish 'set in.' They came in countless thousands, destroying the fishing; a ravenous horde, fairly filling the water and eating even jelly fishes to satisfy their hunger. No sooner did a bait strike the water than several rushed at it and the boat near me had the sail, which was dragging overboard, torn in pieces by them. The fishermen immediately changed their tackle and began fishing for dogfish for the livers, which were valued at a cent apiece, soon filling their boat. As the fish were hauled in they uttered loud croaks sounding like 'r-o-i-k, r-o-i-k,' and this was heard from scores of snapping mouths in concert. It seemed to require no little effort to produce a sound and it may have been, in all probability was, the accompaniment of a convulsive gasping for breath."

Tall Corn in Nebraska.

The farmers in a county not more than twenty miles distant from the metropolis of Omaha, as the crow flies, are busy husking corn. The yield this year will be anywhere from forty to sixty bushels an acre, and at favored places even more than this. It has been a very good year for the maize plant. The rains that fell in the summer gave them so much moisture and produced such enormous stalks that to behold a cornfield now is to be reminded of the forests in other parts of the continent. It is, indeed, a veritable labyrinth of maze, to wander through a cornfield where the stalks are from fifteen to eighteen feet high, or, in other words, "three men high." In fact, the maize plant is our palm, "the prairie's palm tree," as it might be expressed very poetically.—Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald.

Prospects.

A young lady who made some purchases in one of Philadelphia's leading department stores, recently, inquired of the clerk whether any reduction was made to ministers.

"Always," was the reply; "are you a minister's wife?"

"Oh, no; I am not married," said the lady, blushing.

"Daughter, then?"

"No."

The clerk looked puzzled.

"I am engaged to a theological student."

A Modern William Tell.

M. Falconnier of the Comedie Francaise, is an impassioned votary of small arms target shooting and, as the result of years of practice under methods of mathematical precision, can do anything that is worth doing with a rifle or pistol. His great feat is to shoot an apple from the head of one of his dramatic pupils—a young lady named Mlle. Mira Coti, at ten, fifteen and twenty yards. Mlle. Coti is herself a rising artist of the Renaissance, and has absolute faith in her old professor.

THE TALE OF PIOUS WILLIAM.

Mining Camp Incident That Points a Moral, Told in Rhyme by Alfred J. Waterhouse.

The little town of Whisky Flat has sorter petered out;
The placers are exhausted, an' no miners are about;
The shanties all have fallen, or are standing bleak an' bare,
And the gray coyote holds them as his undisputed lair.
The times has changed since Pious Bill came trudgin' into town,
An' took a drink of water then, an' laid his trappin's down.
An' says, "I'm meek an' lowly, an' I foller Duty's way,
An' I jedge I heered a whisper that summoned me to stay."

He was an unassumin' man, an' placid like, an' still,
An' so he gained his sobrikay, his name of Pious Bill.
An' when Kansas Charlie met him he says, "We'll have some fun,
An' ef you fellers watch me you'll see how it is done."
So, foolin' with his weepin', says he: "I'll take a drink
With you, my Pious William, a whisky straight, I think."
"I do not know," says Pious Bill, "I do not know," says he,
"But, though I'm meek an' lowly, somehow I don't agree."

Oh, then this Kansas Charlie was dretful in his wrath,
An' he said: "You cantin' parson, you had better clear my path,
Fer I'm oht fer gore an' carnage, an' your impidence mus' stop."
Then he started in a-shootin', an' somethin' seemed to drop.
An' the thing that dropped was Charlie; he landed with a thud,
An' his nose was mounted sideways, an' his mouth was full of blood.
"Which I wish to do my duty in my humble way," says Bill.
"When it whispers, 'Whip a bully,' you can then surmise I will."

Oh, then Pious William with Charlie mopped the floor,
An' when we thought he'd finished, he mopped a little more;
An' he used him as a doormat for the wipin' of his feet;
An' he murmured "Hallelujer!" when he fired him in the street.
But when the dust had cleared a bit he seemed to cogitate,
While he says "I'm meek an' lowly, an' am humble of estate,
But I thought I heered a summons urgin' me as duty bid."
An' that little cloud of witnesses remarked, "You bet you did!"

The little town of Whisky Flat has sorter petered out;
The placers are exhausted, an' no miners are about,
But when I'm sittin' lone of nights there comes the mem'ry still
Of all its foremost citizens, includin' Pious Bill.
I see them pass in single file, an' each remembered face,
Though somewhat roughly bearded, has its own peculiar grace;
But 'mid the ones who thus appear, there never greets my sight
The form of Kansas Charlie—he flitted on that night.

—Alfred J. Waterhouse in New York Times.

SUPPLY OF HORSES IS SCARCE.

Demand for Good Specimens Greatly Exceeds the Number in Sight—Business Is Very Profitable.

We are not horse poor—not as some people are land poor, because they have to much—but horse poor because we haven't enough horses. After the civil war we found ourselves short of horses of the bigger types and began importing them for breeding purposes. We imported them to good purpose and in very large numbers and greatly improved the quality of our stock. When electricity began to haul street cars the market for the commoner kind of horses fell off and farmers didn't breed so many. When the automobiles began to appear and were heralded as machines that must supersede the use of carriage horses the breeders of the better class of horses took fright.

For years after 1893, too, thousands of people who wanted horses could not afford them. But with the return of prosperity the demand for good horses began to grow again and breeders bred more of them. But it takes about five years to raise a horse that is fit for the market and the breeders got behind. The demand has outrun the supply. The price of good horses has increased very greatly and imported stallions are said to be worth nearly ten times what they were ten years ago. The South African war took a great number of horses out of the country, including many worthless ones, but the business of horse-breeding has revived so much that we shall soon have again a reasonably full supply.

Enterprising farmers nowadays breed good horses. It pays, and breeding poor horses doesn't pay. We import horses from Europe for breeding purposes and from Canada for use, but of late we have exported far more than we have imported and are likely to keep on doing so. The annual horse show in New York, which seems on its surface, to be a frivolous spectacle, really holds a highly important relation to one of the great industries of the country. It is the parent of all the American horse shows and, with them, constantly measures, stimulates and directs the country's progress in the breeding of fine horses. There are about 13,500,000 horses in our land, of an estimated value of $604,000,000. The improvement of that much stock is a pretty important matter, especially in these days, when Europe is horse poor, too, and ready to take from us any surplus of good horses that we may come to have.—Harper's Weekly.

HOME OF PRESIDENT MADISON.

Typical Southern Mansion Rich in Historic Associations of America's Great Statesman and Patriot.

"I have always been an ardent admirer of the public life and private character of James Madison," said Cornelius J. Reilly of Detroit, Mich., to a correspondent of the Washington Star, "and when I found I was to pass through Orange Court House yesterday decided to lay over for the day and visit the home of Mr. Madison. The distance from the town to Montpelier is only four miles over a good dirt road, and at this season of the year, when the foliage is so richly hued with autumnal tints, the drive is the most charming imaginable. A railroad parallels the drive and evidently bisects the plantation. The entrance to the lawn is a quarter of a mile from the mansion, and the latter is seated upon gentle eminence, with a magnificent background of stately forest trees. It is only when you reach the porch of the rooftree that once sheltered the sage of Montpelier that you begin to appreciate the beauty of the surroundings. The lawn is a well-kept field of forty acres, and gently slopes to the broad highway. The foreground in the distance is the Blue Ridge mountains, of which your vision gets a range of forty miles. The house has been restored as much as possible to the state in which it was when Mr. Madison was a dweller therein. The architecture of the mansion is quite similar to that of the White House, with this exception—it lacks the massive Greek portico of the latter structure. I was told the elder Madison erected the dwelling in 1793. The interior is roomy, and I was shown the library wherein Mr. Madison wrote many of the papers which are now historic. I was also shown the room, on the second floor, in which Mr. Madison breathed his last. Nearly a half mile to the northwest of the mansion are the graves of Madison and his wife Dolly. The remains of Mrs. Madison's only son repose in the same family lot. A plain monument bearing a very simple inscription tells where rests for all time one of America's greatest statesmen and patriots."

HYGIENIC SCHEME WENT WRONG

Mr. Shivers' Morning Plunge Not What He Anticipated.

"They say that the reaction and afterglow of cold morning baths are an infallible cure for neuralgia," said Mr. Shivers.

"Cold water right out of the tap," cried Mrs. Shivers.

"Certainly," replied her other half.

"O-o-oh, I couldn't," shuddered Mrs. Shivers.

Mr. Shivers smiled a superior smile.

"It is not one freezing plunge, but a gradual immersion, while you slowly count six. Like this: One, and you put in one foot. Two, you put in the other. Three, you sink on one knee. Four, you sink on both. Five, you plunge in your arms. Six, you immerse your body. Yes, I shall certainly try it on Christmas morning."

Slowly and reluctantly at the appointed time, Mr. Shivers crept from his warm bed, silently casting a look of reproach upon his smiling spouse, and into the bathroom, and after a time she heard him say:

"O-o-onno! Ouch! Oh!" "T-t-o-o. Ow, ow, ow, ow!" "Th-th-th-three!" followed by a blood-curdling yell and a tremendous splash.

Then there was a succession of agonized yells, and what Mrs. Shivers at first took for a streak of lightning flashed out of the bathroom, plunged into bed, and rolled itself tightly up in the covers.

"Why, Jeremiah?" gasped Mrs. Shivers.

Mr. Shivers simply glared and shivered.

"Woman," he roared, when he had controlled his chattering teeth, "did you put the lump of soap in the bottom of the bath on purpose?"

BULLET GOES WILD

KING ALFONSO OF SPAIN PUTS HIS HEAD OUT OF CARRIAGE TO SEE.

IS FIRED BY A MONOMANIAC

THE GRAND CHAMBERLAIN WAS THE MAN THE ASSASSIN WAS AFTER.

ANARCHISTS ARE NOT IN THIS

POLICE SATISFIED OF THIS AFTER CAREFUL OFFICIAL INQUIRY.

Madrid, Jan. 13. — As King Alfonso, Dowager Queen Christina and the court were returning from church a man who gave his name as Fietto fired a pistol at one of the carriages in the royal procession. The bullet went wild and no one was injured. The king heard the shot and put his head out of the carriage window, but was immediately dragged back into his seat by the queen mother. The escort of civil guards threw themselves upon the would-be assassin and overpowered him.

The queen mother and the infanta were very much alarmed. The king was very cool, however, and inquired if any one had been hurt. After being informed to the contrary he chatted with the civil governor, who walked alongside the royal carriage, giving his majesty the details of the outrage. Upon arriving at the palace the king immediately repaired to a balcony to watch the excited populace. The queen in the meanwhile was so upset that physicians had to be called to attend her.

The pistol used by Fietto was an old double-barreled weapon. It now transpires that Fietto was confined for nearly one year in a lunatic asylum at Buenos Ayres.

Did Not Want to Kill King.

Fietto was taken to the police station, where he said he did not desire to kill the king, but the grand chamberlain, the duke of Sotomayor, at whose carriage he had aimed. He was searched and in his pockets were found unmailed letters marked "Registered," and addressed to President Roosevelt, King Edward, the emperor of Germany and the president of the high court of justice at Mexico, and also receipts for a number of registered letters and a visiting card of the mayor of Madrid.

Fietto was examined again yesterday. His hearing during the questioning confirmed the previous reports that he is suffering from monomania. A careful official inquiry has shown that Fietto is not connected with anarchists. It was first reported that Fietto had attempted to assassinate King Alfonso. His majesty has received a host of royal and other congratulations upon his escape.

A dynamite bomb which was sent here by rail in a box from Barcelona, has been found at the railroad station. All attempts to discover the consignee of the box have been fruitless. The bomb reached here the day before the funeral of Senor Sagasta, and is supposed to have been for use during the passage of the funeral cortege.

WANT TAFT TO REMAIN.

Popular Demonstration for the Governor.

Manila, Jan. 13.—The general regret of the Filipino people at the possible departure of Gov. Taft yesterday resulted in a popular demonstration for the purpose of urging the governor to remain in the islands. The streets of Manila have been placarded with signs in English Tagalo and Spanish saying, "We want Gov. Taft." A crowd of 8,000 men marched to Malacanan palace, the governor's residence, yesterday. Upon reaching the palace speeches were made by representatives of the Federal, Liberal and Nationalist parties, in which the governor was urged to remain. The speakers said that Mr. Taft's presence was necessary to preserve order, for the prevention of political disruption and to insure the maintenance of the present policy. The speakers paid personal tributes to the governor, and the crowd cheered its approval. In replying to the address Gov. Taft said that it would not be decided at present whether he would remain or leave the islands. He assured the people that if he did leave, the present policy of the American government would suffer no change, it being not a question of individual but of national policy.

LEAPS TO DEATH.

Millionaire, While Ill, Springs From Seventh-Story Window.

New York, Jan. 13.—Crazed by the pain attending his illness of typhoid fever, Thomas A. O'Donough, aged thirty years, treasurer of the O'Donough Coffee company, sprang from the window of his room on the seventh floor of the Ormonde apartment house, landing on the sidewalk. He died ten minutes later. He was a millionaire.

HEINZE IS A HARD HITTER.

Montana Copper King Engages in Fist Fight.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 13. — Because he made a remark regarding Judge Hiram Knowles of the federal court, which was resented, F. Augustus Heinze, the noted mining man and litigant, early yesterday morning precipitated a bloody fight in the barroom of the Thornton hotel. According to a number of eye-witnesses, Attorney J. M. Dixon, a personal friend and neighbor of Judge Knowles at Missoula, was seated at a table with several friends when Mr. Heinze entered. The latter was invited to join the party and did so. Dixon made a remark which nettled Heinze, and it brought out the latter's remark concerning Judge Knowles. Dixon said the remark was a vile epithet and he hotly demanded a retraction from Heinze, which was refused. Dixon became belligerent in his defense of Judge Knowles, and declared that Heinze would have to retract or fight. Heinze not only refused to retract, but repeated the offensive remark, whereupon Dixon pulled off his coat and struck Heinze in the face. In an instant Dixon measured his length on the floor by a blow from Mr. Heinze and blood flowed from his nose. Dixon got up and made a rush at Heinze, but the latter caught him by the throat and bore him into the corner of a grill seat, where he choked him till he was blue in the face and signified a willingness to quit hostilities. The men then departed and went their different ways with friends, while the porter washed up the blood.

CHANCE FOR WHITEMAN.

Former Senator Will Be Well Fixed If He Wins His Suit.

Duluth, Jan. 13. — Alonzo J. Whiteman of Dansville, N. Y., formerly state senator from Duluth, who has had a rather checkered career during the past ten years, may soon be rich again. He stands a show at least. The case of the A. J. Dwyer Pine Land company against A. J. Whiteman, involving valuable lands in Itasca county, was concluded Saturday before Judge McClenahan in chambers. If Whiteman is successful it will put him on his feet financially. A decision is expected next month. Owing to the value of the lands in issue the case will probably go to the supreme court. Mr. Whiteman has another important suit to be tried in Duluth soon. On cross-examination at Brainerd, Mr. Whiteman testified that no judgments were outstanding against him: that he had never been convicted of a felony, and had never been in a penitentiary or state prison.

Mandan, N. D., Jan. 13. — News comes from the southeastern part of the county of the loss of 5,000 sheep and 300 head of cattle belonging to different ranches, by a prairie fire in the late high winds. Seventeen ranchmen suffered heavily, some of their houses being swept away by the flames.

To Make Street Fair a Power.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 13. — The Winona Street Fair association is considering plans for broadening out so as to be able to do something practical for the city in addition to furnishing the big street fair each year. The idea is to embrace some of the functions of the old board of trade, which is now practically dead, for the purpose of bringing new manufacturing concerns to the city. The directors have already begun collecting subscriptions for this purpose, and it is believed that the scheme will prove entirely feasible.

An Operator Killed.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 13.—After setting a switch so that an extra freight train might sidetrack to let the fast Chicago passenger go by, George Lamb, operator at the Northwestern depot in Janesville, a small town west of here, stepped onto the main track and was struck by the passenger train and killed instantly. Young Lamb was an orphan and had been working in the depot at Janesville since he was twelve years old.

Miss Conklin Near Death.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 13. — Miss Lucy Conklin of Minneapolis narrowly escaped death at Sanborn, Iowa, yesterday. She attempted to board a passenger train after it had started to leave and put the wrong foot on the step first. She fell between the two coaches, but fortunately her body rolled outside of the rails and she escaped being mangled. She was practically unhurt.

To Prevent Crossing Wrecks.

Sauk Center, Minn., Jan. 13.—State Warehouse Commissioner Staples, inspected the newly constructed interlocking plant at the crossing of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern tracks here, and approved its use. It is being successfully operated and will be a great time-saver for through trains, as well as a safeguard against such accidents as occurred there last September.

To Build Court House.

Yankton, S. D., Jan. 13.—The county commissioners have placed a contract with Parsons & Sons of Des Moines to furnish plans for the new court house to be erected here during the coming season. Parsons & Sons furnished the plans for the Masonic temple.

Destroyed by Fire.

South Haven, Mich., Jan. 13.—The Colonial and several other buildings were destroyed by fire last night. The total loss is about $50,000.

Raise for County Attorney.

Faribault, Minn., Jan. 13—The board of county commissioners has adjourned. The Faribault Republican was elected country printer and the salary of the county attorney was raised from $900 to $1,500 a year.

Duluth Woman Dead.

Duluth, Jan. 13.—The wife of Capt. Joseph Sellwood, a prominent iron ore capitalist of this city, died here after an illness of two weeks with Bright's disease. She is survived by three daughters and a son.

ALL FLY FROM FEZ

EUROPEANS LEAVE THE CITY TO SEEK A PLACE OF SAFETY.

SULTAN REARRESTS HIS BROTHER

STARTS WITH ARMY TO MEET THE FORCES OF THE PRETENDER.

ISSUES CALL FOR MEN AND ARMS

GOVERNORS OF ALL DISTRICTS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE.

London, Jan. 13.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Tangier, Morocco, says all the Europeans of Fez have now left that place, and that the foreign consuls there will follow immediately. The sultan has rearrested his brother.

The sultan has left Fez with his army and is awaiting the rebels at the Zelu river. The sultan's uncle, Mulai-Arafa, has arrived at Tangier and is seeking to raise money for the sultan. The imperial troops are badly armed and unreliable, continues the correspondent, while the rebel soldiers are well organized and better armed.

The Times correspondent at Tangier says in a dispatch that the sultan has appealed to the governors of all districts, including Tangier, for men and arms. The sultan has placed his brother, Mulai-Mohammed, under surveillance. A caravan of mules taking money from the customs here to the sultan at Fez was met by an imperial messenger who ordered the caravan to return to Tangier and await a cavalry escort, as the roads were unsafe. The Benim Hara tribe near Wazan has driven away its governor. Seven Jews have been murdered in the Maina region.

Sultan's Forces Defeated.

Paris, Jan. 13. — A dispatch to the Journal from Tangiers says a Moorish courier who left Fez brings news of a battle between the sultan's forces and the rebels in which the former were defeated. The sultan has made known his intention, according to the correspondent, of abandoning Fez and taking refuge at Rabat, where he will establish his capitol.

FAREWELL TO BOWEN.

Venezuelans Turn Out to Bid American Minister Bon Voyage.

Caracas, Jan. 13. — Mr. Bowen, the American minister, accompanied by Mrs. Bowen, left here at 8 o'clock yesterday morning for Washington, where he will act as the Venezuelan representative in the arbitration proceedings. President Castro, the ministers and a large crowd, comprising persons of all classes and nationalities, went to the railway station to bid him farewell. An address from the English colony was read to Mr. Bowen at the station, thanking for the protection he had accorded British subjects. Mr. Bowen responded to the address in a few well chosen words. The Spanish minister and the Belgian and Dutch charges d'affaires traveled to La Guayra in the same carriage with Mr. and Mrs. Bowen. Upon arriving at the port Mr. Bowen found the United States steamer Dolphin waiting for him and he and his wife boarded her at noon. Mr. Bowen takes with him full powers to represent Venezuela, and he will do all he can to bring about a satisfactory and honorable settlement.

FIND UTAH VOLCANO.

Small, Active Spouter Is Found Near the Colorado Line.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 13.—A special from Moab, Utah, says that a small, active volcano crater has been discovered by prospectors in the Dome plateau region near the Grand river, twenty miles north of Moab. From the crater, which is in the solid sandstone formation of the mesa, arises a column of steam that can be seen for miles. The appearance of the volcanic vent indicates that until recently it had been dormant for many years. Moab is in the extreme eastern part of the state, not far from the Colorado line.

DEATH SEALS HIS LIPS.

Officer Called Home to Explain Sinking of Ship Is Dead.

Berlin, Jan. 13.—It is reported from Wilmenshaven that First Officer von Lengerke of the German cruiser Vineta, who, it was supposed, had been ordered home to explain the sinking of the captured Venezuelan warships, died suddenly at sea between Havre and Bremen. The cause of his death is not stated.

Lets the Minister Out.

Rome, Jan. 13.—The seconds of Foreign Minister Prinetti and Count Bellegrade, the ex-cavalry officer who has challenged Signor Prinetti to fight a duel, and whose challenge has been accepted, have decided that Foreign Minister Prinetti is not obliged to fight Bellegrade, a subordinate. The count declares he will find a way to compel Sig. Prinetti to fight him.

Attack of Hiccoughs.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 13—A. G. Wolfenbarger, who has been prominently connected with the Prohibition party, is believed to be dying from a mysterious attack of hiccoughs. All attempts to cure have been unavailing.

Carnegie's Usual Offer.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 13.—Andrew Carnegie has offered to contribute $50,000 for a public library in this city on condition that the city furnish a site and appropriate $5,000 a year for maintenance.

CORPSE AT THE THROTTLE.

Failure to Stop at a Station Reveals Fact That Engineer Is Dead.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 13. — Passengers on an incoming Knoxville & Ohio railway train rode several miles yesterday afternoon with the hand of a corpse at the throttle. The train left Buckeye, Tenn., on time, and ran through Garyville, the next station. When Engineer A. C. Young ran through the latter town Fireman Matlock knew something was wrong and stepped to the engineer's side of the engine. He found Young dead, and immediately stopped the train. There is a wound on the left side of the engineer's head and the supposition is that a piece of stone fell from the side of a high cut in the mountains and killed him instantly. The train ran perhaps eight miles after Young was killed.

SCANDAL AT ANNAPOLIS.

One Cadet Has Broken Jaw, Another Is Locked Up.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—As a result of a fight between Robert M. Pearson, a member of the first class from Concord, N. H., and Frank G. Blasdel of New York, the former is in the hospital with a broken jaw and Blasdel is locked up. The affair occurred last Saturday night and was the result of Pearson's refusal to be hazed by upper class men. The upper class men had been "running him," and some time ago he is said to have fainted under the ordeal. He was accused of cowardice and was required to fight a third class man. Blasdel has been placed under arrest and others connected with the affair will probably be arrested also by the academy officials, who are determined to punish the guilty.

MOTHER AND CHILD DEAD.

Lighted Lamp Said to Have Been Thrown Under the Bed.

San Francisco, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Mary Kline and her infant died from the effects of burns received at their home last evening. Before dying Mrs. Kline declared that Mrs. Mary Davis had come into her room and thrown a burning lamp under the bed in which she and her babe lay. The women had quarreled frequently.

PREACHER JAILED.

Charged With the Fraudulent Use of the Mails.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 13.—Rev. B. E. Parker, principal of the Otterbein university business department (located at Westerville) is in jail here, having been arrested on the charge of fraudulent use of the United States mails. Prof. Parker was advertising for copyists who should do work at home. He required a deposit of $1 from each. His mail was very heavy.

STATE MAY GET HIS WEALTH.

Black Hills Man Dies Without Kith or Kin.

Lead, S. D., Jan. 13.—Michael Butler, who was killed by a falling tree near the Homestake pump station on Spearfish river during the terrific gale early in the week, was possessed of property valued at from $10,000 to $12,000, besides having a considerable sum of money in various banks, for which he had certificates of deposit at the time of his death. He is not known to have a living relative. For nineteen years he was not known to send or receive a letter. These facts developed at the inquest. The coroner has the certificates of deposit in his custody and will await the claim of relatives. If no relatives appear the property will revert to the state.

KILLED BY THE COLD.

Fierce Weather Grips Its Icy Fingers About Two Unfortunates.

Sisseton, S. D., Jan. 13.—Two daughters of Ole Thronson, residing twelve miles west of here, were frozen to death in last week's storm. They were returning from a visit in Day county with relatives and were met at this place by their father, who set out with them for home at a late hour in the evening. It is said he was intoxicated when he left town. The storm burst upon them while passing through the range of coteaus, and, losing their way, they wandered among the hills all night. When daylight came and the blanket was removed from over their heads the girls were found stiff and white as marble. The father was not badly frozen.

TEACHER WILL WHIP BOY'S DAD.

South Dakota Schoolma'am Shows Her Grit When Challenged.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 13.—The little town of Athol, S. D., has a woman school teacher who is eminently qualified to hold her own against all comers. The other day she whipped one of the small schoolboys, and when the weeping youngster had related the occurrence to his father the latter sent word to the teacher that before she whipped his boy again she would have to whip him. The young woman, nothing daunted by the threat of the boy's father, promptly replied: "I'll whip whichever one I get hold of first."

FIVE DOWN WITH SMALLPOX.

Wisconsin Family Quarantined and School Closed.

New Richmond, Wis., Jan. 13.—Five cases of smallpox in one family are reported from Jewett, a small station on the Wisconsin Central five miles east of this city. Dr. P. McKeon, health officer of this city, made a thorough investigation, and he declared it smallpox, and added that it was in as severe a form as he had ever seen. School in that district has been closed and a rigid quarantine is being maintained.

COAL IS HID AWAY

SCOUTS IN CHICAGO FIND FIFTEEN THOUSAND CARS ON TRACKS.

GRAND JURY IS INVESTIGATING

COAL MEN SUMMONED TO TELL WHAT THEY KNOW OF THE "RING."

COLD WAVE CAUSES SUFFERING

COAL DEALERS HOLD ONTO COAL TO FORCE UP THE PRICE.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—The temperature in Chicago yesterday dropped 24 degrees in less than two hours and last night was hovering around the zero mark. The cold wave was preceded by the first heavy snow of the season. Toward nightfall a brisk northwest wind sprang up and in the outlying districts the snow is drifted several feet deep.

There was considerable suffering among the poor, but as the worst cases of destitution had been provided for by charitable institutions no deaths were reported during the day.

The coal situation remains unchanged and its causes and effects on the suffering of humanity was discussed by a large number of Chicago pastors during their Sunday sermons.

The actual search for evidence of a combine of coal dealers for the purpose of forcing up the price of fuel in the Chicago market will be undertaken to-day by the which began its task Saturday under direction of State's Attorney Deneen and Attorney General Hamlin. Twenty-five coal men, some of them heads of wholesale firms, and others chiefs in the councils of corporations operating mines, have been summoned to appear before the grand jury and tell what they know of the "ring" which it is claimed exists. It is the intention that no one but coal men shall be examined, and under Mr. Deneen's direction a series of pointed questions have been arranged for the prospective witnesses.

Special scouts sent out by the Manufacturers' association reported yesterday that 15,000 carloads of coal were standing on the tracks in and about Chicago. Train loads of coal cars sidetracked and labelled with placards instructing railroad freight crews to hold the consignments indefinitely, it is said, have been discovered by the parties who caused the investigation to be made.

It is also asserted that beyond the city limits, on one and probably two roads, countless tons of coal have been taken from the cars and heaped up on either side of the track for as much as three-quarters of a mile. The grand jury will insist upon being informed why this coal has not been brought into the market and put on sale, thus relieving the coal famine.

Two thousand persons in Chicago are suffering from ailments directly due to cold and exposure resulting from the coal famine. Serious results are already seen in a heavy increase in the death rate, and the health department brands the men responsible for the situation as "guilty of constructive homicide."

FIRE FATAL TO TWO.

One Burned to Death, the Other Killed by Jumping.

New York, Jan. 13. — Mrs. Florine Henry, the wife of Philip S. Henry, a wealthy coffee merchant, and daughter of the late miner-banker, Leonard Lewisohn, was burned to death yesterday in a fire that almost entirely destroyed the residence of the family at 54 East Fifty-sixth street. Alberta Erickson, a domestic, jumped from the fourth story window and received injuries from which she died soon afterward. The fire, which originated from an unknown cause, had gained considerable headway before it was discovered, for when the first alarm was sent out the house was in flames from cellar to garret. Mrs. Henry's two infant children were saved by their nurse, who ran with them to the street immediately after the discovery of the fire. Mr. Henry, who was slightly burned, was rescued by a policeman who entered the house before the arrival of the firemen. It was supposed that his wife had already made her escape. After the fire had been extinguished Mrs. Henry's charred body was found in her bedroom on the second floor. Apparently she had succumbed to the smoke while attempting to reach a window.

MAYA INDIANS IN REBELLION.

Mexican Soldiers Have Several Skirmishes With the Indians.

Mexico City, Jan. 13.—A number of bands of hostile Maya Indians have renewed the rebellion in Yucatan, which was thought to have been quelled. With the object of subduing these the federal government recently sent four companies of troops commanded by Col. Jose M. Villoreal and Maj. Molina to Santa Cruz, where the Indians were gathered in considerable numbers. The result was that the troops had several small skirmishes with the Indians, who lost seven killed and several wounded. The Mexicans had one soldier killed and a few wounded.

SEVEN MEN KILLED

COLLISION BETWEEN PASSENGER TRAIN AND REAR END OF FREIGHT.

DUE TO BRAKEMAN'S NEGLIGENCE

HE FAILED TO SEE THAT HIS TRAIN HAD CLEARED MAIN TRACK.

TWO VICTIMS ROASTED TO DEATH

FIRE BROKE OUT AND IMPRISONED MEN WERE TERRIBLY TORTURED.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 9. — Seven men were killed and six others injured, one fatally in a collision between a passenger train and the rear end of a freight train on the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania railroad last night at Cochrane station, just above Duquesne.

The West Elizabeth accommodation train left Pittsburg at 3:20 p. m. It was on time and had a clear track, according to the signals displayed. At the siding at Cochrane it ran into the rear car of an extra freight which had taken the switch, but failed to clear the main line. The officials of the road attribute the disaster to the failure of Patrick Quinn, the rear brakeman of the freight, to see that his train had fully cleared. Up to a late hour Quinn had not been located. When the passenger train came along the caboose of the freight enough to catch the tender of the passenger engine, which was forced back upon the combination baggage and smoking car with terrible force. The thirteen passengers were jammed against the rear end of the car in almost a solid mass. Three of the victims were apparently killed outright, two of the other four were literally roasted to death and the two who died on the way to the hospital were so badly burned that recognition is impossible. Almost immediately after the impact, fire from the stove in the smoker communicated to the wreckage and the imprisoned victims were tortured beyond description. All were badly burned. Conductor Cook was found unconscious under the charred body of Baggagemaster Stroub. He is so badly hurt that he can hardly live, though he might.

CALL-DOWN FOR THE EMPEROR.

Workmen Retract Indorsement of His Speeches.

Berlin, Jan. 9.—The employes of the Vulcan works at Stettin have sent Emperor William, according to a press dispatch, the following telegram:

"The assembled workmen of the Vulcan works declare that they disapproved of collecting signatures to an address supporting the emperor's attitude in the Krupp affair, and disagreed with the contents of the telegram sent. They declare, on the other hand, that the telegram was a concoction designed to deceive his majesty regarding the true and honest sentiments of the working classes. The signers were induced by direct or indirect compulsion to sign this telegram. They deem it irreconcilable with their manly honor as workmen to deceive his majesty concerning their true sentiments, and declare that they signed only through fear of pecuniary damage."

A resolution embodying the foregoing was adopted at a stormy meeting. The address complained of was an indorsement of the emperor's two speeches to workingmen, directed against the late Herr Krupp's assailants.

REVOLT IN HONDURAS.

Old President Seeks to Have Election of the New Declared Illegal.

Panama, Colombia, Jan. 9. — News has reached here that the threatened revolutionary movement in Honduras is becoming more serious. Manuel Bonilla was elected president of Honduras last October by a big majority. President Sierra, however, refused to turn over the presidential power to Senor Bonilla, and is continuing his efforts to persuade the Honduran congress to declare the election of Senor Bonilla null and illegal. Senor Bonilla is at present on Amapala island, where he awaits the decision of congress. He has a considerable quantity of war munitions at his disposal, and is supported by the military commandant of Amapala, and his partisans declare they will protect their leader in his rights by force should such measures be necessary.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Two Bills Introduced to Enact Governor's Recommendations.

St. Paul, Jan. 9. — Two bills were introduced in the house yesterday, providing for the printing of proposed constitutional amendments and bills that must be submitted to the people, on a ballot separate from the state ballot, to be deposited in a separate ballot box at the election. The bills follow the recommendation of Gov. Van Sant in his message, and their purpose is to call such general attention to the constitutional amendments and propositions before the people, that it will insure a large vote upon them.

The house adopted the report of its committee on rules, with only four dissenting votes.

Representative Ganrud introduced a bill providing for the submission to the people at the next general election of a constitutional amendment to allow the loaning of the state school funds to political divisions of the state to an amount equal to 15 per cent of their assessed valuation, instead of 7 per cent as provided by the constitution at present.

In the Senate.

The senate was in session only a few minutes yesterday morning and was adjourned until Monday night at 8 o'clock.

The committee on rules read its report to the effect that the session be governed by the rules of the 1902 session with the single change that committees formerly consisting of seven members be increased to eleven. The report was adopted.

An amendment to the state constitution authorizing the taxation of public franchises, mortgages and income was provided for in senate file No. 5, by Senator George P. Wilson of Minneapolis.

Abrahamson refused to throw up his hands and was killed. The murderer and his companion escaped.

CHICAGO POSTOFFICE.

New Building Is Found to Be Inadequate Before It Is Completed.

Washington, Jan. 10. — Postmaster Coyne of Chicago was at the postoffice department looking after Chicago postoffice matters. He called the attention of the department to the necessity of an annex to the new postoffice building, which already has become inadequate. Mr. Coyne says that one of the drawbacks of the present building is the lack of facilities for the mail cars. The pneumatic tube service in Chicago, for which bids can be submitted up to to-day also was discussed.

Brainerd Dam Sold.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 10—The Brainerd dam, which for years has been the property of the Mississippi and Rum River Boom company, has passed into the control of the Weyerhausers, who are back of the Northwestern Paper company, which is now building a large pulp and paper mill in this city. The dam is a valuable piece of property, and although the sale has been confirmed the consideration has not been made known.

Coal Famine in Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 10. — Duluth is now in the throes of an anthracite coal famine. Local dealers yesterday announced that not a ton of it will now be sold for less than $9.50. They declare that the blame is not theirs, attributing it to the railroads, which, they say, have not furnished an adequate number of cars to transport the supply to the head of the lakes.

Changes at Training School.

Red Wing, Minn., Jan. 10—Sweeping changes are being made among the officers at the state training school by the new superintendent. George Rice, manager of Cottage No. 1, was removed without previous notice, and other officers have been changed about. It is rumored that some of the leading officers will be succeeded by new men in the near future.

Youthful Counterfeiters.

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 10.—Patrick Creghan, aged nineteen years, has been arrested for passing counterfeit nickles, mostly into slot machines. He has confessed to the existence of a gang of counterfeiters, headed by a seventeen-year-old boy, and has directed the police to a complete plant for making bad money. Other arrests are expected.

Another Wire to Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 10.—Employes of the Western Union are to string another wire between this city and St. Paul. The other Western Union wires are so crowded the company has been unable to handle its business promptly.

Convicted of Postoffice Robbery.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 10.—Lewis Peterson and James Burk, charged with burglarizing the Galesville postoffice on Oct. 10, were found guilty yesterday and sentenced to five years in prison and to pay a fine of $1,000.

CRASH IN A STORM

TERRIBLE RAILROAD WRECK ON THE MAIN STREET OF ADA, OHIO.

THREE KILLED AND MANY INJURED

ENGINEER FAILS TO SEE SIGNAL THROUGH A BLINDING STORM.

OCCURS ON A CROWDED STREET

TRAIN ON ANOTHER TRACK PLOWS THROUGH THE WRECKAGE.

Ada, Ohio, Jan. 10. — Three men were killed and fourteen or more persons injured, one fatally in a collision between two trains on the Pennsylvania system on the Main street of Ada.

The accident occurred at a time when the thoroughfare was crowded with people. Train No. 35, west-bound for Fort Wayne, had started out of the station, but at the Main street crossing was compelled to stop on account of some accident to the air brakes. A flagman was sent back to notify No. 19, a fast train going in the same direction, which was several minutes late. On account of the driving snow storm the engineer on No. 19 was unable to see the signal in time to slacken his speed and his engine crashed into the rear coach of No. 35 at the rate of forty miles an hour. No. 35 consisted of two coaches, the rear one being a combination baggage and passenger car with another passenger car in front.

Both Were Telescoped, and scarcely a passenger escaped injury of some sort. The engineer and fireman on No. 19 also were slightly hurt, but not enough to prevent them from rendering immediate assistance to those who were in greater distress. The crash was heard all over the city and almost the entire population was soon on hand to render what assistance they could in caring for the wounded and dead.

The engine to No. 19 was almost demolished, but the cars behind it were not damaged and none of the passengers were bruised. Wreckage was strewn over the tracks and in a few minutes the Chicago and New York limited, east-bound, dashed through on the other track at sixty miles an hour, hurling the accumulated debris in all directions, but never pausing in its flight until half a mile from town. Then the train was stopped and backed to the scene of the accident to get orders. No damage was done to the engine of the flyer.

CALLED DOWN BY MITCHELL.

Miners' President Objects to Remarks of Judge Gray.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10. — President Mitchell yesterday took exception to a remark made by Chairman Gray of the coal strike commission when Judge Gray said that he would like to see the miners' union come up out of the mire and into the sunlight. The miners' president said the union should not be indicted unless a connection could be shown between it and acts of lawlessness. The head of the commission replied that he did not wish to indict the organization, but hoped it would disentangle itself entirely from the violence and lawlessness committed during the strike. The incident came unexpectedly while a witness was on the stand, and caused a stir among the lawyers for both sides of the controversy. Outside of this tilt the entire day was taken up in hearing non-union men and their relatives, who alleged persecutions during the strike.

JUST IN TIME.

Body Identified When About to Be Placed in Potter's Field.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 10. — Yesterday, as the body of a man who committed suicide here Dec. 31, was about to be buried in the potter's field, it was identified as that of J. E. McConnell of New Castle, Pa. McConnell came West several months ago and is said to have been well connected in the East. Ill health is believed to have caused the suicide.

FOR THE SICK ONLY.

Physician's Certificate Required to Secure Coal in Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 10.—The coal situation in Toledo has reached the point where a physician's certificate is required by local dealers before they will sell even a ton of coal. The certificate must show that there is illness in the home of the would-be purchaser and that coal is necessary as a safeguard for the patient.

DISABLED BY LAW.

Loudenslager Thinks Veterans Should Be When Seventy.

Washington, Jan 10—Representative Loudenslager of New Jersey introduced a bill yesterday providing that veterans upon arriving at the age of seventy years be held to be wholly disabled and entitled to the maximum rating of $12 per month in the administration of the pension act of June 27, 1890.

HEBREW VETERANS.

Spanish and Philippine War Veterans Form an Association.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 10—"The Hebrew Veterans of the War With Spain" has been incorporated to promote social intercourse and fraternity between veteran soldiers and sailors of Hebrew faith who served in the United States army and navy during the Spanish-American and Philippine wars. The principal offices will be in New York.

ANTI-TRUST BILL.

Composite Affair Which Will Be Introduced in the House.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The judiciary committee of the house will report today a bill for the regulation of the trusts. The bill is a composite affair, the result of long consultation among the members of the committee. It is drawn jointly by Representatives Powers of Massachusetts, Overstreet of Indiana and Littlefield of Maine, the Republican members of the subcommittee.

It meets in a general way the recommendations of President Roosevelt and Attorney General Knox. It provides for publicity, strengthens existing laws and puts in the hands of the interstate commerce commission sufficient authority to insure the enforcement of both the Sherman and the interstate commerce laws.

It does not require the exposure of the business affairs of stockholders, as it is not believed by members of the subcommittee that such exposure will be of any particular Benefit in the Enforcement of the Laws.

It puts manufacturing corporations, the product of which is sold in more than one state, under the control of the interstate commerce commission. Public service corporations are also brought within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. It provides that any corporation engaged in interstate commerce, which shall transport or offer to transport property subject to the provisions of the interstate commerce law at any other rate, or upon any other than the public terms, or who by payment of a rebate or other device evades such public rate or rates in transportation, or which transports property without prior publication of a tariff in accordance with the interstate commerce law, and any person, firm or corporation which participates in any way in such acts and knowingly receives the benefit shall be of not less than $1,000 and not exceeding $20,000. Any common carrier or transportation company engaged in interstate commerce which shall knowingly transport any property produced or manufactured or sold in violations of the provisions of the law, or of the Sherman anti-trust act, shall be subject to a fine of not more than $5,000, while any officer of such corporation who shall knowingly receive for transportation or aid in transportation of any interdicted property shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment of not less than thirty nor more than sixty days.

Every corporation or joint stock company engaged in interstate or foreign commerce shall file annually a return with the interstate commerce commission stating the circumstances of organization and giving information in regard to its constituent companies, with full reference to laws under which all reorganizations have taken place and information as to all prior companies in the chain of the reorganization, so far as applicable.

CASTRO GIVES IN.

Barriers in the Way of Settlement Are All Removed.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Confirmation was received here last night of the reports from Caracas to the effect that all barriers in the way of a settlement of the claims of Great Britain, Germany and Italy against Venezuela had been removed by the last named country yielding to the demands of the European allies. Minister Bowen, it was learned, would leave Venezuela either Saturday or Sunday, and would come direct to the United States on one of our warships. It is probable that the Dolphin will be used for this purpose. Minister Bowen will be clothed with authority to represent Venezuela as her commissioner for the out of hand without reference to The Hague tribunal, or if this be found impracticable, then he is authorized to act for Venezuela in settling all points open to controversy as far as possible and of drafting the terms on which a final and conclusive arbitration shall be made by the international court at The Hague. The proceedings in which Minister Bowen will participate will take place at Washington, presumably a few days after his arrival in this city. The commissioners on the part of the allies, it is understood, will be their leading diplomatic representatives in Washington.

Adjustment of All Claims

Proposals Are Accepted.

Caracas, Jan. 10.—After two stormy meetings of the cabinet all the conditions set forth in the replies of the powers to President Castro's last proposals in the matter of settling the Venezuelan dispute through arbitration have been accepted by the Venezuelan government. The government considers these conditions to be unjust, but declares it is obliged to yield to force. The Venezuelan answer was delivered to the United States legation here at noon yesterday.

BANQUET OF HORSE MEAT.

"Old Dobbin" Served Up in Various Forms.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—Six hundred people sat down last night to the most remarkable banquet that ever has been given in Berlin. The dishes consisted entirely of horse meat and were served in various forms. The society for the prevention of cruelty to animals issued the invitations to the dinner, which was given for the purpose of demonstrating the nourishing and palatable qualities of horse meat. Privy Councillor von Scefeld said 30,000 horses had been eaten in Berlin last year and that he hoped for a large increase in the future.

TRIED IN SECRET.

No One in Guatemala Knows Anything About Hunter's Acquittal.

New York, Jan. 10.—Replying to an inquiry regarding the reports circulated in the United States that W. G. Hunter, Jr., has been tried and acquitted of the murder of Fitzgerald, the Associated Press correspondent has cabled as follows:

"If there has been a trial it was a secret one. All mystery here."

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 6.—When the senate reconvened yesterday after the holiday recess, few senators were absent. Almost immediately a discussion began regarding the coal situation. Mr. Lodge prefaced his introduction of a bill suspending for ninety days the duty on coal with the statement that in New England there was much distress owing to the scarcity of coal, and that unless relief was afforded at once a number of factories would have to shut down. He was aware, he said, that a bill should originate in the house of representatives, but it was his desire to call the attention of the finance committee to the state of affairs. Mr. Culberson followed with a resolution providing for the removal of the duty on anthracite coal and asked its immediate consideration. Mr. Platt of Connecticut objected, saying it was his understanding that there was no duty on anthracite coal. Mr. Vest took exception to this statement and said that the board of general appraisers and President Roosevelt had decided that such a duty is imposed. Mr. Vest also introduced a resolution on the subject. Another resolution bearing on the subject, introduced by Mr. Jones of Arkansas, recited the charge of W. R. Hearst that there was an illegal combination among certain railroads to control the shipment of anthracite coal, and called on the attorney general for the evidence which it was alleged had been secured by him. It caused a lively debate, in which several Republican senators vigorously resented what they thought was a reflection on the attorney general. The discussion continued until 2 o'clock, when the resolution went over, being displaced by the omnibus statehood bill. Mr. Nelson of Minnesota addressed the senate in opposition to the bill and favored single statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territory. At 4 o'clock the senate adjourned.

In the House.

The house resumed work yesterday after a recess of two weeks, but within two hours the machinery broke down for lack of a quorum. The bill to create a general staff in the army was the issue. An attempt was made to pass it under suspension of the rules, which requires a two-thirds majority. Although all the members of the minority of the military committee indorsed it opposition developed because of the hurried manner in which it was proposed to pass the bill, and the division—108 to 50—developed that it did not command the support of two-thirds of those present. A call of the house followed but the roll call showed about 30 less than a quorum and the house adjourned.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The day in the senate was eventful because of a notable speech by Senator Hoar on his bill regulating trusts and an attack by Senator Vest on protected industries through the operation of the Dingley law. Senator Hoar's utterances were listened to with marked attention. He said that nearly all thoughtful men in this country are agreed that some legislation, state or national, ought to be had for the regulation and control of what are called "trusts" and all large masses of capital accumulated by corporations or artificial persons holding property and conducting business without individual liability. There was, he said, a general feeling of insecurity and alarm about the matter, and we were dealing with a real peril and not with a fancy or imaginary danger. He argued that if his bill should become a law and prove effective no corporation engaging in the commerce which is within the jurisdiction of congress can keep its condition secret. The bill, he said, depends for its validity on the constitutional power of congress to regulate international and interstate commerce.

Senator Vest used as a text for his remarks his resolution introduced on Monday instructing the committee on finance to prepare and report a bill removing the duty on coal. Feeble in the extreme and supporting himself on his desk, he called attention to the condition of distress which had arisen as a result of the shortage of the coal supply. He said that the question was no longer a partisan one, but one of humanity, and that we are not on the verge of a crisis, but actually in it.

Mr. Aldrich took exception to some of Mr. Vest's statements and at his request the resolution went over until today, when Mr. Aldrich will make reply.

At 4:30 the senate adjourned after a brief executive session.

In the House.

The house passed the bill for the creation of a general staff for the army by a vote of 153 to 52. By the terms of the bill it becomes the duty of the general staff to prepare plans for the national defense and for the mobilization of the army in time of war, to investigate and report on all questions affecting the efficiency of the service and to render professional aid to the secretary of war and to the general officers and other superior commanders.

After the general staff bill had been disposed of six members in succession, Messrs. Cooper (Wis.), Lamb (Va.), Morrell (Pa.), Burk (Pa.), Cassell (Pa.) and Adams (Pa.) arose and denied published reports to the effect that they had joined with other members to "pool" their clerical work.

A number of bills of minor character were passed, the most important being one to increase the pension of soldiers totally deaf from $30 to $40 per month.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The senate yesterday discussed the bill for the reorganization of the militia and also the statehood bill. Mr. Mallory of Florida led the Democratic senators in opposition to the section of the militia bill providing for a reserved force of trained men, the contention being that it not only infringed the rights of the several states, but also increased the standing army by a hundred thousand men.

When the statehood bill came up Mr. Beveridge had read a number of resolutions adopted at a recent convention in Oklahoma favoring single statehood with Indian Territory. Mr. Quay, who is leading the fight for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico, criticised the resolutions, saying the people who adopted them had not acted intelligently because the single statehood bill had been withdrawn. He further charged that they did not represent the sentiment of a majority of the people of Oklahoma. Mr. Nelson of Minnesota continued, but did not conclude his remarks in opposition to the omnibus statehood bill.

In the House.

The session of the house yesterday lasted a little more than two hours. The senate bill for the redemption of the silver coinage of the Hawaiian islands and its recoinage into United States coin, was passed after an hour's debate. Several bills of minor importance also were presented. The Philippine constabulary bill was made a special order for to-day.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Yesterday the senate again discussed the Vest resolution requesting the finance committee to report a bill removing the duty on anthracite coal, and Mr. Aldrich replied to some of the criticisms of Mr. Vest, made last Tuesday. Mr. Aldrich insisted the resolution will not accomplish the result desired and that it infringed the constitutional rights of the people in respect to revenue. The resolution finally went over until the next legislative day.

Mr. Nelson resumed his remarks against the omnibus bill. A number of minor bills were passed and the senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House.

The house yesterday passed the Philippine constabulary bill as it was reported from the committee, except for an amendment limiting the number of assistant chiefs to four. The bill provides that the chief of the constabulary and the assistant chiefs who are United States army officers shall have the rank, pay and allowances of brigadier general and colonel, respectively, the difference between such pay and their regular grades to be paid out of the Philippine treasury.

BEET SUGAR MEN WON'T FIGHT.

Withdraw Their Opposition to the Cuban Treaty.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The American Beet Sugar association held its annual session here yesterday and passed resolutions withdrawing any opposition to the ratification of the Cuban reciprocity treaty, but recommending that the treaty be so amended as to express in precise language what is intended to be secured by it to the beet sugar manufacturers of the United States, viz.: That during the period of five years covered by the treaty no sugar exported from Cuba shall be admitted to the United States at a reduction of duty greater than 20 per cent of the rates of duty thereon as provided by the tariff act of July 24, 1897. The association also adopted a resolution protesting against the unnecessary stimulation of the sugar and tobacco industries of the Philippine islands by means of further tariff reductions, thus, the resolution stated, encouraging the people of those islands, where the labor is but a few cents per day, to produce those things which this country can produce, rather than such commodities as we are unable to produce.

VON HOLLEBEN SICK.

German Ambassador Granted a Prolonged Leave of Absence.

Washington, Jan. 10. — Herr von Holleben, the German ambassador, left here for New York yesterday to consult specialists. He has been a sick man for some time and his indisposition has been aggravated by a protracted spell of inclement weather. He expects that his physician will advise a prolonged rest at some of the health resorts in Southern Europe, and has, therefore, arranged to sail on Saturday. At the ambassador's request he has been granted a prolonged leave of absence in the hope that he may be restored to health. Count A. von Quadt-Wykradt-Isny, counsellor of the embassy and first secretary, is now charge d'affaires.

GRAND REVIEW AT DELHI.

Last Important Event of Coronation Durbar.

Delhi, India, Jan. 10.—The review yesterday by the viceroy of India, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, of 30,000 British and native troops led by Lord Kitchener was the last important event of the coronation durbar. The viceroy, the duke of Connaught and the duke of Hess, surrounded by a brilliant staff, took up their positions at the saluting point between the grandstands. From every side an immense multitude of Europeans and natives watched the march past and cheered the favorite regiments.

IT IS UP TO GOODNOW.

Must Answer to the Charges Brought Against Him.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Third Assistant Secretary of State Peirce, who has investigated the charges preferred by the American Association of Shanghai against United States Consul General John Goodnow, has completed his examination of the charges submitted and accompanying affidavits, and has transmitted a copy of these to Mr. Goodnow, with a request that he make response thereto.

WAR ON TREATY.

Gov. Hill Declares the Hay-Bond Compact Would Injure His State.

Augusta, Me., Jan. 10.—Gov. Hill declared in his inaugural message that the ratification of the Hay-Bond treaty would result in serious injury to the state's fishing interests. "The welfare of the coast fishing towns of Maine," he said, "require us to do everything in our power to prevent its acceptance."

Bloodhounds on Trail of Murderer.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 9. — Leo Stratton, a Southern railway engineer, was shot and killed by Bob Nixon, a negro brakeman, near Barnell, Ga., yesterday. A posse with bloodhounds is on the trail of the slayer.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER XI. (Continued.)

"That is the man who is ill there?"

"Yes."

Julia thought her brother looked pale and disturbed, but she was in a mood to question him.

"That girl nurses him, I suppose."

"If you mean Miss Purcell, no. There is a nurse there. I presume she helps."

"Have you seen him?"

"No."

"Ralph do you want to know what is 'borne in upon me,' as they say?"

"Out with it."

"It is not Dick Burt who will be your most dangerous rival."

"Who then?"

And Ralph moved uneasily in his chair, and at last rose up and began walking about.

"This Rothesay."

"Pshaw! Regular woman's talk that is!" he cried, angrily.

"Call it what you please, it's the most likely thing in the world. Shall I attack Rothesay, too?" with a confident smile.

"How can you? They are too near together; they'll see your game. And then, there's the protection for us: Rothesay is just on the eve of marriage. He is probably safe from falling in love with Kate, whatever she may feel for him."

"Only possible. We don't know how the case stands. You would be just as apt to fall in love with a beautiful girl who tended you when you were ill; it would make no difference to you, even if you were married. We don't know anything about him. He may get her bewitched so that she wouldn't listen to you anyway."

Ralph did not speak. He could not say that he knew Vance Rothesay to be the soul of honor; he could not tell Julia that for anyone bearing the name of Caryl to attempt to win Rothesay would be hard, indeed.

He decided to let her do as she pleased. The presence of Rothesay complicated things, he thought. He said:

"I won't give you any directions in the matter, save to impress it upon you that Burt must be taken care of any way. If Rothesay is better, he'll soon leave, and be out of the way."

That was all the conversation between the two that night, and Julia went to bed that night wondering where Ralph had met Rothesay. She was ignorant of a good deal of her brother's history.

The next day was clear, a bright sun shining over the land and water, and a soft west wind blowing.

Julia Caryl did not rise until the sun had been up many hours, and when she did at last come down to breakfast, it was to find that Dick Burt had been there, and her brother Ralph had gone off with him, not knowing when he would come back.

Julia was vexed and impatient. She did not know what to do with herself. At last she put on her hat and walked down to the shore, her face expressing the ennui she was suffering.

"Only let me really get into my work," she was thinking. "When I see Burt again I will see what I can do with him. He doesn't know what my smile is yet."

She went slowly along until she was nearly opposite the Purcell cottage. She saw a figure moving slowly down toward the water. Who was it? Apparently not seeing it, she moved a little faster, and her far-seeing gaze soon made out that it was a man, moving with the utmost care and leaning on a cane.

"It is Rothesay," she said to herself, "and why is he alone?"

She came along still faster, gazing innocently about her, and coming along behind the man, that she might study him more closely.

The tall, gaunt form, the thin and sallow features, the weak-seeming movements, the air of gentlemanliness—she noted all, and drew still nearer, without seeming to have more than glanced at him.

He continued walking, with difficulty down toward the water.

When within a few yards of it he swayed, staggered a pace or two, and then fell to the ground.

Julia ran forward and stooped over him. She saw directly that he had fainted from over-exertion in his weak state.

She caught up his hat and ran and filled it with the cold salt water, she sprinkled the water in his face, and then sat down, taking his head on her arm.

In a few moments he again opened his eyes, and thought he must again be delirious, as he saw the beautiful, solicitous face bent down toward him.

"I thought I had got beyond that!" he murmured, impatiently. "I thought my mind was stronger."

"It is the flesh that is weak," said Julia, with a smile, and in her most melodious tone.

He started at the sound of her voice, and said:

"It is real, then? You speak. I believed I was out of my head again."

"I believe I am real," she responded; "real enough to assist you, I hope. You are not strong enough to walk, you need a little patience."

Rothesay's eyes dwelt in admiration and curiosity upon the woman who appeared to him beautiful enough to have sprung from the sea, as did Venus of old, and she seemed to have come as mysteriously.

"Don't speak to me of patience," he said. "A man can't be patient under some circumstances."

And he tried to raise his head from her arm, but it sank back again, too dizzy to be held upright. He smiled slightly as he whispered:

"But I am sure I can be patient here."

He did not see the look of anticipated triumph that came for an instant into her face.

The next moment he tried again to raise himself, and this time he succeeded.

He sat upright for a few moments, then he said:

"If you will give me your hand I think I can stand now. I did think I had a trifle more strength."

She rose and assisted him to his feet. She placed the cane in his hands and then said:

"If you will lean on my arm, I think you can walk better. This sand is not easy to step on. You must allow me to say you were very careless to come out like this."

Rothesay did as she suggested, and they began making their way, slowly, to the house.

The young man wished she would speak again, for there was a wonderful charm in Julia Caryl's voice, though some of her own sex might have suspected its sincerity.

But he was too breathless to make any remark himself, and so they went on in silence, he leaning heavily on her arm, in spite of all his efforts not to do so.

Just before they reached the house, Kate Purcell came around from the back, evidently having started to go down to the water in search of Rothesay.

She could not help starting and uttering an exclamation of surprise as she saw the two, and she wondered at herself that a constriction seemed to come about her heart.

What could it matter to her? This man was going away to his betrothed in a few days. It made no possible difference to her what he should think of this woman, whose name she did not yet know.

"I imagine this gentleman is your patient, Miss Purcell," said Julia, who was the first one to speak, "and I have half a mind to say that you should have been more strict with him. He is doing himself harm in his impatience."

"He is, indeed," replied Kate, inwardly resenting Julia's words. "But I must exonerate myself from any share in this imprudence. I knew he was coming down stairs to-day, but I had no idea that he would escape out of doors in this way. I was away; but I see that someone should have stood on guard."

As she spoke, the two girls assisted Rothesay into the house, where he immediately lay down upon the lounge, fiercely exasperated with himself at his weakness.

He lay silent, his eyes closed, and his whole face showing how entirely exhausted he was.

Being a man, he did not read Julia Caryl at all as Kate Purcell had done.

The two girls sat and chatted a few minutes with great amiability, Kate surprised at herself that she could feel so hateful toward one who had never done her the least harm.

When Julia rose to go, Rothesay raised himself upon his arm and said:

"I have not yet had the grace to thank you. Next time I have the pleasure of seing you I hope I shall not be quite so helpless."

He extended his hand and she put hers into it, while she smiled and returned some trivial reply in that enchanting voice of hers.

Looking at them thus, Kate could not help thinking that it was not to be wondered at if Vance Rothesay should forget honor in such a presence.

Julia turned easily to Kate and said:

"I hoped to make your acquaintance more thoroughly than I did yesterday, but I congratulate myself on my call to-day."

Instead of going directly, as she had seemed to intend, she began a gay and humorous description of her mishap of the day before—not sparing to ridicule herself, and making a most entertaining history.

Kate could not help laughing heartily, and Rothesay she had not seen look so animated since he came.

But Julia did not stay long; she knew when to go, when her presence was still desirable, and, with a gay adieu, she went away.

Rothesay lay silent for a while, watching Kate as she went about the room, her touch making the rude place look homelike. His thoughts were confused and strange.

In spite of himself, the memory of Miss Lauriat had grown somewhat dim during his sickness, and now it was with something of an effort that he told himself that, in a few days, at the least, he could leave her and go.

"Who is she?" he asked, at last, revealing, as Kate thought, where his thought has been.

Then it struck her that she did not know the name of the lady, and she told him so.

"I think she asked my name in the field yesterday, but I never thought to return the question."

"Oh, where is woman's curiosity?" he exclaimed, with a smile.

Then, a moment later, as he moved uneasily:

"Will you arrange this handkerchief for me? It hurts my arm?"

As Kate bent over him to change the position of his arm, that was in the sling, she felt his eyes upon her, and she was angry at herself that a wave of color rose to her face.

Why should his gaze affect her? Had she not, a hundred times, within the last fortnight, told herself she would be glad when he went away—that he had disturbed the calmness of her home? And was he not as good as married to another? And if he was not, what did it matter to her?

When she drew back he caught her hand and held it fast, and she could but stand still, longing for her usual composure.

"I know I have been such a care to you," he began, looking at her with a gaze that perhaps he would not have allowed had he known that there was more than love and thankfulness in it. "You don't disclaim that I have been a care to you?" he said, smiling slightly.

"No; but you must be aware that we are glad to have been of service to you," she said, in reply, speaking somewhat colder than she knew.

The cool tones irritated her into speaking somewhat warmer than he had intended to do.

"You have endured me well—you have been more kind than I could possibly have expected, and I thank you for it," he continued, hurriedly. "But after all that I have suffered, Miss Purcell, I cannot regret a single pain—for the accident and the illness were the means of my knowing you."

He seemed not able to let go his hold upon her hand; he had spoken with an earnestness that appeared to have conquered all his previous resolutions.

What could she say? Was he merely complimenting her in the extravagant manner of society? She knew so little of society. But she knew that had she been Laura Lauriat, and heard his tone and words, seen the look in his eyes, she should have trembled for her empire over him.

Moved though she was, the sterling uprightness of her character sustained her in temptation which was perhaps the greatest of her life. It was the temptation to yield, at least inwardly, to the tenderness and passion of his voice. But she took his words and manner to be merely an inordinate gratitude.

"You have no call to be so grateful, Mr. Rothesay," she said, now succeeding in withdrawing her hand. "It is not a flattering thing to say, but I trust we should have done the same by any stranger who had been unfortunate like you."

As he listened to her—and her tones were almost icy, so much repression had she put upon herself—his face faded from its warm expression into one of such bitter disappointment that it pierced like a knife into the girl's heart. But she did not soften; she was afraid of herself if she relaxed her hold over herself even so much as by a hair's breadth.

"You and your father have been very kind," he repeated in a set voice, "and I shall never forget it. I hope I shall not trespass upon your kindness much longer. I had thought that to-morrow I might be able to leave, but, he sighed, wearily, "I fear that I overestimated my strenght. I shall be obliged to remain yet a day longer."

"Yes, it will be safer. You will gain nothing by too great haste," she replied.

She was longing to get away by herself, but just then a neighbor came and sat down for a long gossip, and the girl was obliged to endure it, and it took a strength and resolution of which she did not know herself capable.

At last she was free, and she fled out of doors, walking down the beach until she came to a sheltered corner of rock, when she threw herself down on the sands with an expression so suggestive of despair as to be stronger than any words could have been.

She loved Vance Rothesay. She could no longer deny it to herself. His voice and eyes had stirred the deepest depths of her heart. She loved him, and loved hopelessly—most hopelessly.

She sat with her white face turned toward the sea, her eyes tearless, looking, unseeingly, forward. The one thought that repeated itself, again and again in her mind was the one shaped in these words:

"He could have loved me if he were only free!"

It was a thought far more dangerous to her peace of mind than if she had felt assured that he could never have felt more than in a friendly way. Pride would have aided her then; now the look into her future was dreary, indeed; it seemed to her that she could not face it.

From the first moment of her seeing Vance Rothesay he had been to her like the hero of those very vague dreams that come to almost every girl; and she struggled with that feeling until, at times, she imagined she had conquered it.

If he had gone away without noticing her, she knew that she could sooner have conquered a peace with herself; but now— In vain, she told herself that his tone and glance might mean nothing but a moment's feeling that he would instantly forget.

It was not conceit or self-love that told her he had felt as deeply as he seemed to do. She could read his heart, and she read there what made him love her still more deeply and what enhanced her despair.

She saw herself going down the path of life alone, always with that one love in her heart. She longed for him to go; and she looked upon his departure as the shutting out of the light of her life.

Time flew on relentlessly as she sat there, struggling to attune herself to at least a decent bearing of the fate laid upon her.

She knew that she must go back to the house; that she must prepare the dinner; that she must so school her face and voice that no one, least of all Rothesay, should know her mood was otherr than what it had been a month ago. The time had come in which her strength was to be tested.

After a time she rose to her feet and slowly fastened on her hat, finding that her fingers were cold and stiff, though she had been sitting in the full glare of the sun.

She moved forward over the sands as if there was a weight upon her.

"Of course," she said to herself, with a wan smile—"of course, I shall get somewhat accustomed to this, as the galley-slave gets used to his chain. I am not going to be like the women I have heard of, who have been 'crossed in love.' No; I shall settle down some of these years, and be a comfortable old maid. It need not kill me that I have missed the dearest thing in life. I shall find other things, other hopes, and I must make the best of them."

Though she told herself she was looking at her fate in a philosophical way, yet she found that she could not yet lighten the load upon her.

When she reached the house she found that it was already after noon, and her father, who had been out fishing for the first time in several weeks, had returned and was waiting impatiently for his dinner.

"Where in the world have you been, Kate?" he asked, almost fretfully, as she entered. "I hope you haven't taken to gadding. I'm hungry as a bear. Fry those perch as soon as you can. Mr. Rothesay must be half-starved, as this is his first day down stairs."

Mr. Rothesay disclaimed any particular hunger, and Kate hastened to make a fire and put on the fish.

She was only too thankful that her father did not notice some difference in her looks. And by the time the dinner was served, the bending over the stove had flushed her face so that it had more than its usual color.

WOMAN'S NEW BENEFACTOR.

James Buckham Says Housework Is Not Specially Beneficial.

A new benefactor of women has arisen, Mr. James Buckham, who, in the American Kitchen Magazine, refutes the popular theory that housework is physically beneficial to the sex that usually performs it. Almost no woman knows how to sweep properly; sweeping tends to make the sweeper one-sided. Men, it seems, know how to sweep without raising a dust, and have stronger backs. Washing, scrubbing and all the heavy work of the household is detrimental to the good looks and strength of the women who undertake such tasks. The conclusion seems to be that men are the natural toilers in the home as outside, and that women will cease to be a drudge. There is also an implication of womanly weakness and failure here, but we will not stop to point it out.—Celia P. Woolley, in the Pilgrim.

DIDN'T WANT A VICTORIA.

One of Marshall P. Wilder's Exceedingly Funny Anecdotes.

Although the characteristic wit and humor of every race is made exceedingly funny in Marshall P. Wilder's telling, the little humorist shines particularly when he relates an Irish yarn.

"It was the 17th of March last," says Wilder, "and a certain Irishman expressed the intention of riding in style in the annual parade. When he endeavored to secure a carriage, however, he was informed that everything was gone.

"'Hold on a minute, though,' said the proprietor of the livery stable. 'I think I can let you have a victoria.'

"'You do, do ye?' answered the Celt savagely. 'Will I think not!'

"And the proprietor could not understand why the Irishman walked angrily away."—New York Times.

A SPECULATION IN APPLES.

How One Clever Dago Made Misfortune Profitable—Got $10.

"Don't talk to me about the down trodden Dago," said a patrolman who was on post on Dey street, where the pushcart peddlers abound.

"I rescued one of them half a dozen times from being run down by wagons, and finally warned him that he would have his pushcart wrecked if he were not more careful.

"'Si gooda,' the Dago replied, showing his teeth and grinning.

"'I believe you want to be run down,' I exclaimed.

"'Si,' replied the Dago. 'Me hava four dolla da apples. Biga da wagon smasha da pushcart. Da boys geta da apples. Da man he pays me da ten dolla.'

"And the Dago rubbed his hands in enjoyment of the anticipated profit."—New York Times.

His Name Was O'Reilly.

In some country districts of Ireland it is not unusual to see the owners' names simply chalked on carts and other vehicles, in order to comply with legal regulations. It is related by an exchange that a policeman accosted a countryman, whose name had been wiped out unknown to him by a mischievous boy.

"Is that cart yours, my good man?"

"Av coorse it is," was the reply; "do you see anything the matter wid it?"

"I observe," said the pompous policeman, "that the name is o-bliterated."

"Then, ye're wrong," quoth the countryman, who had never come across the long dictionary word before, "for me name's O'Reilly an' I don't care who knows it!"—New York Mail and Express.

Pie Filled With Live Birds.

The new governor of British Guiana, Sir James Swettenham is a man of original ideas. He gave a ball the other day, and at supper an enormous pie was placed in front of him. When he cut the crust, two and twenty little birds hopped out and flew about the room. Their feathers had been painted in brilliant colors. At first it was thought that the idea was to illustrate a well known nursery rhyme, but it seems that this sort of bird-pie is a popular custom in the Malay states, where Sir James comes from. The birds are caught and passed around among the guests fortune being supposed to smile upon all who handle them.—Kingston Cor. Nashville Banner.

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.

A medicine that has restored so many women to health and can produce proof of the fact must be regarded with respect. This is the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which cannot be equalled by any other medicine the world has ever produced. Here is another case:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I was troubled with falling of the womb, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains, backache, headache, dizzy and fainting spells, and stomach trouble.

"I doctored for about five years but did not seem to improve. I began the use of your medicine, and have taken seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three of Blood Purifier, and also used the Sanative Wash and Liver Pills, and am now enjoying good health, and have gained in flesh. I thank you very much for what you have done for me, and heartily recommend your medicine to all suffering women."—MISS EMMA SNYDER, 218 East Center St., Marion, Ohio.

"FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN."

Women would save time and much sickness if they would write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice as soon as any distressing symptoms appear. It is free, and has put thousands of women on the right road to recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

Man Who Had Never Been Known to Buy Drinks.

Col. George A. Price says that while he was civil service commissioner of Brooklyn, he discovered, upon examining a paper of an applicant for a position, that the character of the applicant had been certified to by a friend who, opposite the line: "Does he use intoxicating liquors—if so, to what extent?" had written this answer:

"I have known him for eight or ten years; he always takes a drink whenever he is asked; but I have never known him to buy a drink on more than two occasions in that time."

Many people in this neighborhood tell of aches relieved and pains departed because of the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. One of these is W. A. Terry, the well known Grocer. Here is his story:

"I suffered for four months with Kidney and Bladder Trouble and was so bad that I was almost confined to my bed. I could get no relief until I commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I could notice an improvement the second day I took the pills. I would recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from Kidney Complaints."

WIDOWS OF HEROES

WIVES OF REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS DRAW PENSIONS.

Seven Women Allowed Monthly Sum in Recognition of the Services of Their Husbands to the Cause of Liberty in the Army of Washington.

Nearly 120 years have elapsed since the revolutionary war came to an end. The last survivor of the thousands of men who took part in that great struggle for liberty died more than thirty years ago. Yet, there are on Uncle Sam's pension rolls the names of seven persons each of whom has been granted a small sum of money monthly on account of it.

Three of the seven are the only surviving widows of revolutionary soldiers. The other four are daughters and are pensioned by a special act of Congress. The widows are: Rebecca Mayo, aged eighty-nine years, of Newburn, Va.; Nancy Jones, aged eighty-eight years, of Jonesboro, Tenn., and Esther S. Damon, aged eighty-eight years of Plymouth Union, Vermont.

Rebecca Mayo, whose maiden name was Rebecca Dawson, is the widow of Stephen Mayo, whom she married in Virginia on Nov. 24, 1834, when she was twenty-six and he seventy-seven years of age. Her husband enlisted as a private in a Virginia regiment in 1776, and served three or four months. He enlisted again in February, 1777, and served for one year. He participated in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. In 1832, at the age of seventy-five years, he made application for a pension, which was allowed. He died in 1847, and the same year application was made by his widow and her claim was allowed.

Nancy Jones is the widow of Darling Jones, who served nine months as a private in a North Carolina regiment, and was in the battle of Monk's Corner and also in some skirmishes with the Cherokee Indians. Her maiden name was Nancy Huff. She married in Carter county, Tenn., at the age of twenty-five years, her husband being sixty-nine years of age. Mr. Jones was drawing a pension at the time of his death in 1848. Her claim was allowed in 1853.

Esther S. Damon, who was formerly Esther Sumner, married Noah Damon at Bridgewater, Vt., in 1835, when she was twenty-two years of age and he seventy-five. Mr. Damon enlisted at Milton, Mass., in 1775, as a private, and served nearly two years. He was wounded at the battle of Long island, and was granted a pension in 1848. He died in 1853, and she was pensioned as his widow.

Sympathetic.

The late Congressman Russell of Connecticut used to tell the following, which was his favorite story:

One of a gang of laborers was suddenly killed in an accident, and an Irishman was delegated by the foreman to go and break the sad news to the unfortunate man's wife. "Be very careful," said the foreman, "to sympathize with Mrs. Jones all you can, for it will be a terrible shock to her to learn of John's death."

Pat, however, forgot what to say. Mrs. Jones herself came to the door in response to the knock, and Pat promptly asked:

"Does the Widow Jones live here?"

"I am Mrs. Jones," replied the woman, "but I am not a widow. My husband is working to-day, as usual."

"They told me it was on this street," said Pat, "and, begorra, I'm pretty sure this is the very house."

"But I tell you my husband is living," protested Mrs. Jones.

"You're a liar!" exclaimed Pat. "Sure, they're bringin' his body around the corner now."

Absent.

Among the many stump speakers who invaded the Middle West during the first McKinley campaign was Corporal Tanner, the well-known pension attorney. At one small town in Illinois he was suddenly taken ill, and the physician who had been summoned directed, among other things, that he soak his feet in hot water.

"I don't think that would do any good," said the Corporal, with a very serious air.

"Why not?" asked the doctor, with some feeling.

Glancing down at the artificial substitutes, the other replied:

"They were both shot off in '63 at Gettysburg."

A Friend's Indorsement.

Col. George A. Price says that while he was Civil Service Commissioner of Brooklyn he discovered, upon examining a paper of an applicant for a position, that the character of the applicant had been certified to by a friend who, opposite the line, "Does he use intoxicating liquors—if so, to what extent?" had written this answer:

"I have known him for eight or ten years; he always takes a drink whenever he is asked, but I have never known him to buy a drink on more than two occasions in that time."

The paper was marked zero.

Popularity of Dark Women.

A statistical inquiry undertaken by Dr. Beddoe has brought out the curious fact that in England a brunette has ten chances of being married to nine chances if she is a blonde, and the English women are gradually losing their fairness of skin and hair in darker types, simply because men persist in selecting the darker-haired women for wives. The same thing is happening in Germany, France and Switzerland.

FIRST STAGE OF CATARRH.

A Serious Mistake Which Thousands Are Making.

The first stage of catarrh is what is commonly known as "catching cold." It may be in the head, nose, throat or lungs. Its beginning is sometimes so severe as to cause a chill and considerable fever, or it may be so slight as to not hinder a person from his usual business. In perhaps a majority of cases little or no attention is paid to the first stage of catarrh, and hence it is that nearly one-half of the people have chronic catarrh in some form.

To neglect a cold is to invite chronic catarrh. As soon as any one discovers the first symptoms of catching cold he should at once begin the use of Peruna according to directions on the bottle, and the cold is sure to pass away without leaving any bad effects.

Unless this is done the cold is almost sure to end in the second stage of catarrh, which is making so many lives miserable. If Peruna was taken every time one has a cold or cough, chronic catarrh would be practically an unknown disease.

Miss Elizabeth Uber, No. 57 Dassett street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"I have always dreaded unsettled weather because of my extreme liability to catch cold, when a catarrhal trouble would quickly develop through my entire system, which it would take weeks to drive away. I am thankful to say that since I have taken PERUNA I do not have any reason to dread this any more. If I have been at all exposed to the damp, wet or cold weather, I take a dose or two of PERUNA and it throws out any hint of sickness from my system."—Miss Elizabeth Uber.

Mrs. M. J. Brink, No. 820 Michigan avenue, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"This past winter during the wet and cold weather I caught a sudden and severe cold, which developed a catarrhal condition through my entire system, and so affected my general health that I was completely broken down, and became nervous and hysterical and unfit to supervise my home. My physician prescribed for me, but somehow his medicine did me no good. Reading of PERUNA I decided to try it. After I had taken but three bottles I found myself in fine health."—Mrs. M. J. Brink.

Sibyl A. Hadley, 26 Main street, Huntington, Ind., writes:

"Last winter after getting my feet wet I began to cough, which gradually grew worse until my throat was sore and raw. Ordinary remedies did not help me and cough remedies nauseated me. Reading an advertisement of what PERUNA could do I decided to try a bottle, and you can imagine how glad I felt when it began to relieve me in a very short time. In less than two weeks I was completely cured."—Sibyl A. Hadley.

Miss Sarah McGahan, No. 197 Third street Albany, N. Y., writes:

"A few months ago I suffered with a severe attack of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve. My hearing became bad, my eyes became irritated and feverish. Nothing seemed right and nothing I ate tasted good. I took PERUNA and within two weeks I was perfectly well."—Sarah McGahan.

SYRUP OF FIGS

Acts Gently;
Acts Pleasantly;
Acts Beneficially;
Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

A. N. Dare has been appointed state expert printer in the place of C. C. Whitney, resigned. Mr. Dare is very popular with the newspaper fraternity of the state, and will make an excellent official.

While it may seem a little early, the forming of the Municipal League in this city is looked upon by some as the opening of the campaign for the election of city officers. The election will not be held until next November, and a full vote will probably be polled at that time.

That Thief River Falls is the metropolis of Red Lake county is proven by the postal receipts. At Red Lake Falls the receipts from the sale of postage stamps, postal cards, stamped envelopes and box rent for the year just past was $3,048.18 while at Thief River Falls it was $4,200.00

An attempt will be made this winter by the Minnesota Good Roads association to have a law passed providing for the appointment of a good roads commission, and for an annual tax of not more than one-twentieth of a mill on all property in the state. The money is to be spent by the commission in building good roads, and no county shall receive more than 3 per cent or less than one-half of one per cent in any year. This would be a good law, and should pass.

The Red Lake Falls Courier makes considerable of a howl because it did not get the county printing, claiming that it had in the lowest bid. While it is true that the bid submitted by the Courier for publishing the delinquent tax list, financial statement and commissioners proceedings was lower than the bid accepted by the county board, yet had the Courier's bid been accepted it would have cost the county more for its printing than it now will. The Courier submitted no bid for publishing ditch notices, and other legal notices at the disposal of the auditor, or for doing the county's job work, and intended to secure these and charge for them at legal rates, which would have resulted in making the total amount of the county printing cost considerable more than it now will. The bid accepted is a business like one and everything is put down in black and white. In fact the commissioners were instructed by the public examiner to accept only a bid which was for doing all of the county printing.

HAS A SCHEME.

Tom Marshall Would Secure Action.

Representative Tom Marshall of North Dakota, is trying to get up a combination with western members interested in Indian treaty bills to bring pressure on Speaker Hendenson for one or two night sessions to consider them.

Marshall has the Fort Totten bill on the calendar. The South Dakota members have the Rosebud treaty pending, the Minnesota delegation is interested in the Red Lake bills and other western members have bills in the same parliamentary situation. All are anxious to get action, but have been unable to do anything because of the opposition of Chairman Cannon of the appropriations committee. He has indicated he will withdraw that opposition if provision is inserted in each of these bills that no money shall be paid to the Indians until it has been received from the settlers. He also wants to have these treaties referred back to the Indians for acceptance after being amended before the laws shall become effective.

While the friends of the bills may have to accept Cannon's term, they do not want to unless necessary and will try to secure consideration of the bills in the present shape. An attack will be made on the speaker and Chairman Sheridan of the Indian affairs committee when the latter returns from Hot Springs.

A CITY LEAGUE

Formed to Protect Public Funds of the City.

There was a meeting of several citizens in Bothum's Red White and Blue confectionery store Monday evening. The object of the meeting was to form a Municipal League to investigate the actions of the city council in some of the appropriations of public funds. Those who attended the meeting were reluctant in giving any information to the public, but it is understood that the main objection of those present resulted from the council's appropriating money to send Mayor Kratka to Washington and also to the spending of the city's money on the public roads in the country. H. W. Lee will be attorney for the league and another meeting will be held this evening when a permanent organization will be made.

The members of the city council claim—and it is true—that they have always done what the people wished and that public sentiment is with them strongly. Public meetings were held unanimously asking the council to appropriate money for sending the mayor to Washington at both times, and, as for the spending of money on the country roads, they had a perfect legal right to do this and it was advocated by nearly every business man in the city at that time.

VOL. XX. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1903. NUMBER 3

GOOD SHOWING

City is in Good Shape Financially.

City Clerk Lars Backe has prepared a financial statement of the city for the past year and it shows that the city is in excellent shape. The total bonded indebteness and immediate liabilities of the city on Jan. 1st, 1903, were $24,448.51, or just $113.59 more than they were last January when the present council took charge of the city affairs. A large amount—about $4,000.00—was spent by the city in the construction of sidewalks, and this will all have to be paid back into the city treasury by the owners of lots in front of whose places the sidewalks were constructed, as the city is truly in better financial condition than it was a year ago. Money to the amount of $1,706.00 was expended on roads in the county outside of the city limits and $1,806.98 was expended in the city. The expenses incurred in attempting to open up the Red Lake reservation were $3,092.97, and expences incurred by the board of health were $529.23. The other expenses of the city, such as salaries paid officials, and incidental expenses were about the same as in previous years, with the addition of $600 paid for the chemical engine.

A Good Thing.

An attempt will be made to have Congress appropriate a goodly sum to aid the various states in the construction of permanent highways throughout the country. A bill has been introduced which if it passes will be of material benefit to the rural districts in the building and keeping in repair post roads. There is no question but what such a measure should pass with little or no opposition. Now that rural free delivery is no longer an experiment but an established fact, the national government would only be doing right in contributing its share towards the maintenance of permanent post roads. By the provisions of the bill rural municipalities can obtain financial help on showing a disposition to contribute by money or labor to the construction of roads in their districts. Good roads make a country. Without them no country can thrive to its rightful extent.

IN ADVANCE

Payment for Red Lake Lands Must Be Made.

A letter from Mayor Kratka says that he thinks it will be impossible to secure the passage of any bill which will open the Red Lake reservation unless it contains a provision for selling the lands to the highest bidder at not less than $5 per acre, payment to be made in advance, and to be followed by two years residence and cultivation. While a majority of the citizens here desire to see it opened up under any conditions, there is considerable objection to the payment in advance, as it will not give a poor man any chance to secure a claim there at all. Others, however, argue that it will be a good thing for the town as will bring here a class of settlers who have money, and who will develop the land in a high state of cultivation much sooner than if it was homesteaded by people who would not have the means to develop it.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Clapp to-day introduced his bill for the sale of eleven townships of the ceded Red Lake lands, about which there has been so much discussion lately. It provides for the sale at public auction of not more than 160 acres to each purchaser, one-fifth purchase money to be paid in cash and the balance in five equal annual installments.

Sections 16 and 36 of each township are to be reserved and patented to the state of Minnesota under the school grant. The bill also provides that the Indians are to remove to a diminished reserve within six months of the passage of the act, and are to be allowed to take allotments of 160 acres each on the diminished reserve.

They are also to be paid $20,000 for abandoned improvements and $300,000 of the proceeds of the sales are to be distributed per capita among them immediately after the sale and the remainder in fifteen annual installments. It is provided further that the Red Lake band is to hold the diminished reserve separate from any other land and is not to lose the rights accruing to it under the existing treaties. The bill will be referred to the secretary of the interior for report.

A Washington dispatch says that Senator Clapp and Representative Eddy will attempt to have the bill opening the eleven townships made an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill. If they succeed there will be no doubt of the bill becoming passed at this session.

IT'S ORGANIZED

Municipal Leauge Now a Permanent Institution.

The citizens of Thief River Falls who are interested in forming a Municipal League here met last Thursday evening in Bothun's confectionery store and elected the following officers:

President—Chas. Evenson.
Secretary—Alex Sweas.
Treasurer—A. B. Helgeson.

An adjournment was then taken to Tuesday evening in order to give a committee on by-laws and constitution a chance to report

The meeting Tuesday evening was held in H. W. Lee's office. There was some division among the members as to whether or not the league should go to work and rake up all of the old deals of this and former city councils. Some wanted the sale of the dumping grounds by Alderman Barzen to the city investigated, and also the purchase of the city park. Others, however, thought that the league should commence work from the present date and see that everything was done according to law in the future. The following statement and resolution is given to the public:

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Gentlemen;—

Please to take notice;—

That at a meeting of The Municipal League of Thief River Falls, Minn., the following resolution was passed with instructions that copies thereof be served upon you and delivered to the press of the city, viz:

Resolved that the Municipal League of Thief River Falls, Minn. is opposed to the employment and payment of a private secretary to the Mayor and will oppose the paymant of any salary thereto, by all means in its power and will institute action to recover any money paid to such secretary. Adopted by Aye and No. vote; Ayes, 20; noes, none.

C. M. Evenson,
President.

A. A. Sweans,
Secretary.

No money has as yet been paid to the private secretary, as a month's salary has not yet been earned. On the first of February a month's salary will be due and if a warrant is issued a suit will at once be commenced to recover the amount. If the league is victorious and the courts hold that the salary of a private secretary shall not be paid, private citizens who have signed a guarantee bond will have to pay the expenses of Mayor Kratka.

A SUNDAY FIRE

Came Near Destroying St. Bernard's Church.

Fire came very near destroying St. Bernard's Catholic church Sunday afternoon at about five o'clock. The fire started in the sacristy of the church and was caused by the explosion of an air-tight stove. It had gained considerable headway before the fire department reached the ground, and had it not been for the good work done by the chemical engine crew the building would undoubtedly have been destroyed, as, owing to the distance of the church from the river, it took some time to get a stream of water upon the flames. The chemical not only held the fire in check, but had nearly extinguished it.

The damage done to the church by fire, smoke and water was considerable, but it is fully covered by insurance, the society having a policy in a church insurance association for $2,000.

The chemical engine exploded and Art Crowe was rendered unconscious by smoke and heat, but fortunately nothing serious happened.

Announcement is made at the treasury department at Washington that the agent sent to Crookston to secure a site for a public building was unable to get one for $4,000, the sum appropriated by congress for the purpose. Assistant Secretary Taylor has announced that the attention of congress will be called to the matter.

Then it was that he got into a wrangle with Dowie.

The Legislature

Proceedings of the Week in the..... State Law Mill...

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 13. — The announcing of committees by Lieut. Gov. Jones and the reading of Gov. Van Sant's appointments were the only business transacted in the senate. The governor's message showed that all state officers had been reappointed, but owing to the lateness of the hour no action was taken on the matter.

The chairmen of the principal committees are: Corporations, Thompson; finance, Brower; judiciary, Somerville; railroads, Hawkins; rules, Lord; taxes and tax laws, E. E. Smith.

In the House.

It was expected that Speaker Babcock would announce the committees, but the list was not ready.

The chairmanships of the leading committees have been decided upon as follows: appropriations, Tighe; judiciary, Stevenson; railroads, W. A. Nolan; taxes and tax laws, Wells.

Representative Minnette introduced a bill extending the term of the present members of the legislature to four years, and making their terms of office four years hereafter, and limiting sessions of the legislature after 1905 to thirty working days.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—Speaker Babcock yesterday announced the committees.

"There is a gang of horse thieves systematically working in Minnesota, and something should be done to catch them," said Representative C. von Wald of Nerstrand, in explaining his bill to increase from $50 to $500 the state reward for the arrest and conviction of horse thieves. Mr. von Wald believes that not less than a hundred teams of horses have been stolen in Minnesota during the past year.

A bill providing for a police pension fund in cities and villages, and a pension of $40 a month for retired and disabled policemen, was introduced in the house by Ambrose Tight of St. Paul by request.

The following bills were introduced: Repealing section of Laws of 1895 which assesses traction engines $50 for damage done to bridges; providing for an additional judge of the district court for the Fourteenth judicial district; amending the home rule charter law so as to provide for the amendment of city charters, and defining the powers of charter commissions; abolishing days of grace on rates and other evidence of indebtedness; permitting the incorporation of subordinate lodges of the Masonic order; fixing the pay of county commissioners at $5 per day and 10 cents per mile traveled in counties whose assessed valuation is more than $4,000,000.

In the Senate.

The senate was in session a bare half-hour yesterday.

A resolution was adopted urging the Minnesota congressional delegation to support the immediate passage of an act repealing the present tariff on coal.

A new constitution for Minnesota is the object of Senate File No. 9, introduced by Senator F. H. Peterson of Moorhead. The bill provides for submitting the question of a constitutional convention at the general election of 1904. It was referred to the judiciary committee. The measure is advocated to secure reforms in the constitution, for which individual amendments have repeatedly been introduced.

A provision allowing an elector to demand the ballot of the party which he intends to support in one of the modifications to the primary election law contemplated in Senate File No. 11, introduced by Senator John A. Alley of Buffalo. Under the present law if the voter is challenged he must declare what party he voted for at the last election and receive a ballot of that party.

The following bills were introduced: For the suppression of bucket shops; to legalize the incorporation of certain villages under chapter 145 of the General Laws of 1885; to repeal section in chapter 277 of the General Laws of 1895, known as the corrupt practices act; to legalize defective deeds and the record thereof; to create an additional judge in the Fourteenth judicial district.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 15.—A bill providing for an additional appropriation of $1,500,000 for the completion of the state capitol was introduced yesterday by Senator Hiler H. Horton of St. Paul.

A resolution was adopted providing for an investigation of freight rates on lignite from North Dakota.

The senate was in session less than an hour.

The following bills were introduced: To diminish the bounty on wolves from $15 to $5, and to establish other bounties; to change the primary election day from the middle of September to the first of July, and to render an elector voting at the primary election ineligible for signing a petition of an independent candidate; to increase the salary of the attorney general from $3,500 to $4,800.

In the House.

The house was in session scarcely an hour, and after transacting minor business, adjourned. The following bills were introduced:

Requiring townships, villages and cities and counties to share the expense of controlling infectious diseases; offering a state reward of $200 for the arrest and conviction of horse thieves; providing that inmates of the soldiers' home shall retain their pensions, except when in excess of $4 per month, and the inmate has a wife or child dependent upon him for support; repealing the state law offering a bounty for the killing of wolves; giving justice of peace jurisdiction over cases of forcible entry and unlawful retainer; providing for submission to the voters of a constitutional amendment authorizing the imposition of an income tax by the state, a gross earnings or a property tax on franchises and a registry tax on mortgages (same as tax amendment submitted at the recent election).

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—Representative L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis introduced a bill to regulate the use of public roads and streets by automobiles, motor cycles or motor vehicles of all kinds.

The first house file passed that body under suspension of the rules. It changes the time of the general term of the district court in Red Lake county.

The following bills were introduced: Fixing legal attorneys' fees for actions brought in justice courts; restricting the speed of automobiles to eight miles an hour in thickly settled districts and to fifteen miles an hour on all other streets and roads; legalizing the organization of municipal courts in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants under the law of 1895; allowing cities to sell surplus light, heat, steam, water or electricity produced by them to individuals; making claims of farm laborers a first lien on agricultural products owned or raised by their employers.

In the Senate.

A permanent sanitarium for consumptives is provided for in Senate File No. 26, which was introduced by Senator Ferris of Brainerd. The measure outlines a detailed plan for the construction and maintenance of the institution. It was referred to the committee on finance.

The prevention of boards of health of villages or townships from running up big accounts and compelling the county to pay them is the object of Senate File 25, introduced by Senator A. V. Rieke of Fairfax.

R. E. Thompson of Preston was honored by being selected president pro tem. of the senate.

Both houses adjourned about 11 a. m. to accept the invitation of the state capitol commission to inspect the new capitol.

John Heslie was accidentally shot at Butler's hotel, at Anoka, by John Habberly. Hesli and Habberly went to the barn to kill a pig, taking a revolver with them. Heslie was to do the shooting, but Habberly begged to be allowed to do it. He took the weapon, but the shot went wild, and struck Heslie in the thigh, severing an artery. Little hope is entertained for Heslie's recovery. His home is in Champlin.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER XII.

Richard Burt receives a Smile.

Vance Rothesay, alone, noticed that there was some change in Kate Purcell's face—what, he could not tell; there seemed a kind of hardening. He did not suspect the cause, for the girl had always kept herself so well in hand that she had betrayed nothing of her secret.

Yet he believed he had never been so miserably unhappy before.

Directly after dinner, with Charles Purcell's help, he mounted the stairs to his own room. He wished to be alone. He was deeply humiliated at the weakness which had led him to express to Kate a feeling which it was dishonorable in him to feel—far more to allow to be known.

There was a battle within him, more fierce than that which Kate had endured. It was hard for him to lie still. He longed to leave the place; he felt as if in flight lay his only assurance of safety. It is true, he had said nothing but what many men might have said, and still have meant nothing but an admiration that might be harmless. But so well did he now know his own heart that he could not but feel that he had revealed more than he ought.

Still Kate, so rigorously had she controlled herself, had not revealed what she felt, and Rothesay had so little conceit that he had no idea of her thoughts of him.

Though he told himself he was glad she had not felt any tenderness, yet the very belief stung him with an intolerable pain. He was nothing to her—she never would have loved him.

Thinking thus, tossing restlessly on his couch, he at last fell into a disturbed sleep, the last thing of which he was conscious being a resolve to leave on the morrow.

Notwithstanding the strength of his resolution, he was not able to leave the place the next day; but on the day following he came down stairs, looking like a ghost, though with a resolve strongly written on his face.

"Will you do me the kindness to order the depot carriage to come for me in time for the 10 o'clock train?" he asked of Mr. Purcell.

"But you are not strong enough; it is the height of rashness. You should remain here a couple of days more, at least," was the expostulating answer.

Rothesay could not help glancing at Kate, and she said:

"It does seem very rash, Mr. Rothesay."

She had come to that condition when she was longing to have him go—as one who has anticipated some blow so long that one is impatient to have it fall.

"You are very kind. I hope I shall some time be able to show my sense of gratitude; but I must be the judge of my own strength. If you will order the carriage, Mr. Purcell?"

"Certainly, I will do so."

Purcell rose and left the room, and Vance and Kate were left alone. She longed to run away, but she could not well rise and leave directly.

Rothesay was leaning back in his chair, unable to take his eyes from this girl whom he expected never to see again. He could not help it that he felt the parting from her to be like death to him; but he must prevent the revealing of that feeling.

At last, saying something about some work out of doors, Kate rose to leave the room; but she was detained by his voice:

"Miss Purcell."

She turned, subduing the tremor that came upon her at the sound of his voice.

"I believe this is my good-bye, for the carriage will stop here in a few moments. I am foolish, I know, but still I cannot help asking if I may always think of you as a friend?"

The words were very commonplace; but he felt that he could not go without speaking them, miserably cold and insignificant though they were. He held out his hand as he spoke, and she put hers into it.

"I am your friend," she said.

Some instinct made him say:

"And if ever I need one who is truly a friend, I may rely upon you—I may call upon you?"

"You know that you may," she made answer, thinking how unlikely it was that such a time would ever come.

Then she turned away and left him, and half an hour later Mr. Purcell assisted him to mount the carriage that was to take him to the railroad station.

He lifted his hat, his pallid face illumined by a sad smile, when he leaned back on the seat and was driven out of sight.

Kate was glad that her father left the house soon after for the day. She was thankful to be alone in the battle that she must fight, that she might go on with her life, and let no one know from her manner of the wound which she concealed.

Meanwhile, Rothesay reached the station, bought his ticket, and sat down upon a seat on the platform, hoping the fresh air might revive him.

He was glad to realize more than ever this morning that his physical powers were returning to him. He felt much stronger, despite his exertions, than since his illness, and the fact made his courage rise—the courage that should help him to conquer a love that was dishonorable.

There were very few people at the little station—one or two countrymen and the stationmaster.

Suddenly Rothesay heard a step behind him, more light and elastic than the others, and a voice asked:

"Am I late? Has the train gone?"

Rothesay turned and saw Ralph Caryl walking up the platform, his figure looking graceful as ever, his face having that insolently-assured air that is sometimes so aggravating.

At the same moment Caryl saw Rothesay, and stopped abruptly. There was a flush on Caryl's face and a light in his eyes that betrayed that, early as it was, he had been drinking enough to excite him.

"You here?" he exclaimed. "By Jove, a fellow never knows when he is going to meet his friends. I thought you were shut up in Purcell's chamber, still playing at having a fever. So you've decided to give up the game, eh?"

Evidently, the sight of Rothesay was very infuriating to Caryl, or he would never have given way to his temper thus. Though he had known Rothesay was at Purcell's, and all the circumstances, he had not seen the young man until now.

Rothesay had risen, and was leaning on the thick stick that he required to walk with. His face had flushed a deep scarlet when he had seen the man who had thus addressed him; now it was white as snow.

"Beg my pardon for those words," he said, speaking very low.

"Gad! are you talking to me, Rothesay, when you say such words as those?" cried Caryl, coming nearer.

"Yes, am talking to you. Beg my pardon, instantly, for insinuating gross falsehoods about me!"

"Pshaw!"

Rothesay did not know but that he had his usual strength; his anger made him strong.

"So you refuse?" his white lips uttered.

By this time the three or four people who were near had gathered about the two men.

"Certainly. And may I take this opportunity, Rothesay, to inquire after your sister's health and happiness? It is long since I had the pleasure of meeting her."

The last sentence was half lost, for Rothesay's stick descended across Caryl's face, and Rothesay's voice cried:

"Coward! Beast!"

Then Rothesay sank back on his seat, whiter than ever and trembling violently.

Caryl staggered back, his nose bleeding profusely, his eyes blinded for a moment. He heard Rothesay, as if speaking of a dog:

"Can't somebody take the wretch away?"

Men now tried to interfere, after it was too late, as usual. Caryl thrust them away, and pushed forward near Rothesay and said:

"None of us Caryl's are apt to forget a blow. Don't you forget that!"

"Can you get out of my sight?" asked Rothesay, wearily.

At that moment the train came up, and Rothesay entered a car, still feeling so excited as not to realize his weakness.

Caryl also boarded the train, but he went into the baggage car, found some water, and at last succeeded in removing the stains from his face. His shirt was spattered with blood, and he buttoned his coat over it.

He knew that a ridge of purple and red was quickly swelling up on his face, and he was furious at the thought. He was completely sobered now, and he bitterly repented having given cause for the quarrel. He hated Rothesay, but he had been a fool, a thoughtless fool. He would have given almost anything had not the affair occurred.

"Perhaps some idiots would think I ought to challenge him, but the day of duels has gone by, and that would be getting into a worse mess. No, I can't afford to challenge him, but I'll pay him for this hideous mark on my face. Yes, I'll pay him well for that. Still I was a donkey to speak as I did, and now everybody will know where I got this mark, and how I am going to see Kate Purcell in this fix? Can't do it—even if I haven't the brass to do that. No, I must lie low for awhile. Yes, 'twas a bad move. I wish I hadn't drank that whisky of Burt's this morning. This little job will make my work all the harder. Well, Rothesay is off the field now, and Julia has Burt to manage. I shall have to let her take charge for awhile, that's plain."

He sat on one of the trunks in the baggage car, and smoked furiously while he mused thus, and felt the horrible welt across his face growing bigger every moment. He told himself that this was the worst mismove he had ever made.

When the train reached Boston, Rothesay rode to a hotel and took a room where he lay down a couple of hours, conscious of the way in which that moment's excitement had shaken him. He could not recall his thoughts from the fact that he was obliged to leave Kate Purcell; that he was prevented from ever speaking any warmer words from those of friendship to her while Caryl was there.

Caryl, he feared with too much reason, would seek to win her, for amusement if for nothing else; and Caryl had the power to be very attentive, and he had no reason for thinking Kate could have loved him.

He must leave her there like a bird towards whom he saw the serpent approaching. There was no way of preventing the catastrophe he foresaw—the dreadful catastrophe of Kate Purcell's becoming in love with Ralph Caryl.

The thought was maddening, but he could not shake it off. Did he not recall too plainly the power Caryl had attained over his sister? And he had the insolence to mention that sister!

It was incredible! Rothesay trembled again with rage. He could not allow himself to think of Caryl if he wished to regain sufficient control of himself to proceed on his journey; he realized that, and with a great effort he threw his thoughts forward into his future.

In a short time he left the hotel on his way to the cars that were to take him to Miss Lauriat's home.

In vain he endeavored to feel elated at the thought of meeting the woman who was soon to be his wife. Was he fickle? was he false? that he cared so little now for one whom he had believed he loved well enough to marry?

It was hard to shut out all such questions from his mind. Well, he was going to do his duty. He felt impatient now to be united to his betrothed he had that feeling, so common, that, once married, he would be held by a kind of safeguard; his very thoughts would be different then.

Down at the beach, on the south shore of Massachusetts Bay, Julia Caryl was improving her time.

She was rather disappointed when she found that Vance Rothesay had left. She had counted upon having a side game with him that should give interest to her real business. Now she wished she might meet Dick Burt; she had never yet smiled upon him.

Wishing thus, as she stood at the door of her boarding house, she saw a sturdy figure on the beach, making its way towards the Purcell house.

"There he is!" she whispered. "Is he really in love with that soft-voiced thing? If she only loved him now, what fun it would be to get him away from her!"

She stood still, watching him. The next moment she saw Kate Purcell leave the house and walked slowly down toward the water, apparently not seeing the man, who, when he saw her, slackened his pace, but Julia could see that he was watching Kate intently.

In a few moments Kate turned off in a different direction, and then Burt hurried on and overtook her.

He said something which caused Kate to stop. Then Julia wished there was a sheltering rock near them where she might overhear their conversation.

Dick was furious when he saw the expression of Kate's face, when she believed herself unseen. Some jealous instinct told him that she was thinking of Vance Rothesay—the man whom he had brought there. He almost wished he had left the injured man in the storm to die before he had lent any help.

Though Burt felt thus when he accosted Kate, he was firm in the resolve to keep the promise he had given her not to mention love.

"What is it that's troubling you, Kate?" asked, suddenly coming upon her.

Instantly her face resumed its usual expression; the look of intense despair left it.

"Troubling me? Why do you ask that?" smiling with an effort that cost her dear.

"Because your face showed some sorrow. You are not grieving for anything?" walking beside her, and unable to prevent himself from gazing intently at her, his eyes revealing what he had forbidden his lips to speak.

Kate was too truthful to deny his question, and she said, with a laugh:

"It is folly to ask a woman such a question. She has a thousand things to make her sad."

"If I could only comfort you!" he exclaimed, so fervently that she grew colder.

"That is impossible. Don't let us talk thus any longer. I must go in."

But he followed her, and some demon made him say:

"I hope you are not mourning the absence of Rothesay, while he is riding away to his bride."

He saw his mistake, and was vexed with himself for having made it; but he knew he might do the same thing again. He was not sure of himself.

She drew herself away, and her voice was freezing in its angry repellence as she said:

"You must excuse me from listening to you!" and she moved rapidly away.

He hurried after her and endeavored to take her hand, but she eluded him, and he stood still, looking after her, telling himself what a fool he had been, and yet more determined than ever to win her.

He knew it was not easy for a woman to forgive such a thing as he had said. Oh, he was a blundering idiot! For all that, he was going to have this woman for his wife.

As he stood there, gazing after her, Julia Caryl, watching him, began walking rapidly toward him, thinking:

"Now is the time; now I will see if I soothe the savage beast."

A moment later, Dick heard a sweet voice behind him saying:

"Mr. Burt, how fortunate that I happened to come upon you! I was wishing so much to meet some one who could entertain me! My brother is gone, and I am just perishing with ennui!"

Dick's first impulse was to be furious at this intrusion, but when he turned toward the speaker at her first words and saw her eyes, full of a flattering and enticing expression, his mood changed somewhat.

"I am very sorry, but I fear I cannot entertain you," he said, gruffly.

Julia knew that this was a man who would need something more decided to enchain him than the subtle attentions that might work their charm on a more refined person.

She was prepared to be quite open in her flattery of him.

"Do not say that!" she exclaimed, with a pretty gesture, "or I shall be in despair. I shall think my first impression was true."

Of course, he grew a little more interested. Had this beautiful woman thought of him?

"What was that?"

"That you disliked me, and that you were sorry I had come."

Burt was confused, and yet pleased. "There is nothing to beat women in the notions they take," he exclaimed, his black eyes looking more closely at Julia; and then he continued, "if your supposition were true, then I have changed my mind."

"Certainly he is not a gentleman," again decided Julia.

But she confessed to herself that there was a certain power about him. Notwithstanding his want of refinement, there was a certain power about him which almost made her half afraid—a sensation she very rarely experienced.

She did not reply, save that she threw into her face a look of relief and gladness which elated him.

"Will it amuse you, and help kill time to take a sail? The wind is just right to go to the lighthouse," he suggested.

Thanks! I should be so glad. You really do me a great kindness, Mr. Burt, for I am so fond of sailing on the salt water, and it is so very rarely that I have the chance."

Miss Caryl, as she spoke, smiled up into Burt's face in a way that woman had never done to him before; and that look, brilliant and lavishly sweet, went through his veins like wine.

Julia was not, after all, such a haughty, icy woman—or rather the thought deep down in his heart as she had meant it to be, was that there was something in him that made her unbend.

About Left-Eyed People.

The man who spends half his time trying to classify people said he never saw so many left-eyed passengers in one car.

"What do you mean by left-eyed passengers?" asked his companion.

"People who use their left eye more than their right," was the reply. "The species is not common, and of course, none but a student in ocular science would be able to detect, off-hand, the few who mwe do meet. A left-handed person advertises his peculiarity at once; not so the left-eyed man. As a rule, it takes an oculist to determine which eye has been used most, but there are certain peculiarities of the pupil and lid that can be taken as pretty sure signs by the trained observer.

"Left-eyed people are made, not born. Most of us have been blessed by nature with eyes of equal visual power, but the attitude we strike when reading or writing causes us to exercise one eye more than the other, and the first thing we know we are right or left-eyed. This is a one-sidedness that should always be taken into consideration when buying glasses. A right-eyed man with left-eyed spectacles, or vice versa, is at a decide ddisadvantage, and it is the optician's business to see that he is properly fitted."—New York Times.

A Fair Business Woman.

Mrs. Twitter—Oh, I've no patience with my husband sometimes. He says that women have no heads for business.

A Plea for the Wooden Shoe.

"We have wisely taken to wearing sandals," says a physician. "I hope that before long we will learn the sabot. Do you know that a great many diseases are due to leather shoes—due to the wearing all day long of tight leather that is often, in bad weather, water soaked? And do you know that by the wearing of wooden shoes, which keep the feet dry and which do not 'draw,' all these diseases might be avoided? I have several pairs of sabots, and so have my wife and children. They cost about 30 cents a pair, and keep the feet dry, without cramping them or making them unhealthily tender. I believe that the wisest thing Americans could do would be to take up the sandal and the sabot, discarding altogether the shoe of leather."—Philadelphia Record.

Due to a Bad Language.

"It is a queer language," said a bewildered Frenchman. "A horse falls into ze subway, and it goes up in smoke, and ze firm goes under from ze fire, while ze goods go down on account of ze smoke and ze waittaire when ze fire goes out.

"Ze wife runs up a bill at ze shops, ze bookkeepaire runs up ze column of figures in ze ledgaire, ze husband runs from ze collectaire, ze shopkeepaire runs over to ze court, and ze attachment runs about a month, and zen it runs out.

"Ze gamblaire sees ze poor foreigner, ze foreigner sees ze gamblaire's bet and raises it; zen he sees a flush royale, and zen ze police seize ze whole business. Ze gamblaire sees ze wardman, and ze foreigner sees his money no more. It is a strange language you have in ze great country of America."—New York Tribune.

A Mournful Finish.

There was excitement in the hen house. The turkey on the top roost gobbled himself hoarse with frenzy, and every other hen in the establishment cackled like a punctured tire.

"Young Flatten Fluffy was monkeying around the yard!" exclaimed the messenger who had just arrived, "and met the boss with a large hatchet."

"And how did he behave himself?" asked the flurried chorus.

"Oh," said the messenger, "he lost his head completely."—Judge.

FATE OF THE ARBITRATOR.

What Happened to the Mutual Friend Peace Advocate.

The lovers had quarreled.

"I'll never speak to you again!" she cried.

"Perhaps you'll give me back my ring," he retorted scornfully.

"I wouldn't wear your old ring for a thousand dollars," she asserted.

"This is the end," he said.

"Wait a minute," interrupted the mutual friend. "Don't forget that these are the days of arbitration, so let's arbitrate this affair."

"He's entirely in the wrong," she insisted.

"It's all her fault," he replied.

"Well, let's have a statement of the case from each side," said the mutual friend.

The girl thought it over, and her face grew red.

"If I tried to put it in words," she said to herself, "I'd be posing as a little fool."

Somehow her grievance wasn't tangible.

The youth thought it over, and he began to feel uncomfortable.

"I'd be a jackass to try to explain this thing to a cold blooded mortal," he said to himself.

"Well, let's hear what it is," said the mutual friend.

"Nothing," said the youth.

"Not a thing," said the girl, "and I'd like to know what business it is of yours anyway?"

"If you annoy my fiancee any more," said the youth, "I'll break your head. Here's your ring, Gracie."

"You're so good to me, Ralph," said the girl.

"Go away can't you," they both said to the mutual friend.—Buffalo News.

MADE A NAME QUICKLY.

New Congressman Becomes Popular in Washington.

When Capt. Gardner arrived in Washington to take his seat in the house he was welcomed by Secretary Moody with the facetious greeting: "You are entering a congress badly handicapped. You have to live down a father-in-law, a predecessor, and a bad reputation." Gardner has been here a fortnight and he has already overcome his handicap. His first chance came at the Gridiron dinner a few days after his arrival, when he gave a talk which was a gem of post-prandial oratory. He held his own in unaccustomed surroundings and tossed back telling retorts at malicious interruptions, until Speaker-to-Be Cannon turned to Speaker Henderson with the remark, "That boy is all right. He can take care of himself anywhere."

At the Tantalus dinner Gardner gave a line that will live in history when he referred to Littlefield as the man "whose name was never sullied by being attached to a majority report." So that, thanks to his readiness, Gardner is already better known in the house than many a man who has been here for years.—Boston Journal.

WAS PUNISHED FOR SLANDER.

How the Laws Were Vindicated in England in 1364.

In the year 1364 John de Hakford was convicted of bringing a false charge of conspiracy against the "chief men" of London. The sentence of the court was that "the said John shall remain in prison for one whole year and a day. And the said John within such year shall four times have the punishment of the pillory—that is to say, one day in each quarter of the year, and in this manner: The said John shall come out of Newgate without hood or girdle, barefoot and unshod, with a whetstone hung by a chain from his neck, and lying on his breast, it being marked with the words, 'A false liar.' And there shall be a pair of trumpets trumpeting before him on his way to the pillory, and there the cause of his punishments shall be solemnly proclaimed. And the said John shall remain on the pillory for three hours of the day, and from thence shall be taken back to Newgate in the same manner, there to remain until his punishment shall be completed."

Cat Forty-Two Years Old.

Herr Pohl, president of the German Society for the Protection of Cats, has just published the results of his investigation in regard to the age which it is possible for these animals to attain.

Cats, he says, are like human beings in one respect. The more peaceful and better regulated their life is the longer they are likely to live. As a proof, he points out that a favorite cat in the royal castle of Nymphenburg has lived to be forty-two years old, and consequently may fairly claim to be considered the dean of cats in Germany.

That this remarkable animal has still some youth in her is evident from the fact that she gave birth to a kitten two years ago. Moreover, the kitten thrived wonderfully and attracted much attention when it was exhibited at the exposition in Breslau.

Twenty-two Centuries Old.

Most boys and some girls have played in their time the game of dibs, or knucklebones, but few of them know that the game has existed since the third century B. C., and is probably still older. How it was played in ancient days no one can tell, but the ankle-joint bones of the sheep, ox, deer and pig were used, and the game was called "astragal," from the Latin word for the ankle-joint. In Scotland pebbles are often employed, whence the name, "chuckies." Even precious stones and gold and bronze "stones" have been used, and in some countries the bones were marked with numbers and colored to represent kings, queens, knaves and pawns.

PREVENTS SMALLPOX.

Alabastine will not cure smallpox and other contagious diseases, once they have fastened their deadly grip upon their victims. It will do much, however, toward preventing their spread.

It is a well recognized facts that certain wall coatings do much to harbor disease germs and propagate same; that of all coverings wall paper is the most likely to hold the germs of disease for months and years.

There are well authenticated cases where smallpox, scarlet fever and other germs have lain dormant for years, and have attacked persons afterward when the paper was removed.

Kalsomines stuck on the wall with decaying glue are not much better than wall paper with its vegetable paste.

Alabastine is recommended generally by sanitarians, as a coating for walls in any style of work, as it is perfectly sanitary, is in the nature of a disinfectant, presents a perfectly hard surface, is manufactured from a cement base, and does not furnish a lodgment ground for disease germs.

Years ago these matters received but little attention, but modern scientists, becoming appalled at the spread of the dread disease, smallpox, and the difficulty in stamping it out, have gone to investigating causes, and unhesitatingly say that improper wall coatings have very much to do with this.

Alabastine is recommended to be used on all infected walls, to destroy germs and to get walls once more in a healthy condition.

HIS BACK FACED THE CAR.

Why the Witness Did Not See the Killing.

Coroner Banning of Mount Vernon has an anecdote of a Hibernicism made by a witness he was examining at an inquest over a man killed by a trolley car recently.

The coroner asked the witness, who had testified that he was standing near the car:

"Did you see this man killed?"

"No, sir, I did not," answered the witness.

"Well," said the coroner, "you were standing there at the time, how could you help seeing the accident?"

After considerable thought the witness replied:

"Because my back was facing the car."—New York Times.

A Struggle for Life.

Eagle River, Mo., Jan. 19th.—Maggie E. Decker, a hard-working woman 49 years of age, whose home is here, has just gone through a thrilling battle for her life. Many another would have lain down and died, for for twelve long years she has suffered the most awful pains.

She had Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism, combined with a very distressing stomach trouble. At last she got so bad that she could not sleep, for she ached all over, and was so lame that she could scarcely walk. She spent over a hundred dollars in different medicines, but only to be disappointed, for everything failed to help her.

At last, however, just as she was beginning to despair of ever finding a remedy, she heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought six boxes. She says:

"Now, I can eat well, sleep well, and am feeling splendid. God bless Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they saved my life. My troubles were many, but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely. But for them I surely would have died."

NO MORE TICKET SCALPING IN CHICAGO.

Illinois comes into line with New York and Pennsylvania in vigorous action against the ticket scalping thieves and forgers, three having been sentenced on Saturday, in Chicago, after a fortnight's trial, one of whom profiting by his experience, pleaded guilty to a second indictment, while the trial of the others will doubtless proceed to another conviction. Chicago has long been a favorite field for ticket speculation, and a blow against the nefarious practice could nowhere have been landed more effectively. The persistent and united efforts of the leading railroads of the country to exterminate the business, which is simply one of petty larceny, robbing the poor and the wage earners, are bringing most satisfactory results.—From the Brooklyn Standard-Union.

GREAT GOLD FIND

TREMENDOUSLY RICH STRIKE HAS BEEN MADE IN ALASKA.

IT CAUSES A WILD STAMPEDE

BIGGEST FIND SINCE GOLD WAS DISCOVERED IN THE KLONDIKE.

IT IS IN AMERICAN TERRITORY

PROSPECTORS DESERTING OTHER DISTRICTS FOR THE NEW EL DORADO.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 20—A special to the Times from Dawson says.

A tremendously rich strike, the magnitude of which has never been equaled since Bob Henderson told of his wonderful find of the Klondike, has been made eighteen miles north of a point on Tanana river, 300 miles from its source. The district is American territory. Circle has been depopulated and a wild stampede of prospectors from all the surrounding country is in progress. As yet few have reached the discovery.

The holes that proved the wealth of the country were sunk late last winter, and the first man to reach Dawson from the new country has just arrived. He is a Japanese named J. Wada, well known in Dawson, where his veracity and honesty are well known. So far the reports have not been spread to any extent in Dawson, but the little that has been told has created an excitement that Surely Means a Stampede.

The gist of Wada's report is that the district resembles the Klondike in its physical formation, but has a heavier growth of timber. Gold in widely different kinds had been found in eight different creeks when Wada left for Dawson on Dec. 22.

The original strike was made on Pedro, a creek running parallel with Tanana, about eighteen miles from the river. This creek is staked for miles. Dan McCarthy, a well known Dawsonite, made the discovery on Cold Stream, a continuation of Pedro, which has proved to be the richest so far found.

Pedro district creek has not as yet equaled Cold Stream. Not much has yet been found here, but its wealth is better indicated in the statement that Gosta Brothers sunk seven holes to bed-rock and found an even run of gold in every one, with a pay streak over eight feet deep right through, with a width of about 600 feet.

Cold Stream is a big district, three claims (Alaska dimensions) wide. It was not yet all staked out when Wada left. About 200 men are working the ground.

Jack Gosta was offered $50,000 for his claim on Cold Stream and refused it.

HEWITT PASSES AWAY.

Former Mayor of New York Dies After Short Illness.

New York, Jan. 20.—Abram S. Hewitt, former mayor of New York and for many years representative in congress, died at 6 o'clock yesterday morning in his eighty-first year, having been critically ill for ten days. With him at the moment of death was his wife, three sons and three daughters. Mr. Hewitt, who has been in feeble health for some time, was attacked with obstructive jaundice on Jan. 8, and from the first it was realized by his attending physicians that there was practically no hope of the patient's recovery.

ACCOUNTS ARE SHORT.

Financial Concerns Discover They Are Out Thousands of Dollars.

Circleville, Ohio, Jan. 20.—Examination of the books of the Circleville, Germania and New Citizens' Building and Loan Associations, of which G. Christie Bayer was secretary, discloses the fact that Bayer is short $53,000 in his accounts with the New Citizens', about $50,000 with the Germania and from $5,000 to $6,000 with the Circleville Building and Loan company. Bayer, who was recently elected county clerk, disappeared several weeks ago, and his whereabouts is unknown to his bondsmen.

CHESS BY WIRELESS.

Match Enlivens Voyage of the Philadelphia and Lucania.

New York, Jan. 20.—A chess match by wireless telegraphy served to enliven the voyage of the American liner Philadelphia and the Cunarder Lucania, which arrived here yesterday. The two vessels got into wireless communication on Friday, when a suggestion for a chess match was flashed from the Lucania and eagerly accepted by the Philadelphia. The Philadelphia team was victorious, their opponents resigning after twelve moves.

Many Plague Victims.

Mazatlan, Mex., Jan. 20. — There have been 107 deaths from the plague since Jan. 1. The deaths on the 15th numbered seven, and many new cases are reported.

Elopers in France.

Mentone, France, Jan. 20. — The crown princess of Saxony and M. Giron, with whom she eloped, have arrived here and intend to stay two months. They have taken the name of M. and Mme Andre Gerard.

Indicted Men Flee.

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 20.—Seventeen citizens of the Ethel district of Attalla county indicted for lynching two negroes named Hull and Gaston a short time ago, have fled from the country to escape arrest.

GONZALES HOLDS HIS OWN.

Wounded Editor's Condition Shows Encouraging Symptoms.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 20. — There were more encouraging symptoms yesterday in the condition of Editor Gonzales than have appeared at any time before since his wounding by Lieut. Gov. Tillman last Thursday, but it is impossible to give any promise as to the ultimate result of his case. The physicians say simply that he is holding his own and that he probably has passed the period of danger from peritonitis. They said yesterday that if Mr. Gonzales shall live until Tuesday without unfavorable developments he would have an even chance for recovery. In the churches of Columbia Sunday there were heard earnest prayers for the life of the stricken editor. All references were in high terms of tribute to the services of the wounded man to the city and the state. No statements of any sort have been issued and no changes have occurred in the position of Lieut. Gov. Tillman. He is still in the county jail and no applications have been made for his release on bail.

BANDITS RAID STORE.

Garbed as Redskins, Two Mounted Robbers Enter Indiana Village.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 20.—Two mounted bandits, masked and garbed as Indians, rode furiously into the village of Hemlock, five miles south of here, with drawn revolvers, and entered the general store of A. J. Cole and attempted to rob the safe. A promiscuous shooting sent the loafers scampering behind the counters for refuge, but Cole, the proprietor, and Sam Ingles, head salesman, drew revolvers and gave battle to the robbers. After a hot exchange of shots the bandits retreated. They remounted their horses and were soon out of sight. A month ago a lone highwayman attempted to loot the same store, but failed.

TOO MUCH NOTORIETY.

Girl Commits Suicide After a Quarrel With a Doctor.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 20—Miss Edith Hinnan, twenty-five years old, committed suicide in the office of a physician by sending a bullet through her heart. Miss Hinnan and the physician quarreled in his office three days ago. The girl left a note saying she could not bear the humility of the notoriety which had been given the disagreement by acquaintances.

DAWSON CITY SAFE.

Long-Missing Steamer Sighted During September.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 20.—A telegram to the Pacific Packing and Navigation company from Valdez, Alaska, announces that the long missing Nome steamer Dawson City passed Unga island during the latter part of September. The vessel was under sail, having exhausted her supply of coal.

REDS WANT TO WORK.

Delegation to Ask Roosevelt to Pay Them Wages.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 20. — J. O. Monteath, Indian agent at the Blackfoot reservation, has left for Washington with a party of Blackfoot Indians to make a demand upon the government to institute a change in its treatment of the reservation Indians. The party of Indians includes Little Dog, Curly Bear, Mountain Sheep, Young Bear, Two Horns and White Grass. It is said that the Indians of Montana are growing tired of the ration system, and will ask President Roosevelt to put them to work and pay them wages. They believe that they are getting out of the condition of ignorance and dependence where the ration system was the only practical method of treating them.

TEARS HOLE THROUGH BODY.

Boy Says Gun Is Not Loaded and Dies.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Jan. 20.—Earnest Oberg, a boy of fourteen, was shot and instantly killed by the accidental discharge of a gun at his father's home, near Brandon. In company with his younger brother he was fooling with his father's gun, and was warned by his sister to let it alone, but replied that it was not loaded. The words were scarcely out of his mouth when the weapon was discharged, the charge striking him in the breast and tearing a hole almost through his body.

Extensive Prairie Fire.

Sturgis, S. D., Jan. 20.—During the recent heavy winds a big prairie fire started on Grand river at or near the Haley ranch and swept the entire country nearly to Selm, a distance of about sixty miles. From all accounts is was the most disastrous fire ever known in that section. It is said that horses even were caught by the fearful flames and burned to death or were badly injured.

Heading for the Hills.

Sturgis, S. D., Jan. 20.—Information has been received that a survey corps of eighteen men is now in the field from Evarts, and headed toward this point, locating a line for the Milwaukee road. The object is to enter the Black Hills country from the north and Sturgis is the objective point. This survey party was out sixty miles west from Evarts about the first of the present month.

Fine Residence Burned.

Black River Falls, Wis., Jan. 20. — One of the finest residences in the city, owned by L. C. Jones, was ruined by fire, but the contents were saved. Loss fully covered by insurance.

Crushed by Mill Machinery.

Boy Killed by Train.

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 20. — The ten-year-old son of Richard Sleight, a prominent attorney of Ashland, was run over by a train while waiting for his father at the depot. He lived but a few moments.

INDICT FORTY MEN

SPECIAL GRAND JURY IN CHICAGO DRAWS IN ITS DRAGNET.

COAL MEN ARE IN TROUBLE

RESULT OF INVESTIGATION INTO CAUSES OF THE SHORTAGE OF COAL.

MANY OF THEM OF HIGH STANDING

COMBINATION EXISTS TO CONTROL SUPPLY OF COAL FROM THE MINES.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Forty indictments have been voted by the special grand jury, which during the last week has been investigating the causes for the shortage of coal in Chicago.

No names were given out, it being declared by State's Attorney Deneen that inasmuch as the indictments had been merely voted and not returned, no list of the accused men would be announced until to-day, when the jury will reconvene. It is said that the men against whom it is the intention to return indictments are many who stand high in the business and social world. This fact was given by the state's attorney as one of the reasons why the names of the accused men were not given out Saturday night. In analyzing the evidence to which it has been listening for a week, the jurors believed they had found between the operators, the jobbers and wholesalers and the retailers, covering the course of the coal supply from the mine to the consumer. They also found the understandings existing between the operators of the various states, the Illinois Coal Operators' association and the Northern Illinois Soft Coal association being in collusion with the Indiana Coal Operators' association in an attempt to govern the whole bituminous supply of the two states.

A Combination Existing

What application the conspiracy act could have to the local dealers and operators in the face of the fact that the combination in general was the hard question for the jurors, but the attorneys explained that as soon as the coal was brought into Illinois the possessor who in any way restrained trade is amenable.

In the report which the special grand jury is to make Monday it is asserted that the federal grand jury is urged to investigate more thoroughly the actions of the coal men. In addition to being guilty of conspiracy, it is said the coal men have also grievously violated the anti-trust laws and the interstate commerce laws.

CONGRESS.

House Passes the Department of Commerce Bill.

Washington, Jan. 19.—At the end of a struggle which prolonged the day's session until after 6 o'clock the house Saturday passed the substitute for the senate bill to establish a department of commerce and labor.

The vote stood 137 to 40. All the Republicans and 29 Democrats voted for the bill. In committee of the whole the Democrats and a sprinkling of Republicans, led by Mr. Corliss of Michigan, struck out the portion of the bill providing for a bureau of insurance.

The Democrats then attempted to recommit the bill with instructions to report back a separate bill for the creation of a department of labor, but the motion was lost. The only other substantial amendment was one to authorize the president to transfer the interstate commerce commission to the new department.

PASSENGERS ARE VERY ANGRY.

Missing Steamer comes Into Port With Very Indignant Lot on Board.

New York, Jan. 20.—When the delayed liner, St. Louis, arrived at her dock Saturday the passengers were found to be almost "fighting mad." Many of the first-class passengers declared their intention to enter suits against the company and their cases were placed in the hands of lawyers on board. The claim is made that the company knew of the defective condition of the boilers before the start was made. There was no gaiety on the ship during the voyage. The passengers were gloomy and apprehensive. The liner's time from Cherbourg to the lightship was 13 days, 5 hours and 20 minutes. This is 6 days, 15 hours and 25 minutes behind the ship's best record. There was no accident of any kind at any time, and, although heavy weather was encountered, practically all of the delay was caused by inability to get up good steam in the defective boilers.

HELD UP BY BANDITS.

Three Masked Men Get $2,000 From a Paralytic

Toronto, Ohio, Jan. 20.—W. A. Scott, a jeweler of New Cumberland, W. Va., was robbed of money and jewelry valued at $2,000 early yesterday. Scott, who is a paralytic and lives over his store alone, was awakened by three masked bandits who bound and gagged him and then blew his safe open with dynamite.

Loses Ear in Controversy.

Edgemont, S. D., Jan. 20.—The town has been the scene of much excitement the past few days. In an altercation between a Protestant and Catholic over religion one of the belligerents seized an axe and struck at the other, just grazing his head and cutting off an ear.

Burglars Loot Saloon.

Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 20.—The store and saloon of E. Rider was entered and robbed of nearly everything of value, including $150.

EXPLOSION ON BATTLESHIP.

Five Men Were Killed and Four Seriously Wounded.

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 20.—Five men were killed and four others wounded, two of them probably fatally, by the explosion of a powder charge of an eight-inch gun on board the United States battleship Massachusetts while at target practice off Culebra island. Details of the explosion were obtained when the Massachusetts arrived here Saturday. The explosion occurred in the starboard after eight-inch turret and was due to the accidental discharge of a percussion primer while the breech of the gun was open. The full charge exploded in the turret and killed and injured all the crew of the gun, numbering nine men. Ensign Ward E. Worthman, who was in charge of the turret, escaped injury, though he was standing near the scene of the explosion. Magnificent discipline was immediately shown by the officers and crew of the battleship. Capt. Harry Lee, commanding the marine guard of the vessel, and Ensign Clarence Abele immediately flooded the turret with water and Lieut. Chas. F. Hughes and Gunner Kuhlwein went below to the magazines, picking up powder charges and prevented further explosions.

PANTHER IS DRIVEN AWAY.

German Cruiser Shells Venezuelan Fort.

Maracaibo, Venezuela, Jan. 20. — The German cruiser Panther yesterday for one hour shelled Fort San Carlos, at the entrance to Lake Maracaibo. The fort returned the fire with four guns. The Panther withdrew in the direction of Curacao. Fort San Carlos is twenty-two miles from Maracaibo and commands the entrance to the lake, or inner bay. The correspondent here of the Associated Press has received the following letter from Gen. Bello, the commander of the fort:

"Yesterday afternoon at 12:30 Fort San Carlos was attacked and shelled, without any provocation on our part, without previous notification or the delivering of an ultimatum, by the German cruiser Panther, which tried to force the entrance. After a fight lasting an hour, during which the fort used only four guns, the Panther was obliged to abandon the fight and retreated in the direction of Curacao. The fort has suffered no damage and only three men were wounded."

There have been popular demonstrations on the streets here as a result of the shelling of the fort.

OCEAN LINER GOES ASHORE.

Lloyd Steamer Lahn Strikes a Sand Bank.

Gibraltar, Jan. 20.—The North German Lloyd steamer Lahn, Capt. Malchow, from Mediterranean ports for New York, went ashore at 4 o'clock yesterday morning at Tumara, ten miles east of the rock of Gibraltar. There was a heavy fog and rain was falling at the time. On board the steamer are 100 saloon passengers, mostly Americans, and 700 Italian immigrants in the steerage. The Lahn is stern-on to the sea. The weather is moderate, but there is a heavy sea. All attempts to float the Lahn have been unsuccessful. The steamer will be compelled to tranship passengers and cargo. The attempt to pull off the steamer was made at high water by the British admiralty tug Energetic, the United States cruiser Hartford and the tugs Newa, Hericlades and Hercules, but the Lahn remained fast on the sand bank. The tugs continued their fruitless efforts all day.

HER JAW OUT OF JOINT.

Accident to a Woman Orator Gives Other Women Chance to Talk.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 20. — Miss Prescilla Leyter of Coalsville dislocated her jaw last night during a club women's debate of the propriety of action of Mrs. Mary Coulter, the lone woman member of the legislature, in voting for Apostle Smoot in the Republican caucus. Mrs. Coulter is president of the Utah Federation of Women's clubs. Miss Leyter was engaged in vigorously defending Mrs. Coulter. In the midst of her eloquent peroration something snapped. Miss Leyter's flow of eloquence stopped. Her jaw refused to work. Upon examination it was discovered that the bone had jumped out of place. A doctor was summoned and then some of the other club women got a chance to talk.

AFTER SMOOT'S SCALP.

Gentiles Will Make a Fight Against Acceptance of His Credentials.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 20. — Apostle Reed Smoot will be compelled to fight from the time his election as United States senator is announced by the Utah legislature on Tuesday noon. The organizations which are fighting Smoot do not propose to be caught napping, and they will file a protest against the acceptance of Smoot's credentials and swearing him in simultaneously with his election by the legislature. The principal contention is that Smoot recognizes a higher power than the federal government and cannot consistently take the test oath.

FOUL ASSASSINATION.

Missouri Man Butchered as He Sits in His Home.

Charleston, Mo., Jan. 20.—W. Bowser, a wealthy sawmill owner of Annisston, was murdered by some person while he sat reading a paper in his room. Both barrels of a shotgun were fired through a window into Bowser's head, almost tearing it from his shoulders. No motive for the deed is known.

Talk About Trusts.

Washington, Jan. 20.—There were several officers prominent in legislative and executive circles at the White House in conference with the president last night. It is supposed the trust question was considered.

Trainmen Killed.

Baltimore, Jan. 20. — Two men are dead and two others were perhaps fatally injured as the result of the explosion of a freight locomotive on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Monrovia.

TO KIDNAP TAYLOR

SENSATION SPRUNG IN THE YOUTSEY INVESTIGATION AT FRANKFORT.

MONEY OFFERED TO A JUROR

WANTED TO KNOW WHAT YOUTSEY SAID ABOUT GOEBEL MURDER.

SHOVED MONEY IN HIS POCKET

WOULD KIDNAP EX-GOV. TAYLOR AND DIVIDE REWARD WITH JUROR.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 19. — A sensation was caused in the Franklin circuit court yesterday when Circuit Judge Cantrill summoned the grand jury, which has had under investigation the Goebel murder case, bearing the testimony of Henry E. Youtsey in open court. Judge Cantrill said to the jury:

"Gentlemen: I understand that certain person or persons have approached some member of the jury and made inquiry as to matters which have been before this jury. If this is a fact I want you to report it to the court, or if there have been any overtures or intimations to you."

Mr. James Riddel, who lives at Benson, arose and stated that on his return home Thursday night a man of medium height, with black hair, well dressed and of good address, was at his home. He stated:

"The man gave his name as McDowell, and said his home was at Indianapolis; that

He Knew W. S. Taylor;

that he knew I was a member of the jury which had the investigation of Henry E. Youtsey; that since the investigation of this case and the testimony of Youtsey that Taylor was much worried, had grown thin and emaciated; that he (McDowell) knew who all the members of the jury were, had a diagram of their houses and knew where they lived. He said he wanted to talk privately with me and said that he wanted information about the testimony of Youtsey and would get money for it and that he would divide with me. He called me outside of the house and stated that if there was enough evidence against Taylor to convict him (Taylor) that he, with others, would kidnap Taylor and bring him here and divide the reward with me. He then offered me money which he had in his hand and I refused it; then he

Shoved Some Money

in my vest pocket and told me to buy me a hat with it; that he saw there was no opportunity to get the information. He said he was stopping at the Capitol hotel and had driven out to my house."

The judge instructed the money to be turned over to the trustee of the jury fund, which was done, and the grand jury was instructed to investigate the matter. A warning to secrecy was given.

To a friend Riddel said: "This man said that there was $2,000 offered for Taylor's delivery at Frankfort, and that he would give me one-fifth of the money if I would only tell all that Youtsey had about the conspiracy to kill Gov. Goebel. I told him that I could not be induced to tell any one what I had heard Youtsey say in the jury room, and that I had not even told my wife that Youtsey was before the jury.

CONGRESS.

Pension Day in the House Marked by Two Features.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The house devoted the day to private war claims, passing about twenty. The two features of the day were the defeat of a claim of B. F. Moody & Co. of Keokuk, Iowa, for the payment of the amount deducted from the contract for furnishing equipment to the Third Iowa cavalry by the famous commission which unearthed the army contract frauds in St. Louis in 1863, and the fight of Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority, against an omnibus resolution to refer ninety Southern claims, aggregating $400,000 for stores and supplies taken by the Union army during the Civil war to the court of claims for finding of facts under the Tucker act. The former bill led to a lively controversy between Iowa members, Messrs. Smith and Hedge. The combination in favor of the omnibus claims resolution was too strong for Mr. Payne, but on the final vote the quorum failed. As the previous question had been ordered the vote on the adoption of the resolution will be the first thing in order on the next claims day.

The senate was not in session.

THREE GET PLACES.

H. L. Falk of Crookston Named Surveyor of Logs and Lumber.

St. Paul, Jan. 19. — Gov. Van Sant yesterday appointed H. L. Falk of Crookston surveyor general of logs and lumber. Ira A. Padden of Austin was reappointed boiler inspector in the First district. Bernard Lambrechts of Montevideo was appointed a member of the state veterinary board.

MILLS FORCED TO CLOSE.

Lumber Pilers Strike for Higher Wages at Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 19.—All the saw mills shut down yesterday morning because of a strike of lumber pilers. They demand $2.25 a day, an advance of 25 cents, and recognition. The Red Cliff mill has paid the advance and started up. It did not, however, recognize the union. To grant $2.25 now is said to mean $2.50 in the summer, and the mill men say that is exorbitant.

AN ASSISTANT DEFENDANT.

Twin Brother of Man Accused of Seduction in Court.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 17.—Rev C B. McKay, the Methodist preacher of Mapleton, Iowa, whose trial has just begun at Onawa on charges of seduction, has a twin brother from Eastern Iowa who has interested himself in the case and is attending the trial. The brothers look so much alike that the large crowd of curiosity seekers who constantly crowd the court room cannot tell which is the defendant. In this way the twin brother shares the disgrace with the prisoner. The alleged victims of the preacher are Ida and Clara Kraft, who belonged to his church. The trial is a sensational one and will likely last for ten days.

GREAT FALLS TO CHOTEAU LINE.

Austin Man Plans Montana Electric Road.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 17.—Plans are being formulated for an electric railroad from Great Falls to Choteau by the way of Farmington on the Burton branch, a distance of sixty miles. The matter is being handled in a quiet way, but it is known Eastern capitalists are behind the project. E. E. Shepard of Austin, Minn., who recently purchased the Montana Land and Water company's holdings on the Burton branch, is the leading spirit in the movement.

CONDE HAMLIN PRESIDENT.

Minnesota Commissioners for the St. Louis Exposition Organize.

St. Paul, Jan. 17.—Minnesota's commissioners to the St. Louis exposition met in the governor's office yesterday afternoon and organized. Conde Hamlin of St. Paul was elected president, J. M. Underwood of Lake City, vice president, and Theodore Hays of Minneapolis, secretary. No superintendent was selected, but it is understood that C. S. Mitchell of Alexandria is slated for that position.

LUCKY COUNTERFEITER.

Work Was So Poor That He Is Discharged From Custody.

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 17.—E. Taylor, who was arrested at the leader of a gang of boy counterfeiters who were making bogus nickels with which to play the slot machines, was discharged from custody, it being held by the United States court that the work of the lad was of such poor quality that it could not be mistaken for money and was not counterfeit as interpreted by law.

SUICIDE AFTER THEATER.

Man, Whose Attentions Were Discouraged, Kills Himself.

Albert Lea, Minn., Jan. 17. — After returning home from seeing Blanche Walsh in "The Daughter of Hamilcar," Mark Burnham of Conger took a revolver and put a bullet through his heart, dying instantly. The reason assigned is that a young woman of Alden did not encourage his attentions.

Big Creamery Dividend.

Henry, S. D., Jan. 17.—During the past five years the local creamery has paid the stockholders in the institution aggregate dividends of 56 per cent. This was in reality paid during four years, as no dividends were declared the first year after the creamery was established. In 1899 8 per cent was paid; in 1900, 8 per cent; in 1901, 15 per cent; while for last year, 25 per cent was paid in dividends.

Arrested by Federal Authorities.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Jan. 17.—O. B. Beller, garrison physician, arrested several days ago, charged with threatening to kill his former fiancee, was arrested by federal authorities on a charge of violating the postal laws. It is alleged that Beller sent threatening letters over his own signature and employed others to send anonymous communications.

Killed by Unknown Liquid.

Arlington, S. D., Jan. 17. — Two young men living in the country west of this place got hold of a bottle of what they supposed was spirits of wine, and drank the entire contents. they were both taken violently ill soon afterward. One of them is dead from the effects; the other will probably recover.

Attempts to Kill Mother.

Platteville, Wis., Jan. 17. — Chris Steur, living north of town, after having tried to kill his mother, attempted his own life by cutting his throat. He is still alive, but death is expected soon. His mother will recover.

INCREASE IS BIG

INSURANCE BUSINESS SHOWS A REMARKABLE GROWTH IN THE STATE.

GOOD REVENUE FOR THE STATE

TAXATION IN NORTH DAKOTA NOW AMOUNTS TO $100,000 ANNUALLY.

GRAIN INSPECTION AGITATION

NEW SYSTEM PROPOSED—FARMERS SAY THEY ARE NOT FAIRLY TREATED.

The biennial report of Insurance Commissioner Ferd Leutz, which has just been filed with the governor, shows a remarkable growth of the insurance business in the state in the last decade, and an equally large increase in the amount received by the state from taxes upon insurance companies. The biennial period just ended has seen an increase of $20,000 in the revenues of the state from the insurance business alone, and the year 1903 is expected to be a record-breaker in the state. Life insurance companies are doing an especially large business in the state, the climatic conditions being such that especial inducements are held out to the companies by the low rates.

The revenues of the state from taxes on insurance companies have increased from $17,391.91, for the biennial period of 1889-90, to $93,257.73 for the biennial period just closed. At the present rate of increase it is expected that the coming biennial period will show total revenues to the state from this source of $125,000.

Several changes in the laws are recommended by the commissioner. It is stated that North Dakota is being flooded with mutual companies, actuated by different motives. The present law permits any number of persons not less than seven, to form a corporation to carry on the insurance business. All that is necessary is for the company to file articles of incorporation conformable to the law and obtain $200,000 in applications. This, the commissioner says, is a liberal provision on the part of the state, but is not so satisfactory to the insured, as the indemnity is uncertain, especially in case of heavy losses or unfavorable conditions. The commissioner thinks a deposit should be required to be made, to protect the public from unreliable state mutual companies. While many of the state mutual companies have good records and are safe and reliable, the present condition of the law gives opportunity for unscrupulous persons to take advantage of the good names of safe companies and foist upon the public unsafe and unreliable companies, which may cheat and defraud the public and escape punishment under existing laws.

The companies organized and doing business under the laws of the state are doing a good business. The only exception noted is that of the State Mutual, of Hankinson, which failed and defrauded a large number of policy holders. This failure, according to the commissioner, was due to gross mismanagement, and a detailed report is presented of the matter.

Regarding the recent advance in rates by the old-line fire companies through the state, the commissioner says: "The disastrous Fargo fire (in 1893) resulted in a bad showing for North Dakota. The statistics of this department for the past thirteen years show that an average of 75.2 per cent of the premium receipts was necessary to meet the losses incurred. If the year 1893 is eliminated, the percentage is reduced to 60.3 per cent. But these companies point to the general average, overlooking the fact that nine years have elapsed since the great fire, and, by common consent, advanced the rates. This raise in rates will cost the people of North Dakota a large amount of money; yet it is noticeable that there has been no effort upon the part of the companies to reduce the commissions of agents or to curtail operating expenses. This procedure, then, can be counteracted, and the people of the state secure insurance at reasonable rates, by organizing state companies, which shall be required to deposit with the state such an amount of cash or securities as may be determined by the legislature.

Figures for the insurance business of the state since statehood show that in the thirteen years since the state was admitted, risks have been written aggregating $328,701,116.31. Total premiums of $6,513,516.69 have been received by the companies. Total losses incurred have been $4,896,431, and the total losses paid have been $4,918,661.95.

In connection with the agitation for a different system of grain inspection in the Northwest, and the proposed plan of having a union of forces between North Dakota and Wisconsin, with a view of benefiting the farmers of this state, it is likely that a delegation from the West Superior (Wis.) chamber of commerce may visit the legislature, and explain to the members their idea of a different system of inspection.

There is a bill before the legislature at present providing for the appointment of a joint commission to investigate the matter of grain inspection and the proposed plans for a betterment of present conditions. Members who favor the plan will attempt to have the matter thoroughly exploited before the legislature before a vote is taken, lest the plan be defeated. The co-operation of North Dakota is important in this matter, and if the matter should fail of favorable consideration here, the entire plan would be rendered abortive.

The house of representatives of the present legislature is a cosmopolitan body. Natives of Canada number 21 members. Norway follows, with 14; Germany claims the birth of 7; England furnishes 3; Scotland, 1; Russia, 1. Sweden, 5; Iceland, 1. The United States furnishes 46 members of the house, of which 9 are from Wisconsin, 7 from Minnesota, 5 each from Michigan and New York, 4 each from Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, 2 each from Vermont, Ohio and Pennsylvania and 1 from New Jersey. In the matter of occupation, a distinctly agricultural measure, if the vote were on lines of occupation, could be carried by 1 majority, as there are 51 farmers out of a total of 100 members. Merchants number 22; insurance agents, 1; contractors, 1; implement dealers, 5; druggists, 2; bankers, 4; newspaper men, 3; "politicians," 2; surveyors, 1; real estate dealers, 5; lawyers, 2. The oldest man in the house is Maj. Buttz of Ransom county, and the youngest, Representative Patterson of Emmons.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Benson county is not interested in the division of the Second judicial district, as it will remain in the old one.

Fessenden has a new postoffice building, and the people can now secure their mail much more conveniently.

ARCTIC WHALE SHOOTING.

James W. Connolly Tells of a Trip Which He Recently Undertook.

"Only eighty feet over all, with less than two feet of freeboard at her waist, the Skyttop seemed a puny craft for the rather large business of whale-killing," says Mr. Connolly. "It was her equipment, of course, that made her strength. Forward, on a platform set directly in her bow, she mounted a heavy-built, muzzle-loading harpoon gun; and on her forward deck she carried a lot of appurtenant machinery—winches, hoists, etc., which were to warp in the whales by and by.

"The skipper hesitates, and we try to remember the tales they tell of his skill.

"'Wee-hay!' he roars, this man who has killed his thousands—'Wee-hay!' he bellows, under the strain of it, and he has been hunting whales for thirty-five years. Wee-hay!—and—boom!—they come together—the flame and the cloud of smoke. The harpoon we are not quick enough to see, but the line that follows it we do see. From our bow to the back of that great creature it leaps—a long leap—a hundred feet—and where the line stops we know the harpoon is buried. Back of the shoulder and just above the water line we know it has gone—lance and shank beneath the shiny, dark-blue skin—five feet of iron into the middle of the whale."—James B. Connolly, in Harper's.

TRAIN IS WRECKED

ENGINEER IS KILLED AND THIRTY OTHERS ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

ROLLS DOWN AN EMBANKMENT

HAVING STRUCK BROKEN RAIL AND CROSSED A BRIDGE ON THE TIES.

SOME OF THE INJURED WILL DIE

CARS WERE JUMBLED TOGETHER IN A HOPELESS MASS OF DEBRIS.

Syracuse, Ill., Jan. 20.—In a wreck near here yesterday on the Chicago Great Western railroad, one person was killed and thirty others injured. Of those injured several may not recover.

The Des Moines and St. Paul train, running at a high rate of speed, struck a broken rail just as it was about to cross a bridge. The speed of the train carried it across the bridge on the ties, then the entire train pitched down a twenty-foot embankment, the cars turned on their sides and were jumbled together in a hopeless wreck. The engineer was so badly injured that he died in a short time.

The men who were not injured in the wreck succeeded in pulling the other passengers through the windows of the cars. As soon as all were taken from the debris they were carried to a neighboring farmhouse, where they were cared for until one of the party walked to Wasco and telegraphed to Sycamore for help. Assistance arrived in a couple of hours and the injured passengers were brought to the hospital here.

The dead engineer is J. D. Heady of Minneapolis.

The most seriously injured are: John Bashore, Ida Grove, Iowa; mail clerk, name unknown, Byron, Ill.; Mrs. E. H. Riggs, wife of the conductor; I. L. Stewart, Hampton, Iowa, badly bruised; Mrs. Stewart, back injured, severe scalp wounds; Mr. Stewart, editor of the Franklin County Record; Clay C. Smith, Des Moines; W. F. Graff, legs cut; G. L. Hoebel, Waukegan; Thomas D. Heady, state senator from Iowa. Attorney James Finnegan and Miss Narina Sanford of Sycamore are among the most seriously injured.

Considering the nature of the wreck and the fall of twenty feet it is a wonder that a single person escaped death.

St. Charles and Sycamore hospitals are crowded with the injured. Many escaped with broken fingers and bruises, while others are suffering merely from the nervous shock.

SOUSA MUST PROTECT HIMSELF.

Must Prosecute If He Would Prevent Piracy of His Compositions.

London, Jan. 20.—Sousa has written to the London Times complaining bitterly that he finds "pirated" editions of his compositions selling broadcast in London. He says:

"I have been laboring under the delusion that I had complied with the requirements of the international copyright laws and that your government would assume the responsibility to protect my property. Apparently no such responsibility exists. There surely must be a remedy to protect a composer from such deplorable injustice."

Nevertheless there is none except through Sousa's instituting proceedings against the pirates.

CLOSE CALL FOR THEIR LIVES.

People Driven Out of a Building by Fire—Two Are Missing.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 20.—In a fire in the Reece & Spencer apartment house and store building at the corner of Euclid avenue and Knowles street at 1 o'clock this morning several persons had a narrow escape for their lives and at 2 a. m. Mrs. Guy Norton and a Mrs. Dickie, nurse to Mrs. Norton, are missing. A baby of Mrs. Norton's, recently born, was carried out of the building by a domestic who was badly scorched. Another occupant of the building jumped into a tree and got out of danger by sliding down the trunk.

SPANIARD TESTIFIES AS TO HORRIBLE DEATH OF AN AMERICAN.

BODY WAS LEFT TO THE HOGS

STAKES WERE DRIVEN INTO THE MAN'S BODY AND FIRE STARTED.

SENSATION IN GLENN TRIAL

WITNESSES TELL OF THE BALANGIGA, CANDARA AND CATUBIG MASSACRES.

Manila, Jan. 19. — At the continuation yesterday of the trial of Maj. Edwin F. Glenn of the Fifth infantry, who is charged with unlawfully killing seven prisoners of war in Samar, a Spaniard who was at one time held a prisoner by the insurgents, testified that while he was confined at the headquarters of Gen. Lukban in Samar in May of 1900, he saw an American prisoner roasted to death. The Spaniard said that sticks were driven into the man's body and he was slowly turned over the fire until dead. The body was then left to be devoured by hogs. He did not know the man's name, but thought he was an officer. Several American officers and men were captured or in Samar in 1900, and the victim is believed to be one of these.

Reported Missing

Other witnesses reviewed the Balangiga, Candara and Catubig massacres. The defense produced a letter written by the insurgent leader, Guevarra, in which he admitted that the Balangiga massacre was contrary to the laws of warfare.

Capt. A. P. Buffington of the First infantry testified that Brig. Gen. Jacob H. Smith frequently had offered protection to the natives and urged them to come inside the American lines. Lieut. Pratt testified that Gen. Smith in his orders had directed that the war be waged against able-bodied men, not against women and children.

KILLS FIVE BOLOMEN.

Constabulary Inspector Fletcher Puts Up a Great Fight.

Manila, Jan. 19. — Constabulary Inspector Fletcher, while travelling along in the province of Albay, Luzon, last Wednesday, was attacked by thirty bolomen. Fletcher killed five of his opponents, but was himself wounded. He escaped, however, and formed a party which pursued the bolomen, overtook them and killed six more. Death sentence has been imposed upon one of the natives who murdered five American soldiers in the cemetery at Binangonan, Luzon, Decoration day of last year.

PREVENT RELIEF TO STARVING.

Inhuman Practices Alleged Against Companies in Famine Region.

Lulea, North Sweden, Jan. 19.—Inhuman practices are charged against the rich sawmill companies of North Sweden in connection with the famine. Because the hunger-stricken and half-frozen peasants decline to haul logs for 2 1-2 cents an hour the mill owners are issuing circulars branding the famine sufferers as "lazy beggars," and urging the people to give them no assistance. This action on the part of the companies is stigmatized by the relief authorities as brutal coercion, and, inasmuch as the forests are leased from the crown, the government will be asked to interfere if the mill owners continue to obstruct the relief measures.

CUBAN TREATY SAFE.

Opposition Now is Confined to the Democratic Side.

Washington, Jan. 19. — President Roosevelt was assured yesterday by Senators Aldrich, Lodge and Spooner of their belief that the Cuban reciprocity treaty would be ratified by the senate. The three senators had a conference with the president prior to the cabinet meeting and went over the situation with him carefully. It was stated that the treaty as amended by the foreign relations committee was satisfactory practically to every Republican senator and that the opposition now was confined to the Democratic side.

CUBA WILL RATIFY.

Report on Reciprocity Treaty Received at State Department.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The state department has received from United States Minister Squiers at Havana a report upon the progress making with the reciprocity treaty with the United States. The minister's report, based upon assurances he has received from the Cuban administration, is highly favorable to the early ratification of the treaty by the Cuban senate.

Two Children Killed.

Elect All Old Officers.

Kansas City, Jan. 19.—The sixth annual convention of the National Live Stock association adjourned yesterday afternoon to meet next year at Portland, Or., after electing all the old officers for the ensuing year.

Two Perish in a Fire.

New York, Jan. 19.—Hermina Josephson, cashier, and John Cottain, an engineer, lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the dry goods store of Aaron & Withheimer last night. Loss, $80,000.

STEAMER ST. LOUIS SIGHTED.

Long Overdue Steamer Will Reach New York To-Day.

Siasconset, Mass., Jan. 19.—Through the medium of the wireless system word came ashore to the station here at 6:45 last night that the American line steamship St. Louis, for whose safety there has been some anxiety, was within twenty-four hours' sail of Sandy Hook. Just what the trouble is on board the liner could not be ascertained because of the inability of those on the South Shoals lightship, forty miles southeast of here, to read her signals, but the conclusion reached was that either her steam power was low because of leaky boilers, or she had broken one of her twin shafts and was coming into port under one propeller. At 6:40 the men on the lightship caught sight of the St. Louis miles away. Having seen her pass and repass many times they were able to identify her as the craft long overdue at New York, and the wireless operator on the ship immediately telegraphed the glad tidings to the station here and a message was sent at once to the office of the American line in New York. The lightship men sent word to the station here that the St. Louis was proceeding on her course for New York at a very slow speed, and unless she could increase it they judged from the rate she was traveling that she could not reach Sandy Hook until this evening.

OPERATORS ON THE STAND.

Say Influence of Union Restricts Coal Production.

Philadelphia, Jan. 19. — More mine officials yesterday informed the coal strike commissioners that under the influence of the union the mineworkers restricted the production of anthracite coal and interfered with the discipline of the employes. The Erie company closed its case early in the day after calling a physician, who testified to the good health of the mineworkers. The Scranton Coal company, which operates, besides its own collieries, the Elk Hill Coal and Iron company's mines, then took up the attack on the demands of the miners. The Scranton and the Elk Hill companies turn their coal over to the New York, Ontario & Western railroad, which virtually controls them. The witnesses called yesterday testified generally that no blacklist existed; that the contract miners worked on an average of from six to seven hours a day; that the local unions compelled the men to load an equal number of cars, thus restricting the output; that the men were careless in obeying orders, and that frequent petty strikes occurred whenever a union man was dismissed for insubordination.

WRECKED BY COLLISION.

Forty Cars Roll Down an Embankment and Some Are Destroyed.

Litchfield, Ill., Jan. 19. — An east-bound fast freight and a west-bound local freight train on the Big Four railroad collided at the bottom of a hill thirty miles east of here last night. The engine crews of both trains jumped, but Engineer Krapf of Mattoon, and Fireman Green of St. Louis and Brakeman Myers of Mattoon, all of the local freight, were seriously injured. Engineer Krapf probably fatally. The "battle engines" exploded and rolled down the embankment, and forty cars, many of them loaded with flour, cotton and iron, were destroyed. The cause of the wreck is supposed to be due to conductors not reading orders carefully.

NEW SUBSIDY BILL.

Rebate Plan for American Vessels Is Proposed.

Washington, Jan. 19. — Representative Fitzgerald of New York has introduced a bill "to encourage, promote and to develop," as the title says, "the merchant marine of the United States." It provides that there shall be allowed a rebate of 10 per cent of the duty imposed by law on all goods imported into the United States from any foreign country or any territory the property of the United States between which territory and the United States vessels of other than American registry are permitted to engage in carrying trade, whenever such goods are carried in vessels of American registry.

OLDEST HEBREW BIBLE.

Written in Samaritan Characters in the Moslem Era.

London, Jan. 19. — In a dispatch from Cairo the correspondent of the Daily Mail reports the discovery in Syria of one of the oldest Hebrew manuscript Bibles. It consists of the five books of Pentateuch, written in Samaritan characters on Gazelle parchment in the year 116 of the Moslem era. It shows important differences from the existing text.

FRENCH INTERFERENCE.

A Threat Is Made to the Morocco Government.

Madrid, Jan. 19.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Tangier says that the French minister has warned the sultan's deputy that if the fighting in the neighborhood of Tangier is continued it will justify European intervention, as it will be an indication of a condition of anarchy that Europe cannot tolerate.

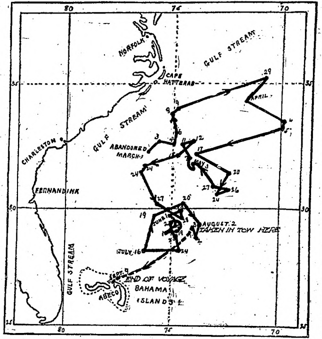
Boy Accidentally Killed.

Black River Falls, Wis., Jan. 19. — George Lake of this city, aged fifteen, was instantly killed, a charge of shot entering just behind the ear. The accident was caused by trying to pull a gun from a sleigh muzzle first.

Accused of Killing His Father.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Jan. 19.—Nels P. Erickson was arraigned before Justice Rows of Norway, charged with the murder of his father. He was bound over to the April term of the circuit court, without bail.

OCEAN DERELICT TOWED INTO PORT



When the dismasted hull of the three-masted schooner B. R. Woodside was recently towed into Abeco, one of the Bahama islands, the career of one of the most notable derelicts of late years came to an end.

For nearly seven long months this old hulk had been adrift, battered around, completely at the mercy of the elements, wafted hither and thither by the varying winds and currents, until she had zig-zagged a most erratic course.

In all thirty-nine vessels brought news of this derelict, and following up the various reports it can be proved that the old hulk covered more than 2,200 miles in the long weeks she was adrift, or an average of about ten miles daily.

The Woodside sailed from Fernandina for San Juan, Porto Rico, loaded with lumber, but encountered severe weather and became waterlogged. On March 1 she was abandoned by the crew and left to sink, but she kept afloat and cruised about, a helpless wreck, as well as a dangerous obstruction to other vessels.

The winds and currents carried her to every point of the compass, backing and filling, crossing and recrossing her track from time to time. After being reported on April 1, an off-shore wind must have set the hulk rolling along as if bound for the Bermudas, but she suddenly turned south and then southwest and was reported ten days later more than 200 miles away.

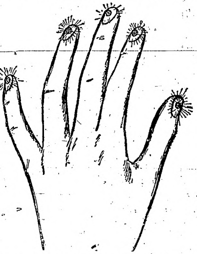
A series of twists and turns then followed, with news coming in every few days, until on May 24 this wreck was sighted less than fifty miles from where she was abandoned. From this point the derelict drifted to the southeast, making short zigzag tracks, which crossed over and over again, until on July 16 she was only ninety miles from the island of Abeco, where the almost worthless hulk was towed in nearly two months later.

But turning sharply here to the north she set out again on a new voyage of discovery. Several other reports were received up to August 3, when a long silence followed, which was finally broken when a cable from the Bahamas told the good news of her arrival there in tow.

DIAMONDS SET IN FINGER NAILS

And now we are to have diamonds set in our finger nails! At least some of us are. They are real diamonds and they are actually placed in the nails, and—hist!—they don't have to be confined to the finger nails.

Alexander Hultzman, a New York diamond setter, was the originator of the "sparkling nail" fad. Mr. Hultzman is the man who conceived the unique idea of setting the diamond which many champions of the "manly art" have seen sparkling in a large front tooth of Mr. Robert Fitzsimmons, as he delivered his famed "solar plexuses."



Mr. Hultzman expects to reap a rich harvest among theatrical folk as a result of his invention. He will establish an office and receive his "patients" by appointment, like a doctor. He says that he alone can do the work thoroughly, as the cutting for the setting was a lucky discovery.

He went on to tell of a lady who was considering having a diamond set in each of her great toenails. He declined to give her name. Mr. Hultzman says there is no pain connected with the work of setting the stones, as the nail does not have to be cut entirely through.

There is always the facetious critic of new fads, and he has placed himself on record quickly in this case. "It will never do," he said. "Won't work at all. What! Fasten to the nail diamonds! Why, no! How could you pawn 'em, hey? Go sit in 'uncle's' safe, I suppose, or cut off the finger or pull out the nail. Nay, my friend, portable diamonds will remain popular. The old friends are truest."

Another "humorist" did not take such a sordid view of the subject. "Say, that's great," he said. "What a chance for the Chicago girl to get even. She will have her eastern sisters green with envy every time she ambles down the boulevard in the gay old summer time with those gallous 'piggies' of hers displayed to advantage by her sandals. And, by the way, there's a thought—the sandals. That fad will become a real one now, sure. Lordy, think of the beach at the seashore next summer! There will be the chance for a display. Stockings won't be popular, I guess, or maybe they'll cut holes in 'em and the girl with the biggest toe will be the winner. The world certainly is changing."—New York Press.

THE FREAKS OF SUICIDES.

Notable Instances of Bulls Made by Seekers After Death.

A grocer's assistant who committed suicide the other day left a note inside the house to say, "I am hanging outside." The Liverpool Daily Post gives some other notable instances of bulls made by intending suicides. An Irishman who drowned himself left the message, "This is an accident," on a piece of paper in his hat to spare his friends' feelings; and only this summer a young gentleman in Shropshire, before attempting suicide, wrote an anonymous letter to his mother breaking the news of the accidental death of her son—which, as a matter of fact, did not come off.

With similar forethought a provincial bank manager on his deathbed was said lately to have dictated to his secretary a telegram to headquarters saying: "Greatly regret to inform you that I died this morning of pneumonia.—(Signed) pp. Thomas Brown." An Irishman once confessed that he had contemplated suicide by hanging himself on a willow tree overhanging a river near his potato patch, but had given up the idea from fear lest the cord should break and he should be drowned.—London Leader.

Iconoclasm.

"Well," said the man who had come in from the remote wilds, "I suppose you've took your seat in congress ag'in."

"No. You remember I had the misfortune to be defeated."

"You don't say! And after me travelin' forty mile to vote for you! The folks out our way will shore be surprised. So you ain't goin' to sit in congress no more?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Well! well! Things are certainly goin' queer these days. I reckon they'll be movin' the Washington monument next."—Washington Star.

FOIBLES OF GREAT MEN.

Nearly All Had Superstitions of Some Sort or Other.

Nearly all great men have had superstitions of some sort or other. Napoleon with his star, Bismarck with his Great Dane, Franklin with his lucky stone—in this manner the list might be continued on down to to-day.

Dr. John's superstition was the touching of all the iron posts he passed on the streets. He believed that to fail to touch a single post would give him bad luck, and, on discovering such a failure, he would turn back, no matter what his hurry, and make good his omission.

Napoleon believed that a certain red and fiery star governed his destiny. When his star was brilliant and large Napoleon pushed forward his enterprises resolutely, confident of success. When it waded and paled Napoleon despaired.

Gen. Grant was pursued all his life by dreams of crockery. These dreams brought him good luck. In his letters to his wife they are mentioned frequently.

Benjamin Franklin carried a round, white stone. He would undertake no important business if this object was not in his pocket. He believed as implicitly in its occult power as the heathen believes in the wood and stone to which, in his blindness, he bows down.

The poet Tennyson had great respect for the power of the number thirteen. He blamed the failure of his last poetical drama to the fact that, on the night of its presentation, he made one, for the first time in his life, of a party of thirteen at dinner.

THE PERFIDY OF MAN.

Husbands Still Refuse to Smoke Young Wives' Cigars.

"My husband is just too mean for anything."

There were tears in the eyes of the young wife as she said the words, but as it was into her mother's confiding ears she poured her tale of woe, her grief was hidden from the world at large.

"He—he"—this was not laughter, but sobs—"used to be cheated dreadful when he bought his cigars, paying $5 and $6 a box for them, and here, when I saw some lovely large ones at Lacy's for $1.19 a box, with a picture of a beautiful Spanish girl in the loveliest mantilla, on the lid, I bought ten boxes for him as a Christmas present, and he—he"—here she sobbed again—"told me after looking them over coldly that he was going to swear off smoking New Year's!"

"Never mind, dear," said the mother, soothingly, "it is just like a man. I bought cigars, oh, a real bargain, for your father once, and he told me the same story. After I had given them to the washerwoman's husband he started to smoke again, too!"

But just then a woman passed the window wearing a handsome fur coat, and in debating as to whether it was a genuine Persian lamb or a $19.19 imitation their mutual misery over male perversity was forgotten.—New York Times.

FIRST GIRL IN 140 YEARS.

St. Louis Family Breaks a Record That Is Probably Unique.

The visit of a stork at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Becker of St. Louis recently, bearing a precious mite of a baby girl, proved the biggest event that has happened in the Becker family for seven score years.

But one other girl was born to the Becker ancestry in the history of the family tree, and even that birth, which is supposed to have occurred 140 years ago, is only mentioned in the family genealogy as the first lady of her race and died shortly after birth. The advent of little Miss Becker has given hope to all members of the Becker family, who have long since despaired of having female issue. The father is the son of J. P. Becker, who had four sons as the fruit of his marriage, all of whom are living.

Won Him His Liberty.

Congressman Ruppert of New York tells of a constituent of his who is never known to work. He is a most accomplished and dignified "panhandler," and for many years has managed to wheedle a fairly comfortable livelihood out of his good-natured and less impecunious acquaintances. Not long ago he allowed Bacchus to get the better of him one evening, the result being his arrest. Next morning the judge asked him his occupation. "Must I tell?" said the prisoner. "You must," was the magistrate's reply. This was rather a poser, but the prisoner knew he must classify himself in some way or stand the chance of being sent to jail as a vagrant. "Your honor," he finally said, "I am a trimmer of Christmas trees. I work the day before Christmas every year." The original idea won him his liberty.

Nothin' Doin'.

Nothin' is comin' and nothin' in view,
Nothin' in pocket and nothin' to do.
Nothin' to kick for and nothin' to kick,
Nothin' to love and nothin' to lick.
Nothin' to hear and nothin' to see,
Nothin' to want and nothin' to be;
Nothin' to think of, of nothin' to fret,
Nothin' to ask for, nothin' to get.
Nothin' the captain, nothin' the crew,
Nothin' to choke on and nothin' to chew;
Nothin' to cry for, nothin' to sing,
Nothin' to take away, nothin' to bring.
Nothin' to spend, and nothin to earn,
Nothin' to eat and nothin' to burn.
Nothin' to borrow and nothin' to give,
Nothin' to die for, for nothin' to live;
In fact, there's nothin' doin'.

HIGH POKER STAKES

SMALL GAME WHERE JOHN W. GATES SAT IN.

Great Plunger Called Bluff of Eastern Man and Raked in a Small Fortune —Very Heavy Betting Done on Poor Cards.

It was snowing outside last night; and a crowd had gathered in the lobby of the Colonial hotel. The conversation had drifted to poker, and experiences were being told. Finally the talk slid to the question of bluffing and high stakes.

"Speaking of bluffs and high stakes," said a man from New York, as he lighted a cigar and leaned back in his chair, "reminds me of the man who tried to bluff John W. Gates on a pair of nines—and didn't. He was one of your Cleveland men, too. There were some high stakes in that game, I assure you. Why, I would not work a day longer if I had the roll that changed hands at that one sitting."

The man blew a ring of smoke into the air. "It was one of those little social gatherings at a New York hotel," he went on, after a moment's pause. "As I remember it, there was a Chicago man, one from Cleveland, a prominent citizen from Youngstown, a stranger and John W. Gates, sitting in the game. It wasn't any penny ante experience. White chips were selling at $2,000 per. Maybe John W. Gates didn't mind it, but the ante was high enough to make the rest of the party take considerable interest in the game.

"The play went on for some time without anything sensational about it except the amount of money involved. There was another Cleveland man watching the game, mightily interested as could be plainly seen, yet no one suspected he was going to execute the coup he did later on.

"The deal had just gone round, and the players had taken a glance at their hands, when a bell boy came in and said some one wanted the Cleveland man at the long-distance 'phone. He turned his hand face down on the table and said to his Cleveland friend whom he evidently knew:

"'Here, Jim, play this out for me.'

"The Clevelander took up the hand, held out two cards. Gates did the same. After the draw the man next the dealer bet two white chips, or $4,000. The next man called him with two. The Cleveland man was next, and the company took a long breath as he slowly shoved in eight white checks, making $24,000 on the table aside from the ante. The rest of the players all pulled out in a hurry—all except John W.

"The crowd leaned forward breathlessly to see what he would do. For a moment he studied his hand silently, then cast a sharp glance at the man from Cleveland. The face of the latter never changed a muscle. He might have been the Sphinx so far as any manifestation of interest in the game was concerned. He seemed the least excited of any one over the small fortune on the table—unless it was Gates himself.

"It didn't take Gates half so long to make up his mind as it has taken me to tell this.

"'Call you,' he said shortly, as he added eight whites to the stack. The Cleveland man showed his hand. He had a pair of nines. John W. then laid down his own and the players saw three jacks."

The narrator arose and knocked the ashes from his cigar. "Seems to be snowing pretty hard outside," he said as he turned up the collar of his coat.

"That's the biggest stake I have heard of being played for late years, and it's gospel truth. One of the Cleveland men told me the yarn himself—not the one that tried to bluff John W., however."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR.

Lapse of Memory Causes Embarrassment to Toastmaster.

It was recently in a well-known club room and one of those rare occasions of conviviality in which the best of men like to indulge. The party numbered a dozen, all prominent locally, and some whose fame is more than local. A good spirit prevailed, because none but the best of spirits had been flowing, and the spirit manifested itself in a brilliancy of speech that bubbled from every one present to such an extent that an impromptu toastmaster was chosen to keep it in curb by having each speak in turn.

So up rose Mr. Toastmaster, and, casting his eye about the board, let it rest upon the man the fountain of whose eloquence was first to be let loose.

"Gentlemen," said the toastmaster, "as becomes the occasion I will introduce the wittiest man first, Mr"—(pause).

"Gentlemen, I take pleasure in introducing to you one whose name is a household word in Buffalo"—(pause and embarrassment).

"Gentlemen, it affords me great pleasure to introduce a man whose name stands for civic pride and all that is best in this community"—(pause and embarrassment).

"Gentlemen, the man I am about to call upon first is known to me for the past twenty years, and to some of you perhaps longer. I will not dwell upon his qualities, his talent. They have made him famous. You all know to whom I refer. The man whose name rushes to all our lips"—(a long pause). "I refer to the third gentleman to my right," and as the toastmaster sat down, amid an uproar he said to his neighbor, "I'll be hanged but his name wouldn't come."—Buffalo Evening Times.

PAINFUL PERIODS

are overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Menard cured after doctors failed to help her.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after doctors had failed, and I want other girls to know about it. During menstruation I suffered most intense pain low in the abdomen and in my limbs. At other times I had a heavy, depressed feeling which made my work seem twice as hard, and I grew pale and thin. The medicine the doctor gave me did not do me one bit of good, and I was thoroughly discouraged. The doctor wanted me to stop work, but, of course, I could not do that. I finally began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and felt better after taking the first bottle, and after taking six bottles I was entirely cured, and am now in perfect health, and I am so grateful for it."—Miss Georgie Menard, 537 E. 152nd St., New York City.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

WHEN BACKS ARE BAD.

Bad backs are caused by sick kidneys. Most backache pains are kidney pains. Backache is the first symptom of kidney disorders. Neglect the warning of the back, serious troubles follow.

It's only a short step to urinary derangements — diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease.

Read how to be cured: CASE NO. 24,613.—Mr. Joseph Calmes, foreman of the Harter mills, Fostoria, O., says: "I just as ardently recommend Doan's Kidney Pills today, and it is the month of October, 1899, as I did in the summer of 1896, when, after taking a course of the treatment, they cured me of kidney complaint and backache, which was often so acute that I was unable to sleep at night and had difficulty in remaining on my feet all day. I am still free from the lumbago or any annoyance from my kidneys, and unhesitatingly declare that I am only too pleased to re-endorse my opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills."

FROCKS AND FRILLS FOR THE FAIR

Herself as Others See.

From Paris comes a novelty which the modish maid is apt to welcome. This is a lorgnette mirror, or rather a tiny mirror which fits into a case of filigree gilt that resembles a lorgnette. It is worn suspended from a chain like the genuine lorgnette, and is exceedingly pretty as well as useful. The maid or matron in possession of one of these mirrors can readily ascertain if her hat is awry or her veil unbecomingly arranged.

HOUSEHOLD ITEMS

A bath of skimmed milk will brighten faded oilcloth.

Potatoes keep best in a basket or a box in the cellar.

A teaspoonful of sugar in the stove blackening will add to the luster of the stove.

Never put warm food of any kind away in a covered dish if you want it to keep well.

Cleanse the inside of the coffee pot every few days with a thorough salt rubbing and rinsing.

A thin paste made of whiting and cold tea is a splendid mixture with which to clean mirrors.

Turnips, carrots, sweet potatoes and horseradish keep fresh all winter if put in sand in the cellar.

A little washing soda mixed in the blacklead will remove all grease and give grates and stoves an excellent polish.

Tarnished brass should be rubbed with a cut lemon, then well washed in hot soapy water and polished with a nice soft leather.

Vinegar and tea leaves used together are excellent for cleaning specimen glasses and other vases discolored by flowers.

Onions should be kept in a cool, dry place, but never placed in the ice box. They will keep well if put in paper bags and hung up.

When boiling a cracked egg, add a teaspoonful of salt to the water and you will find that it cooks without any of the white part leaving the shell.

Cabbage, cauliflower, string beans, young turnips, asparagus, cucumbers, tomatoes and summer squash should be bought in small quantities, as they quickly lose their fine flavor and do not keep well.

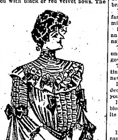
Fashions in Skirts.

Skirts in the East are cut almost indescribably; with many gores, shaping to more points at the top, but giving the much sought billowy flare at the bottom. These gores are tailor stitched in plain things, and sometimes hemstitched in silks. Women talk much of whether they are to have any hips or not, but while all like to see these sheath effects all like to see something under them.

One impatient person said: "Dear me, I could have the right thing to wear if I had nothing else in life to do." It is the truth; it would take one's entire time to be really fashionable.

Theater Waist.

Blouse of poppy-red silk, the front of which is trimmed lengthwise with tiny ruffles of the same and ornamented with black or red velvet bows. The draped yoke is of mousseline de soie of the same shade bordered with a ruffle of the silk, which is headed with an ecru lace applique.



The mousquetaire sleeves are trimmed on the outside with little frills, like those on the front of the blouse, and are finished at the elbows with deep ruffles of the silk, headed by bands of the velvet, knotted on the outside. The girdle is also of the velvet.—Wiener Mode-Album.

For Coat and Skirt Costume.

For your coat and skirt costume it is advisable to have a waist of the same color, or possibly a lighter shade, made of chiffon or silk, chiffon trimmed with cloth being particularly good style. The idea is to have the bodice much thinner than the material of the gown.

The Latest Ideas From Paris

Embroidery is very prominent in all fashions.

Tea gowns show the sleeves cut in one with the shoulder.

Panne crepe de chine is a favorite fabric for evening frocks and gowns.

Fine cloth and serge dresses are being trimmed with broad lines of braid.

Undressed kid is seen on some ultra fashionable frocks as a stitched trimming.

For evening cloaks and tea gowns an attempt is made to revive long nap plush.

The career of the tassel continues unchecked, and is worn on hat and gown alike.

The drop shoulder effect is a distinguishing feature of many of the newest bodices.

Dark green plaid for street wear is decidedly popular for maids and youthful matrons.

Louisine silk is much used for blouses, though the woolen one holds its own for morning wear.

Mexican Panocha.

Brown sugar fudge, or Mexican panocha, is one of the best of the homemade sweets and requires little trouble. The following recipe makes enough to cover the bottom of a small pie pan: Three cups of light brown sugar, a cup and a half of milk and a dessert-spoonful of butter. Boil all together, stirring it enough to prevent its sticking on the bottom. Test it by dropping a little in cold water, and when it gathers into a soft ball remove from the fire, add vanilla and beat vigorously. When the candy begins to thicken under the beating, add a cupful of broken walnut meats, beat a little more and pour out before it gets too thick to stir.

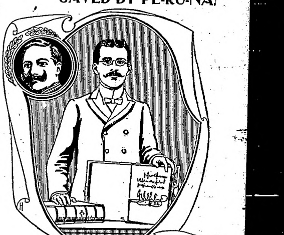
A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.



Rev. H. Stubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubenvoll is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The present mayor, councilmen and city officials have all been residents of this city for some time and have always sustained a good reputation for honesty. The members of the Municipal League will not gain the confidence of the public in denouncing them as boodlers, etc., until they show some tangible proof. The records of the city are open to all and the city officials court the fullest examination.

One of the measures now pending in Congress is that which provides for what is known as "Post Check Currency," which is intended to furnish a practical and convenient method of sending small sums of money by mail. A great deal has been written on the subject and the proposed measure has the universal indorsement of the press as well as the business interests of the country. The "Post Check Currency" is in effect a greenback in denominations from 25 cents to five dollars, which passes current like any other money until the holder writes in a space on the back the name of a person to whom he wishes to send it by mail. It then becomes payable to the payee only, and on his endorsement is deposited in the bank and gets back to Washington through the usual channels and is destroyed as "mutilated currency."

WHERE IS OLAF

Section Boss Here Cannot Be Found.

Olaf Mossbeck, section boss for the Great Northern at this point left the city last Friday and has not been seen since. His mind is said to be deranged and he believes that he is being pursued by Catholics.

Mossbeck has always been a sober and industrious man and the roadmaster says that he was one of the best section bosses in the employ of the Great Northern. His wife and family reside in the section house near the depot.

A report has been about the city that the man was in the town of Black River, but this cannot be verified.

Lengthen Their Terms.

The daily papers are authority for the statement that a bill will soon be introduced in the present legislature, to lengthen the terms of all county auditors and county attorneys in the state to four years, instead of two as at present. The idea is to have the law go into effect at once, and thus these officers who were elected for two years by the people at the last election would serve for four years instead.

The scheme to have the terms of various county officers lengthened is not a new one, it having been up for consideration several times in the past few years. It never passed. Last year the Twin city papers exposed the fact that $40,000 had been raised and deposited in the city banks, by various county officials for the purpose of getting the bill through.

It would seem as though the fairest way to do would be to extend the term of all county officers to four years, and not make it effective until after the next general election.

All of the stores in the city are now closed up at 8 o'clock, except upon Saturday evening and pay days.

Lund & Strand have purchased the Backrupt stock of goods and removed same to the Gilbertson building.

A survey is now being made of the townships in the northwestern part of Roseau county along the Canadian boundry.

I am prepared to pay all outstanding orders against Independent District No. 18 up to order No. 170. E. E. Zeh, Treasurer.

The Red River Valley Shooting Tournament association will meet at Grand Forks in a short time to make arrangements for the coming year.

Rev. A. Melin will hold services for the Swedish Lutheran congregation in the Mission church on the East Side Sunday forenoon at 11 o'clock.

James Meehan was up from St Paul last week to look over his buildings which were damaged by the recent fire. They will be repaired at once.

The insurance adjuster last week gave John Morgen $309 and J. P. Curtis $92 for damages done to their stock. Both are well pleased with the settlement.

K. M. Hansen went to Crookston last evening to join the Elk's lodge. W. C. Smiley and James Meehan went down to see that he got all that was coming.

H. W. Lee—What is the Municipal League going to do? That is hard to say. What they will do, and what they will attempt to do are two different things.

Messrs. Noesen and Mullry the two Crookston gentlemen who are going to open up a billiard hall here in the Kivel building, are at work getting the place in shape to open up.

The school board held a meeting Tuesday evening, although little business was transacted. All of the bids submitted for wood were rejected, and a number of bills were allowed.

The land in the northern part of Beltrami county near Beaudette will be examined for timber this winter and opened as agricultural land in the spring. It is said to contain some good farming land.

C. A. Robbecke—The five members of the city council pay over one-fourth of the entire tax in the city of Thief River Falls and surely should be interested in giving the city an economical administration.

The county commissioners of Norman county have passed and forwarded to the state legislature a resolution asking that a law be passed compelling the plowing of land in the fall or early in the spring to prevent the hatching of grasshoppers.

Arthur Johnson was taken to Red Lake Falls last Saturday by Chas. Shirley and Andy Erickson and adjudged insane by Probate Judge Tarrant. Johnson is about 18 years of age and is said to have gone insane over religion.

Ira C. Richardson was down to Fergus Falls last week to attend the debate between Crookston and Fergus Falls high schools. The Crookston debaters, of which Mr. Richardson's Wayne, was one, were defeated, but were paid a high complement by the judges.

The three indictments against Geo. A. Ralph, charging him with peculation in connection with his work as engineer on the state drainage work, were all dismissed Tuesday on motion of the attorneys for the state. The prosecution simply admitted that they had not been able to secure sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction.

Judge Tarrant was up from Red Lake Falls last week.

One might judge from the name that at Langor out in Beltrami county, things would be uninteresting if not wholly inactive, but not so. Everything is lively, so much so that they had a big dance the other night to work off some of their surplus energy and activity. After the musicians had eaten breakfast the dancers started in again and continued the music and revelry till 11 a. m.

H. E. Ives of St. Hilaire is off for another southern trip this winter. This time he will go to British Honduras in Central America and spend some months, not reaching home before the first of April. Last year he made a visit to Cuba and the southern part of the United States. Mr. Ives will thoroughly investigate the resources of the country in that part of Central America and while south will visit the site of the proposed canal.

A movement is on foot to consolidate the Synodical Lutheran and the United Norweigan Lutheran churches—the two great branches of the Norwegian Lutheranism in America—and a meeting was held in Fergus Falls last Sunday to secure an expression of sentiment. The matter was discussed at some length and a committee was appointed to take steps and report at a joint meeting to be held later. If united these two churches would have a membership of about 500,000 in the United States.

THE LEAGUE.

Held Another Meeting Tuesday Evening.

The members of the Municipal League held a meeting Tuesday evening in the Kivel building. Considerable time was spent in discussing numerous topics, the most important business transacted, however, was the adoption of a resolution introduced by H. W. Lee. It provided that a committee of three be appointed to secure from the city clerk a full statement of receipts and expenditures made by the city for the past two years, and to investigate all transactions. The committee appointed by the chair was as follows: H. W. Lee, C. H. Schelbach and A. A. Sweans.

Some discussion resulted from the reading of letter addressed to the president of the league which had been written by H. Johnson of Crookston. Mr. Johnson wanted the members of the league to send a remonstrance to Washington against the passage of the Red Lake bill as introduced by Senator Clapp, but the league disposed of this by passing a resolution favoring the opening of the reservation in any form, and giving assurance of assistance in every way legal.

Mr. Lee assured the members present that he would oppose the payment of the salary to the privite secretary and assured them that there need be no fear but that he would be successful.

Any taxpayer in the city or Red Lake county can become a member of the league by signing the constitution and by-laws. The next meeting of the league will be on Monday evening, the place to be announced later.

A SURVEY.

To Be Made of the Red Lake River.

F. Wilton Fowble, a U. S. civil engineer, arrived in the city last Friday from St. Paul, and with a crew of men left Tuesday for the Red lake. They will be employed for the next few weeks in making a survey of the Red Lake river from the outlet to Thief River Falls. The survey is made for the purpose of establishing a lock and dam at the outlet and to regulate the flow of water in the Red Lake river, thus insuring an even flowage all the time. The survey of the lake around the outlet was was made sometime ago.

RED LAKE BILL

Full Text of Bill Introduced by Senator Clapp.

The following is the bill introduced in the senate by Senator Clapp. This bill was last week reported favorably by the committee on Indian affairs and will pass the senate this week. The bill follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled: That the secretary of the interior is hereby authorizad to sell to the highest bidder at public auction, in tracts not to exceed one hundred and sixty acres to each individual, all that part of the Red Lake Indian Reservation situate within the boundaries of Red Lake county Minnesota, being that part of the Red Lake Indian reservation lying westerly of the range line between ranges thirty-eight and thirty-nine west of the fifth principal meridian, approxamitely two hundred and fifty-six thousand acres. And the said land shall be sold for not less than four dollars per acre, and shall be sold upon the following terms: One-fifth of the price bid therefor to be paid at the time the bid is made, and the balance of the purchase price of said land to be paid in five equal annual installments in advance. And in case any purchaser fails to make such annual payment promptly when due, all rights in and to the land covered by his or her purchase shall at once cease, and any payments theretofore made shall be forfeited and the secretary of the interior shall reoffer such land for sale. And no title to said land shall inure to the purchaser, nor any patent of the United States issue to the purchaser, until the purchaser shall have resided upon and improved said land for the full term of five years, without any commutation of time, and shall have in all respects complied with the terms and provisions of the homestead laws of the United States: Provided, That each purchaser shall prove up within six years from the date of sale; that aliens who have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States may become purchasers under this Act, but before proving up and acquiring title must take out their full naturalization papers: Provided, That sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township are hereby excepted from the provisions of this Act, and are hereby granted to the State of Minnesota for school purposes.

All of the Indians residing upon the tract above described shall remove to the diminished reservation within six months after the ratification of this Act: and there is hereby appropriated from the proceeds of said sale the sum of twenty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be paid to those thus removing in proportion to their respective improvements, which payment to said Red Lake Indians shall be in full, for all improvements which they will abandon and also for the removal within the diminished reservation of their dead from where they are now buried on the tract above described.

Of the amount realized from the sale of said lands the sum of three hundred thousand dollars shall be paid in cash, per capita, share and share alike, to each man, woman, and child belonging on said Red Lake Indian Reservation within ninety days after the sale herein provided for, and the remainder of the proceeds of the sale of said lands shall be paid in cash, per capita, in fifteen annual installments, the first installment to be paid in the month of October of the year following that in which the payment of the three hundred thousand dollars is made.

In consideration of the Indians hereinafter referred to ratifying this act, the said Indians shall possess their diminished reservation independent of all other bands of Chippewa Indians and shall be entitled to allotments thereon of one hundred and sixty acres each of either agricultural or pine land, the different classes of land to be apportioned as equitably as possible among the allottees. And nothing in this act or its acceptance by said Indians shall be construed to deprive the said Indians of any benefits to which they are entitled under existing treaties or agreements not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

There is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the United States treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of five hundred dollars, or as much thereof as may be necessary, to defray the expenses of the agent negotiating acceptance of this treaty.

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby vested with full power and authority to make such rules and regulations as to the time of notice, manner of sale, and other matters incidental to the carrying out of the provisions of this act as he may deem necessary, and with authority to continue making sales of said land until all of said land shall be sold.

This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its ratification by the Red Lake and Pembina bands of Chippewa Indians belonging on the Red Lake Indian Reservation, in the State of Minnesota, a majority of the male adults of said Indians assenting thereto, and the evidence thereof to be made by the proclamation of the President to the effect that this Act has been duly ratified.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—Secretary Hitchcock has made a report on Senator Clapp's bill for opening the Red Lake reservation, in which he suggests several radical amendments. He wants the minimun price of land fixed at $5 an acre instead of $4. He is also in favor of requiring cash payment in full for lands, but if deferred payments are decided upon he suggests the purchasers be allowed ninety days' grace when payments are due. He also suggests that deferred payments bear six per cent interest.

Mayor Kratka of Thief River Falls, who is in Washington in the interest of the Red Lake reservation measure, is getting the reputation of being a most energetic and persistent worker. And the prospects are excellent for the success of his pet measure, as the Minnesota members are all interested in seeing it through.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Washington correspondence in the St. Paul Dispatch.

Mayor Frank Kratka gave two theater parties this week. At the new National theater Senators Nelson and Clapp, Congressman Eddy, John J. Boobor, Representative Stevens and Col. F. J. Carmody, of the governor's staff, witnessed the "Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" on Wednesday evening from a box. Mayor Kratka also gave a box party to see Francis Wilson in "The Toreador."

GRAIN GROWERS OF THREE STATES

Convention at Fargo Discusses Matters of Moment to Grain and Stock Growers.

The Tri-state Grain and Stock Growers' association held a four-day session in Fargo last week. The attendance was large, many being present from Minnesota and South Dakota. The western and central part of North Dakota was well represented.

The program was particularly interesting, many instructive papers on subjects of importance to stock and grain growers were read. The discussions were lively and full of valuable hints to the agriculturist. The 600 delegates manifested their keen interest in the proceedings by faithful attendance at all the sessions.

The convention was called to order by ex-Mayor Johnson, president, and after the invocation by Dr. Dudley, the president's address was delivered. Secretary Worst followed with an outline of the association and the scope of the work to be done at this convention, and also read a paper, by Prof. Belford of the experimental farm at Brandon on "Clover Raising in Manitoba."

Prof. L. R. Waldron of North Dakota agricultural college created a deal of interest with his paper on weeds, and many delegates participated in the spirited discussion which followed.

Datus C. Smith of Traill county had an interesting paper on "Good Soil and Poor Crops." Before the noon adjournment announcement was made of a meeting to-morrow afternoon for a permanent organization of a live stock association of which an annual stock show will be the feature.

There were two matters of interest in the convention on the second day in addition to the regular program. A strong movement was set on foot to secure the transfer of the North Dakota state fair from Mandan to Fargo, and the North Dakota Live Stock association was organized.

Hon. Charles H. McKissick of Mayville was the leading figure in the state fair matter, and his motion met with popular approval. He was appointed as the head of a committee of seven, two of whom are from Fargo, to see what could be done in the matter. The proposition is to relocate the fair at Fargo, provide $10,000 for buildings as a starter and appropriate $10,000 each biennial period, in consideration for which citizens of Fargo will provide suitable grounds to include sixteen acres of land.

The live stock men organized with J. H. Shepperd of Fargo as president; C. H. McKissick, Mayville, first vice president; A. McGillivray, Dickinson, second vice president; J. A. Power, secretary; G. S. Barnes, Fargo, treasurer. The membership fee was placed at $1 and ran up to several hundred with a whoop. Provisions were made for annual meetings, shows and sales, and all breeders of blooded cattle, horses and hogs are to associate themselves with the organization, but the membership is open to all interested parties, whether actually breeders or not. The attendance reached 700 in the afternoon and there were over 1,100 at the evening session. Among the participants in the day's program were Prof. Hoverstad of Crookston; G. S. Barnes, Fargo; M. F. Greeley, Aberdeen; Charles H. McKissick, Mayville; Commissioner of Agriculture Warner, Bismarck; Dr. Andrews, Mapleton; Prof. Shepperd, Fargo; M. S Mayo, Walhalla; J. G. Halland, Hillsboro, and EF. Ladd, Fargo.

The third day of the convention was a busy and interesting one. The chief event of interest was the action over the proposed Dakota and Wisconsin grain inspection. The resolution committee presented a strong indorsement of the plan, but there was objection to the proposition for the appointment of a committee to visit Wisconsin, and the matter was referred back. Later it was brought up and adopted without the junketing features.

The discussions were interesting and somewhat surprising, as the plan was rather strenuously opposed by some farmers who were supposedly for the scheme, and strongly sanctioned by G. S. Barnes, a well-known grain commission man. Mr. Crumpton of the Superior board of trade outlined the proposition and won over some of the opposition. There were evidences that friends of the Minnesota inspection had been active. The more conservative grain growers are immensely pleased with the action of the North Dakota legislature on the new inspection and did not wish to do more than lend the indorsement of this convention to the movement.

The committee on the proposed transfer of the North Dakota state fair from Mandan to Fargo made an enthusiastic report favoring the plan. Liberal appropriations were urged by the legislature, to be made available when the citizens of Fargo would raise a $10,000 fund for the purchase of a proper location.

President J. Johnson of Fargo, Vice President Hoverstad of Crookston and Secretary Worst of Fargo were honored by unanimous re-election.

The special committee appointed to investigate the needs of the experiment station mad an extended report, praising most things with the exception of the grades of cattle there, which were not though to be up to the standard, and the lack of room for the accommodation of the numerous students was deplored. The legislature was asked to be more liberal in appropriations and the governor was requested to make the most of his appointments on the board of trustees actual farmers. The general resolutions recommended a more liberal appropriation for farmers' institutes to be held over the state, placing the sum at $5,000.

There were a large number of interesting papers read before the convention and new features were introduced in an exchange which was established for the benefit of many farmers who wished to exchange grain, seeds of various kinds, and stock.

The concluding session was as interesting and well attended as any of the convention.

Among the incidents of the morning session was the adoption of a resolution indorsing the bill of Representative Leech of Fargo to make a state appropriation for the North Dakota poultry show. Mrs. Bertha Laws of Appleton, Minn., spoke in the morning and was followed by Prof. Bolley of the agricultural college, Farmer James Holes of Fargo and M. F. Greeley of Aberdeen.

It is probable that the next annual convention will be held in Fargo.

TROUBLES OF IMMIGRANTS.

Ticketed From Germany to North Dakota, They Are Refused Admission.

The authorities at Washington are trying to untangle a skein in connection with a matter of immigration which seems to be badly twisted. Last spring Henry Meyer, a well-to-do German farmer living near Dresden, Pembina county, N. D., sent transportation to bring his brother and brother's wife from their home in Hamburg, Germany, to Dresden, N. D. The couple started and arrived at Quebec about the middle of August. On the way over the brother's wife fell and injured her knee. At Quebec she was treated for about a month in the general hospital.

While they were there there was some question as to the propriety of allowing them to proceed, but after a good deal of solicitation and explanation by the resident American consul the Canadian authorities permitted them to come over on the Canadian Pacific railway by way of Winnipeg. On their arrival there they were transferred to the south-bound train for Pembina, and supposed that their troubles were over. At Pembina, however, they were halted by the American collector, who, on ascertaining the woman's condition, ordered them back. A telegram was sent to the brother, who was waiting at Dresden to receive them, and he started to get matters straightened out. When he arrived at Pembina he found that his relatives had gone, and at Winipeg he found that they had been started East just a few minutes before he arrived. He wired to have them taken from the train at Rat Portage, and took the next train to that place. There he learned that they had not been put off the train but were still speeding toward the Atlantic ocean. He overtook them later, but was not permitted to see them and was compelled to return home without them.

The matter has been placed in the hands of an attorney who will endeavor to have them brought to North Dakota at the expense of the government, as he holds that the collector of Pembina has exceeded his authority.

OFFICIAL ADVISER.

North Dakotans Ask a United States Senate Employe to Help Out.

Maj. J. G. Hamilton of Grand Forks was the recipient of a token of appreciation by the house in a recent session in the shape of a resolution requesting him to remain during the session in the capacity of advisor to the speaker, the members of the legislature and the clerical force in matters pertaining to the clerical work of the house.

Hamilton is one of the attaches of the United States senate, and that body will probably grant him a leave of absence during the session of the North Dakota legislature. He is a former chief clerk of the house and well informed on all matters pertaining to house work. During the last campaign he was executive secretary of the Republican state committee, and he put in some good work for the cause.

Jimmie Campbell has been appointed state's attorney for the full term in Morton county, to succeed Attorney Rice, recently deceased.

KITTREDGE RE-ELECTED.

South Dakota Senator Is Sent Back to Congress to Serve Full Term.

The vote in separate houses of the legislature on United States senator was taken Tuesday. It was strictly on party lines, the nine Democrats in the house and four in the senate voting for John A. Bowler and the Republicans for Alfred B. Kittredge. In the senate Robertson and Northrop of Minnehaha made the speeches nominating Senator Kittredge for the term ending March 4 next and the full term following.

In the house of representatives Rodge and Egge of Minnehaha presented Kittredge's name. Johnson of Douglas nominated Bowler in the senate and Gross of Potter made the nominating speech in the house.

The joint session was held at noon Wednesday, and the action on the separate vote was ratified, after which an adjournment was taken to Tuesday of next week.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Capitol Bill Approved by Senate in Committee of the Whole

St. Paul, Jan. 26. — Both the house and senate reached general orders yesterday, and considered minor measures in committee of the whole. The senate adjourned until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, and the house until 11 o'clock Monday forenoon.

The bill providing for an additional appropriation of $1,500,000 for completing the new state capitol was approved by the senate as a committee of the whole yesterday without a dissenting vote. The measure is on the calendar for final passage Tuesday, and then will go to the house.

Bills introduced were:

Relating to state aid to high schools, grade schools and rural schools; relating to advertising for bids and letting of contracts in excess of $100 by county commissioners; providing for filing and recording in offices of registers of deeds instruments relating to standing timber, stone, ore or minerals; appropriating money for general uses of state horticultural society; appropriating money for betterments and repairs at state training school at Red Wing.

In the House.

Representative Yoerg introduced a resolution directing the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the relations of the Northern Pacific, the St. Paul & Duluth, and the Eastern Minnesota railroads, and report its findings to the house.

Bills introduced were:

Monument to Minnesota troops at Vicksburg, appropriating $40,000; appropriation for repairs at state training school; constitutional convention; allowing villages of less than 3,000 to charter street railways.

GOLD KILLED HIM.

Lucky Man Would Neither Eat Nor Sleep After Finding Paying Vein.

Deadwood, S. D., Jan. 26. — It was not David Thompson who lost his life from excessive joy over the discovery of rich gold ore near Roubaix, as reported by dispatches from that place, but a native of Finland, Peter Hanila. Attorneys and others of Deadwood are besieged with inquiries from various parts of the country, written by persons claiming relationship with the deceased and taking preliminary steps to prove their claims and share in the estate, and investigation developed the fact that a mistake had been made. Hanila and several other Finlanders were woodchoppers and prospected incidentally near Custer's peak. They encountered some exceedingly rich free gold ore, and Hanila became so excited that he would neither eat nor sleep, spending his entire time at work in the mine. He finally worked himself into a frenzy that resulted in a ruptured blood vessel. His partners now have the property.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.

John Rooney Charged With Killing a Blue Earth Man.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 25.—The trial of John Rooney, charged with murder, is on here. Rooney and two accomplices planned to rob three young men named Sweet, who were camping just outside the city limits. The boys were from Blue Earth, Minn., and were en route to the harvest fields. The Sweet boys resisted, and Harold Sweet struggled with Rooney until shot. Rooney claims that one of his pals did the shooting. When the shot was fired the other men ran, and the brothers of the victim captured Rooney. A hard fight will be made in court over the case.

WATER WORKS FIGHT.

Constitutional Limit to Power of Adding to Debt of Municipality.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 26. — R. J. Wells, a local attorney, has secured an order restraining the city of Sioux Falls from selling bonds in the sum of $50,000 for the commencement of work on a municipal water works plant. The restraining order was based on the ground that the indebtedness of the city now exceeds the constitutional limit. The case will immediately be taken before the state supreme court, and on its decision will depend the right of the city to construct a municipal water works system.

ENTIRE TOWN SOLD.

Jeffries, With All Its Stores, Railroad and Mills.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 25.—The Worden Lumber company, the chief stockholders in which are J. H. Worden, J. I. Case and Charles R. Sligh, has purchased the town of Jeffries, Wis., including houses, stores, mill, nine miles of railroad and 11,000 acres of surrounding timber lands, and will conduct lumbering operations on a large scale. The company has been operating at Fife Lake.

Regents Renamed.

St. Paul, Jan. 26.—Gov. Van Sant yesterday announced the reappointment to the board of regents of the state university of Thomas Wilson, St. Paul; William M. Liggett, A. E. Rice, Willmar, and Elmer E. Adams of Fergus Falls.

Amateur Pugilist Dead.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 26. — Thomas McGee, one of the participants in a four-round go here last week with a local lad is dead at the county hospital. The boy is said to have been well connected and lived in New York.

Probably Fatally Injured.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 25. — While blasting with dynamite at the new pulp mill site in this city, Seth Mahlo was seriously, if not fatally, wounded. The force of the blast struck him in the forehead.

The State Day by Day.

BOARD OF CONTROL

FIRST BIENNIAL REPORT IS SUBMITTED TO THE GOVERNOR.

WANTS ITS POWER EXTENDED

BELIEVES THAT CHILDREN ARE SENT TO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR TRIFLES.

SAYS FREQUENT ABUSES OCCUR

THE BOARD MAKES MANY RECOMMENDATIONS IN ITS REPORT.

The first biennial report of the state board of control has just been issued and presented to Gov. Van Sant. Many recommendation are made in the report. The interesting paragraphs read as follows:

"We recommend that the law relating to the state agents of the prison and reformatory be changed so as to provide for the appointment by the board of control of such agents, and so as to include paroled prisoners as well and discharged prisoners among those under the supervision of the agents.

"Investigation shows that children guilty of no crime and without criminal tendency have been committed to the state training school for some trifling offense that any child might have committed under the same circumstances, and are thus legally separated from their natural parents during their minority.

"We recommend that the law governing commitments to this school be so amended that only children guilty of incorrigible and vicious conduct can be sent there. We are also of the opinion that authority to discharge inmates from this school, when it is thought desirable to do so, should be lodged with the board of control.

Money of Inmates.

"The inmates of the state institutions have moneys in the hands of the warden and the superintendent aggregating, on Aug. 1, 1902, to $45,534.47. We are not satisfied with the law that permits this large sum of money to remain in the hands of the executive officers of the state institutions.

"We believe there should be a law requiring all these funds to be turned into the state treasury monthly, and providing for their disbursement only upon proper vouchers approved by this board.

"Under the present law, contracts for the institutions must be executed by the superintendent. This often involves unnecessary trouble and delay. We think the law should vest the right to execute such contracts in this board.

"We would recommend that all standing appropriations for current expenses of public institutions be abolished, and biennial appropriations made for the full amount required.

Frequent Abuses Occur.

"Under the present system, when a person is committed to any state institution, one or more officers are sent to convey such person to the place designated at the expense of either the state or county or per diem for mileage or both.

"Under this plan frequent abuses occur, and we recommend that the law be so changed as to require that when a person has been sentenced to the prison or reformatory, the warden or superintendent be notified of the fact and it shall then be made his duty to send a guard of his institution to accompany the person to the place of imprisonment, and in case of the other institutions named, that the superintendent be notified of commitment to their institutions, respectively, and that they be required to send a nurse or attendant to get the person so committed.

"We recommend that special and current expense appropriations (in addition to standing appropriations) for the state institutions, be as follows:

"Appropriations immediately available, $145,000; buildings and betterments available, Aug. 1, 1903, $458,000; current expense available Aug. 1, 1903, $606,000; buildings and betterments available Aug. 1, 1904, $306,400; current expense available Aug. 1, 1904, $698,500; state agency and manual training, Red Wing, available Aug. 1, 1903, $3,000; state agency, Owatonna, available Aug. 1, 1903, $5,400; state agency and manual training, Red Wing, available Aug. 1, 1904, $4,000; state agency, Owatonna, available Aug. 1, 1904, $5,500. Total, $2,232,300."

The following is a list of the new buildings asked for by the board of control: St. Peter, nurses' dormitory, $75,000; Rochester, nurses' dormitory, $75,000; Fergus Falls, nurses' dormitory, $75,000; Faribault, school for feeble-minded, nurses' dormitory, $40,000; Anoka asylum, cottage, $35,000; Hastings, cottage, $35,000; St. Peter, reconstruction of main building, $40,000; Faribault, school for feeble-minded, two cottages for boys, $50,000; Faribault, school for feeble-minded, hospital wing for tuberculosis patients, $20,000; St. Cloud reformatory, completion of administration building, $20,000; new cell wing, $20,000; Stillwater, state prison, enlarging the cell room, $30,000; enlarging the chapel and laundry, $25,000; building new ward for insane criminals, $20,000.

T. C. Platt to Succeed Himself.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21. — The joint Republican caucus last night named Thomas C. Platt United States senator by a vote of 108 to 1 for Elihu Root. The vote for Root was cast by Assemblyman W. A. Denison.

LARGEST DITCH IN MINNESOTA.

Ditch No. 1 of Polk County the First Constructed in the State.

Judicial Ditch No. 1 of Polk county is the first ditch of the kind to be constructed in Minnesota, and it is also the largest drainage ditch in the state. Its history is a most interesting one.

In July, 1901, a meeting of farmers was held at Snake postoffice, in the southwest corner of Marshall county, the object of the meeting being to devise means to prevent the annual overflow of the Snake river. The Snake river is a small stream which flows north along the western part of Marshall county, finally emptying into the Red river. The stream overflows each year, causing a large territory to be inundated and resulting in great loss to the farmers. At this meeting J. H. Beardmore, a prominent farmer of Polk county, proposed that a ditch be dug, beginning at the northeast corner of section 19 of the town of Farley, in Polk county, and running due west to the Red river. He showed that this ditch would drain all the flooded country. His proposition was unanimously adopted.

When the work of securing signers to the petition for the ditch was undertaken it was discovered that there was no way to assess benefits for the ditch in both Marshall and Polk counties. At the special session of the legislature last winter Senator Grindeland secured the passage of a law which would allow benefits to be assessed in two or more counties for the same ditch. Under this law several ditches have already been begun.

As soon as the law was signed by the governor the board of county commissioners of Polk county ordered the construction of the ditch. Meanwhile Mr. Beardmore had had to head off several other ditches proposed by the farmers of the territory affected by the big ditch. Viewers were then appointed by the district court, which, under Senator Grindeland's law, is given charge of the construction of all ditches in which the benefits are to be assessed in more than one county, and the viewers took up their difficult task of assessing damages to suit the 500 farmer who live in the territory affected by the ditch.

The viewers finished their work a few weeks ago, and through the clerk of court of Polk county the taxpayers affected were notified of the amount of their assessments. An avalanche of appeals immediately poured in upon the court. A day of hearing was set for last week, when over 200 of the farmers from the territory poured into Crookston. Largely through the individual efforts of Mr. Beardmore every appeal was finally settled out of court, and bids for the construction of the ditch will shortly be called for. That so great an undertaking for which over 500 farmers must be taxed, and heavily at that, should be settled without a single lawsuit is a remarkable tribute to the work of Mr. Beardmore.

The judicial ditch itself is 12.5 miles long. A branch from the south is 7.5 miles long. Various ditches already constructed and emptying into the judicial ditch will make a network of 60 miles of ditches, while other ditches have been petitioned for to flow into the judicial ditch which will make the grand total of mileage 100 miles.

The ditch will be the largest in the State of Minnesota, and probably the largest in the Northwest. It is 24 feet wide at the bottom and 60 feet wide at the top. It will drain perfectly eleven townships of land and will forever prevent a recurrence of the disastrous floods which have annually swamped this section. Such floods as that of one year ago, when water stood two feet deep in the streets of Warren, will hereafter be impossible. The total cost of the ditch will be $70,000.

HISTORIANS SELECT A COUNCIL.

Gov. Ramsey Appears Hale and Hearty at Annual Meeting at the Capitol.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota State Historical society was held Monday evening at the capitol. The following executive council was chosen: Jacob V. Brower, Josiah B. Chaney, Henry W. Childs, Greenleaf Clark, John Espy, Henry S. Fairchild, Charles E. Flandrau, James J. Hill, David L. Kingsbury, N. P. Langford, W. H. Leightner, John D. Ludden, George R. Metcalf, Edward C. Mitchell, C. P. Noyes, Alexander Ramsey, J. B. Sanborn, Channing Seabury, John E. Stees, Hira mF. Stevens, H. P. Upham and Warren Upham of St. Paul; George H. Daggett, William H. Dunwoody and Newton H. Winchell of Minneapolis; Moses K. Armstrong, St. James; James H. Baker, Mankato; John R. Carey, Duluth; William G. Le Duc, Hastings, and William Lee, Long Prairie.

The council will meet in February to elect officers.

After the business meeting in the society rooms, adjournment was taken to the senate chamber. There a brief address was made by President Alexander Ramsey. Mr. Ramsey said he desired to present himself as an example of what Minnesota climate can do for a man who has spent fifty years in it. He is eighty-eight years old.

Prof. David L. Kiehle of Minneapolis gave a history of education in Minnesota.

Farmers' Institute.

Caledonia, Minn., Jan. 24.—The Minnesota State Farmers' institute held a two days' session here, closing yesterday with a splendid corps of instructors. The attendance of farmers was very good, about 400 being present at the opening session. Many subjects were discussed by experts in their lines.

The Legislature

Proceedings of the Week in the . . . . . State Law Mill . . .

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 21. — Representative Jacoby of St. Paul sent up a resolution in the house calling for an investigation of the high prices charged for coal and wood. Representative Wells, Wilkin county, gave notice of debate and the resolution went over.

Mr. Ekman introduced a constitutional amendment to raise the limit of indebtedness of any township or village or other organization borrowing money from the permanent school or university fund, from 10 to 20 per cent. A similar constitutional amendment to make the limit 15 per cent was defeated at the last election.

The following bills were introduced:

Tax on legacies exceeding $5,000; additional judge for Seventh judicial district; regards tests of validity of county organization; amend law relating to "blind pigs;" relating to tender of payment of judgment; abolishing justice courts in cities of over 50,000; additional judge in Fifteenth judicial district; punishing persons defrauding a partner.

In the Senate.

The removal of the state university, the state normal schools and the institutions for the deaf and the blind at Faribault from the management of the state board of control is provided for in a bill introduced by Senator C. M. Buck of Faribault. The measure differs from the house bill in that the senate provision leaves the management of the state public school at Owatonna with the state board of control.

The following bills were introduced:

Fixing terms of court in First judicial district; amend municipal courts' act relating to cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants; regulating fees in municipal courts in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants; prevent removal of railroad passenger depots; regulating elections in townships in which villages are located.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—An amendment to the state constitution to enlarge the legislature's power of taxation for taxing public service corporations, mining companies and incomes and to grant to counties and municipalities local option in raising revenue for local purposes is provided for in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Samuel Lord of Kasson. The measure contains the provisions recommended by the tax commission in its 1902 report.

Senator Wilson introduced a bill relating to the punishment of wife-beaters. It is designed to simplify the existing law and make it easier to punish men who are habitually cruel to their wives.

Other bills introduced were:

Providing for issuing bonds by towns for the purpose of building roads; relating to the expenditure of road and bridge taxes in certain villages; prohibiting counties, towns and municipalities incurring liabilities pending proceedings instituted by state to test validity of organization of such towns, villages or municipalities.

In the House.

The Yoerg resolution for an investigation of passes issued by railroads was called up in the house and by an overwhelming viva voce vote, consideration of it was indefinitely postponed.

The following bills were introduced:

Limiting actions for recovery of estate in dower or by the courtesy; heirship to deceased homestead settlers; authorizing cities to accept property by gift, grant or devise; road and bridge taxes in villages.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—Stipulated premium life insurance companies must make more detailed statements of their business to the state insurance commission, and will not be allowed to change existing contracts without the written consent of the policyholder, if the bill introduced in both branches of the legislature is enacted.

The settlement of disputes over fire insurance losses by a board of arbitrators consisting of three disinterested parties is the provision made in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Henry A. Morgan of Albert Lea.

Bills introduced were:

Relating to revising the fire insurance laws of the state; providing for incorporation, reincorporation, and regulating of life insurance companies on the "stipulated plan"; enlarging powers of certain fire insurance companies; regulating manufacture and sale of vinegar; providing for loaning permanent school and permanent university funds of state to any county school district, village or town; authorizing county commissioners to sell county property.

In the House.

Jacoby's resolution for an investigating committee of nine to pry into the high prices charged for wood and coal, with authority to send for persons and papers, was passed in the house with only one dissenting vote.

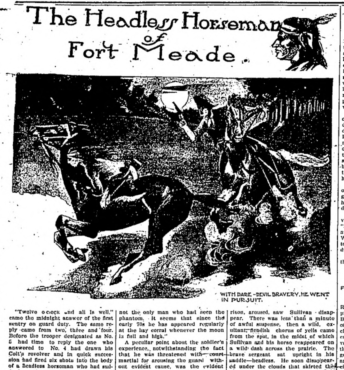
Mr. Rosenwald called up his resolution directing the public accounts committee of the house to investigate and report to the house within five days what retrenchment could be made in the list of employes. A point of order was raised against it which the speaker decided well taken. An appeal from the decision resulted in the chair being sustained.

Bills introduced were:

Refunding to cities amount of taxes and assessments on property exempt on account of gross earnings tax; legalizing mortgage foreclosure certificates of sale; election of town school superintendents; promotion of patriotism in public schools; legalizing mortgage foreclosures in certain cases; maximum charges for telegraph messages within the state.

The Heyward Bros. & Wakefield company's chair factory in Madison street, New York, was damaged by fire to the extent of $60,000.

The Headless Horseman of Fort Meade.



WITH DARE-DEVIL BRAVERY HE WENT IN PURSUIT.

"Twelve o'clock and all is well," came the midnight answer of the first sentry on guard duty. The same reply came from two, three and four. Before the trooper designated as No. 5 had time to reply the one who answered to No. 4 had drawn his Colt's revolver and in quick succession had fired six shots into the body of a headless horseman who had suddenly made his appearance in a furious but noiseless dash through the hay corral which he was guarding. The shots were followed by four more from his carbine. There was a commotion at the garrison. The officer of the day rode up for an explanation, and in a moment or two laughingly swung his horse to a canter and returned to the post.

The trooper's explanation of the strange occurrence is as follows: "It was one of the prettiest nights I ever saw on guard. The moon was high and full. Just as I finished calling out 'Twelve o'clock and all is well,' my broncho came to a sudden stop, extended his forelegs, pricked up his ears, and glared at—well, it startled me as much as it did the horse. Within fifty yards was a white horse with a headless rider, dashing through the corral. The lightning thought came to me that the boys were playing a joke. Joke or no joke, I pulled my revolver and put six chunks of lead in the trunk of that horseman. At that distance I wouldn't take odds from the best shot in the regiment. Whether I hit the man or not, even after I had brought the carbine into play, he dashed along with the same reckless stride that startled me when I first saw him, and disappeared in the woods to the south of the fort. Nobody can make me believe that I was mistaken. He sat as erect on that white horse as any man in our troop. Everything was there but his head; the sergeant's chevrons on his arms were as plain as day. Of course, the firing brought the officer of the guard, and when I told him what I had seen he simply smiled and returned to the post. I know that I had seen a headless horseman, but didn't say a word about it the next morning. I waited for the boys to begin their 'kidding.' Then I found that I was not the only man who had seen the phantom. It seems that since the early 70s he has appeared regularly at the hay corral whenever the moon is full and high."

A peculiar point about the soldier's experience, notwithstanding the fact that he was threatened with court-martial for arousing the guard without evident cause, was the evident seriousness and belief with which his fellow troopers accepted the story. Many of them, while doing sentry duty at post No. 4, just at midnight when the moon was full and high, had seen the headless trooper on the white horse.

The story is told as gospel truth at Fort Meade, dying men tell it as the truth—that the headless trooper who visits the hay corral on the nights of the full moon is the ghost of Sergeant Sullivan, the bravest and most daring Irishman who ever helped to suppress an Indian outbreak. It was just before the memorable massacre of the gallant Custer and his men. Fort Meade was then a frontier post, and the Sioux were raising Cain. Only half of the garrison dared to sleep at a time—the other half watched for redskins. Sergeant Sullivan was on duty at the hay corral. It was known that the strip of woods to the south of the fort was alive with Indians, full of drink and deviltry, welcoming an opportunity to burn the fort and slaughter the handful of Uncle Sam's boys in the garrison; consequently the extra precautions in the guard.

"Twelve o'clock and all is well," rang out the midnight call of the first sentry; then came the replies from sentries two, three and four. Before No. 5 had time to reply Sergeant Sullivan, who was sentry No. 4, had drawn his Colt's revolver and had started a rapid fire at an ugly Sioux whom he saw skulking on his pony at the distant end of the hay corral. With daredevil bravery he went in pursuit of the Indian, and the latter started for the strip of woods. Sullivan meant to make it a race for the life of the Indian. He did not stop to think what was in store for himself. The Indian and the trooper reached the end of the woods the length of a broncho apart. The garrison, aroused, saw Sullivan disappear. There was less than a minute of awful suspense, then a wild, exultant, fiendish chorus of yells came from the spot, in the midst of which Sullivan and his horse reappeared on a wild dash across the prairie. The brave sergeant sat upright in his saddle—headless. He soon disappeared under the clouds that skirted the moonlighted horizon, never to appear again except in the apparition that rushes through the hay corral at midnight when the moon is full.

The life of many a Sioux paid the penalty for the horrible deed that brought the phantom trooper to Fort Meade.

Robert Barr as a Boomer.

Robert Barr, the author, formerly of Detroit, has purchased the London Idler, and in advertising the fact says:

"I have bought the Idler, and I hope everyone else in England will do the same. It will cost you a simple sixpence; I paid a great deal more.

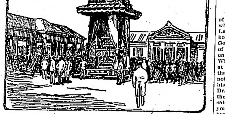
"I have no prejudice against a great name, indeed, if I wished to flaunt a resplendent reputation on the pages of the Idler, all I should have to do would be to write the whole magazine myself. But I am a cautious editor. When formerly connected with this magazine I was under the painful necessity of rejecting three of my own essays in fiction. They were not up to the mark. R. B. the author cannot delude R. B. the editor. At present I am using his literary talents for the writing of my circulars, and if he shows capacity I may print one of his articles in the magazine."

Terse Rebuke for Cowherd.

Since the woman out at Salt Lake City wrote Representative Cowherd of Missouri, inquiring if there were not a law bestowing prizes upon women that give birth to two sets of twins, he has had a letter from a former constituent, now at St. Elizabeth's asylum. This former constituent was injured in Kansas City some months ago, and Mr. Cowherd, out of the kindness of his heart, called to see him at the hospital. When the poor fellow eventually landed in St. Elizabeth's, this city, he wrote Mr. Cowherd requesting him to call. The Kansas City statesman has many duties, and replied that he was unable to go over there for the present.

"God may forget you, but he will never forgive you," was the terse answer that came by the return mail.—Washington Post.

EUROPEAN CREMATED IN SIAM



The First European Cremation in Siam; the Funeral Pyre.

Dr. Peter Gowan, physician to the king of Siam, who died recently, was cremated according to the rites of the Buddhist religion. Dr. Gowan before his death expressed the wish that his body should be cremated. The ceremony attending the cremation was most imposing. The king, as a mark of signal respect for the memory of his late physician, sent a gilded state car, drawn by two black horses, on which the coffin was placed. On arriving at the temple the body was placed on the top of a pyre surrounded by elaborate floral tributes from the ladies of the royal palace, while beneath were wreaths placed both by European and Siamese friends. The chief of the temple then delivered a sermon (in the Siamese language), eulogizing the meritorious services rendered by the deceased. At the conclusion of the Buddhist service, one of the king's brothers, specially deputed on behalf of his majesty, then proceeded to light the pyre, after which most of the company present, European and Siamese, placed sandal sticks and flowers on the pyre. A grand display of fireworks ended the mournful proceedings.

A Democratic King.

The death of Dr. Temple, archbishop of Canterbury, recalls the manner in which Archbishop Sutton, who was at Lambeth place when Dr. Temple was born, received his appointment from George III. One night after the death of Archbishop Moore Dr. Sutton was entertaining some friends at the Windsor deanery. There was a knock at the door and the butler announced that a gentleman outside who would not come in was anxious to see the bishop. Impatient at being disturbed, Dr. Sutton hurried to the door to find the king. "How d'ye do, my lord," said King George; "I've come to tell you that you're archbishop of Canterbury. D'ye accept? Eh? Eh?" The bishop bowed, and "All right," said the king. "You've got a party—I see all their hats there. Go back to them. Good night!"

By an Ancient Philosopher.

Virtue alone is true nobility, therefore the most virtuous are the most noble. A virtuous friend should be esteemed above a vicious relation; for the ties of virtue are more binding than those of blood, and every good person is nearer related to another good person than he can possibly be to any of his immoral relations.—Antisthenes.

GET RID OF LUMBER.

Old-Fashioned Things That the Home May Well Be Without.

Here are a few things that must be banished from a room with pretensions to taste: Papered ceilings; pale, characterless colors; the insipid pinks, blues, violets and greens that the calciminers are addicted to; Nottingham lace curtains; draperies, tidies, etc.; meaningless bows of ribbon tied on various objects; frilled or flounced lamp shades; plush sets; stationary rockers; folding beds; over-mantels; plush frames; sofa cushions adorned with Gibson girls or other pictures.

You may already be burdened with one of these things and be unable to discard it. In that case try to live down the crime, but do not add to it. Last Christmas day Clarissa showed me with a grimace a present from an old family friend. It was a small plaster bust of the worthy man, a fat person with side whiskers. He had his bust modeled and a large number of them cast for Christmas presents to his friends.

"And mother says we must keep that object on our drawing room mantel or good Mr. Worthy's feelings will be hurt," observed my young lady, disdainfully.

The next time I called the bust had vanished, and I inquired about it. "Hush!" said Clarissa, glancing around. "Has mother gone upstairs? Well, then, I gave Hilma a quarter to break it accidentally when she dusted."

That is one way of getting rid of things.—The Pilgrim.

A KEG FULL OF PENNIES.

Fifty Thousand Old Coins Found in Michigan Village.

While tearing down a building in Richland, Mich., which had been occupied for the last forty years by A. D. Barnes as a general store, a keg full of war-time pennies was found in a secluded spot in the basement. The keg contained fully 50,000 coins, their value being about $500 at the time they were issued, which was when the government was using scrip money, and are the same as were put into circulation principally by lumber and railway companies to use as change. They have no intrinsic value at present except for the copper they contain. Those of date 1868 bear on one side a representation of the Stars and Stripes in relief and on the reverse side: "The American Flag Forever; If Anybody Tears It Down Shoot Him on the Spot." A large number of the pennies issued in 1862 bear on one side a portrait of Washington, with the words, "The Union Forever" beneath. On the reverse side are the words, "The Flag of Our Country."

The pennies have been distributed among the kids of the village.—Grand Rapids Herald.

Couldn't Be Bought.

It happened in the south—not the new south, but the old south, where they lived in the same old way.

The enterprising Yankee thought he saw some "opportunities."

"This looks like good land," he commented.

"It is," replied the native, carelessly.

"But the people here don't make the most of it."

"They don't," admitted the native.

"I could make three times as much out of it as they do."

"You could, if you could get it."

"Can't I get it?"

"Well, hardly."

"Not if I pay twice what it's worth to the present owners?"

"You couldn't buy it for ten times what it's worth to them."

"Why not?"

"Stranger," said the native, wearily, "you don't seem to quite get the hang of things here. If they sold they'd have to move away, wouldn't they?"

"Of course."

"Well, they're too lazy to move."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Music That Strains the Clothing.

The standard of musical excellence varies according to differences of taste, nationality and occupation. Mrs. Umblatter, whose husband was the director of a New York orchestra, had a standard of her own, which she did not hesitate to confess to one of her neighbors.

"What operas does your husband like to play best?" asked the visitor, a friendly and well-meaning person.

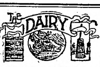
"That I know not," said the wife, busily darning an old shirt, "but this I know. What effer he likes, I like not the Wagner operas. For the sound they are good enough, but for the clothes—ach. He neffer yet comes home from any one of those Wagner operas that he has not torn a place in his poor old shirts. When the cloth is weak and has been often mended one prefers the Italian operas always."

Didn't Object to Sailors' Wives.

In the household of Admiral Dewey recently a laundress was needed, and to the butler, an Englishman, the business of examining the applicants for this position was intrusted. Many applied, but none were chosen. Finally, on the second day, the butler came to Mrs. Dewey in the library.

"I think, madam," he said, "that we have got the right woman at last. She seems a very capable sort of person. She is waiting now for my report. And, madam, I would advise you to engage her, but at the same time I must warn you that she is a sailor's wife, and such persons are apt to have loose morals."

"Engage her, nevertheless," said Mrs. Dewey. "I am a sailor's wife myself."—Washington Times.



New Tests Along Old Lines.

In the Agricultural Department of the Reading College tests were made in the churning of butter which yielded the following results:

Butter churned into small grains contained, when worked, 11.4 per cent of water. If churned till it was in the form of lumps it contained 12.5 per cent of water. It is generally considered that a low water content is desirable; in which case the churning into grains is to be commended. This is the degree of churning now taught by nearly all dairy instructors.

Another result was obtained that might have been expected. Sweet cream when churned showed a greater loss of fat in the churning operation than did the churning of ripened cream. This loss was ascertained by testing the butter-milk. This is a factor to be taken into consideration in the making of sweet cream butter, which at one time threatened to become as popular in this country as it is in some parts of Europe.

Butter (supposedly in granules) was immersed in water at 70 degrees and slightly churned to see if it would absorb water. The result was an increase of 3 per cent of the weight.

A test was also made to ascertain if brine salting would increase the water content over dry salting. In this case it was reported that no increase of water content was shown. This result seems to be contrary to some investigations in Ireland, where it is now generally believed that brine salting increases the water content.

The Butter and Cheese Trade of 1902.

Butter makers have had no occasion to complain of prices during the year just past. Over-supplies in cold storage in January forced some dealers to sell out at little or no margin of profit, but later prices advanced strongly reaching 30 cents in April, the highest price paid for butter in Chicago in several years. The passage of the oleomargarine law sustained the market during May, June and July, but the abundance of feed produced by summer rains increased the supply and prices declined about three cents. In October, November and December, earlier values were restored and extra creamery sold as high as 29 cents per pound, at which figure it now stands. The local demand at Chicago has been the heaviest in years. It is estimated that since March 1st 170,000 more 60-pound tubs of butter were received and marketed than during the same period in 1901, the increase amounting to almost 20 per cent. During the same time New York made a gain of only 1 per cent.

The cheese trade of Chicago for 1902 shows a gain of about 10 per cent. June brought the lowest price of the year, viz.: 9¼ cents for cheddars. Fall brought so brisk a demand that there was no chance for an accumulation of stocks. Very little cheese was exported from this market the supplying of foreign demands being left to New York and Canada.

Feeding Test with Sugar Beet Pulp.

The Michigan station has recently concluded a feeding test to ascertain the value of beet pulp for milk cows. Two lots of four cows each were fed, and the feeding was divided into two periods of six weeks each. It was figured from the results obtained from this test that the 9,403 pounds of beet pulp was only equal to 268 pounds of hay, 172 pounds of bran and 93 pounds of corn meal. There was an increase of 416 pounds in the milk supply when pulp was fed, but there was no increase in the yield of butter fat obtained. This test does not show up very favorably for sugar beet pulp. It can be fed profitably only when very cheaply obtained.

Composition of Sheep's Milk.

There have been numerous analyses made of sheep's milk. The information on this point is increased by some experiments made in France this past year. Altogether 171 samples were analyzed. These were not taken from one flock at one period, but were obtained in six different localities, and they were taken during a period covering three months. The results should therefore be about the average for that region. The milk proved to be very rich, both in fat and in total solids. Ten samples taken in the region of Roquefort showed the following average composition: Solids, 18.9; fat, 6.98; sugar, 5.53; casein, 5.64; ash, 0.96; lime, 0.25; acid, 2.66 per cent.

Milk of Spayed Cows.

A French paper reports some tests made to ascertain the composition of the milk of spayed cows. It was thought that the milk from such cows would prove to be more uniform than the milk from cows more subject to the natural incidents of maternity. This did not prove to be the case, the usual variations occurring as in the case of unspayed cows. On the other hand, there was a very notable increase in the fat content of the milk and of the sugar of milk. The experimenters expressed the belief that this milk would prove especially suited to the use of infants. But this is another theory waiting to be proven.

Absence sometimes makes the heart grow fonder of somebody else.

Importance of Good Seed Corn.

There are nine and a quarter millions of acres in corn in this state. By adding five bushels per acre to the yield of the Iowa cornfields it means an addition to the profits of the Iowa farmers of over $20,000,000 every year. An important factor in the improvement of corn is good seed corn. Good seed is secured only by careful and intelligent selection. The unfavorable conditions for the corn crop this fall, resulting from the early frosts in many portions of Iowa, will make necessary unusual care in the selection of seed corn for next year's crop. Successful breeders agree that the best seed corn is that which possesses the greatest vitality or germinating power, and which will yield the most corn per acre and of the best quality, and therefore prove the most profitable to grow. Good seed corn will increase the yield per acre five to twenty bushels. Hence the importance this year of taking unusual care in selecting and storing the seed corn which is to be used next spring in the fields of Iowa.—Prof. P. G. Holden.

The Egg and Poultry Trade of 1902.

Since April when storage eggs sold as low as 14½ cents per dozen, prices have been good and well sustained. Sixteen cents was freely paid in May and the early part of June. Then there was a drop of half a cent, but later a revival and steady advance until now, at the close of the year, fresh eggs are bringing 26 cents and storage eggs 19½ cents. Fewer eggs have been placed in cold storage than in 1901.

The feature of the poultry season has been the scarcity of fowls and high prices realized, in some cases almost double those of 1901. A cold wet summer interfered with the rearing of young turkeys and not more than 60 per cent of the usual crop was grown. At the close of the year dressed turkeys at wholesale were bringing 17½ to 18 cents, against 9 to 10 cents in 1901, and dressed chickens 10 to 11 cents, against 7½ to 8 cent one year ago. The holiday trade made such heavy drafts on country reserves that light supplies are anticipated, for the balance of the winter.

Spaying Animals.

From Farmers' Review: The practice of spaying females to prevent reproduction is almost abandoned. The early maturing animal scarcely gets old enough for reproduction until it is sent to the market. This was a common practice in earlier days when hogs were allowed to run at large and were kept one or two years before sending them to the market. Rather than run the risk of losing any of the animals by an operation, it is a better method to keep the gilts until seven to nine months old and then sell them. One month of pregnancy is not objectionable in the sow. If allowed to run near time of farrowing, however, the animal, of course, is unfit for market. No animal should be castrated or spayed immediately after weaning. The latter alone tends to check growth and the young animal should become accustomed to doing without its favorite food before its system is shocked by castration.—W. B. Anderson.

The Lunch at the Hog Sale.

A. G. Woodbury: From the "good old times," there has been handed down the custom of free entertainment to man and beast. Select a homelike house. If you want a good sale, don't take your buyers to a cheap hotel. Clean beds and well served meals make the animal, man, in better humor to buy hogs. The strong argument against free hotels, is the expense. This proffer to parties from a distance has rarely been abused with us. Our last bill was $57.00. It came back to us many times. A simple abundant lunch of hot coffee with pure cream and sugar as wanted, served in tin cups; sandwiches not too dry, made of bun, butter and ham and a few of ground beef; pickles; small cakes and pie. This is the best ever served at our sales and gives satisfaction. Big dinners are not necessary.

Inconclusive Tests.

There are some tests made that count for so little that it is doubtful if they should be considered when determining a principle of practice. Such is the report of a test that comes from Australia. The test was made to increase the fund of knowledge on the skimming qualities of the milk of Jerseys, Ayshires and Holsteins. The per cent of fat in the skimmilk was lowest in the case of Jersey milk, and highest in the case of Holstein milk, but, the report adds, "the difference was not marked." Here is the point: There must have been some difference and the fact that "it was not marked" leads one to assume that it was a mere chance that determined the order of superiority.

A grass garden, containing a dozen different kinds of grasses should be planned for the coming year, if the farmer does not know what grasses will do best on his land.

Methods of farm work are undergoing great changes every year. The last ten years has seen a very great overturning of some of the old ideals.

FEAR A MASSACRE

MISSIONARIES ARE LEAVING THE INTERIOR OF THE FLOWERY KINGDOM.

WORSE THAN THE BOXER REVOLT

CAUSE FOR APPREHENSION UNLESS TUNG FUH SIANG IS SUPPRESSED.

MAKE PUH CHUN THE EMPEROR

OUTBREAKS IN VARIOUS PARTS OF CHINA ARE THREATENED.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 27.—The steamers Athenian and Tremont arrived yesterday from the Orient. The steamers bring further news of the revolution at Kansu. One correspondent telegraphs to the Shanghai paper from Lashkow that unless Tung Fuh Siang is suppressed the powers will soon find themselves face to face with a bigger revolt than that of two years ago. Missionaries are already beginning to leave the threatened district. The correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury in Kinsu wires:

"A crisis is imminent, and the officials are powerless to act. The taotai is suppressing news. There is cause for grave apprehension unless Tung Fuh Siang is suppressed."

Messrs. Rydbig and Soderstray, missionaries, who have reached Shanghai from Sinang, having come from the interior because of the threatened revolt, in interviews given to a German daily paper of Shanghai, state that Tung Fuh Siang and intends to lead his army to Sinang, where he will endeavor to make his capital and place Pu Chun, who has been proclaimed emperor, on the throne. Tung himself is enlisting troops, and everything points to the fact that he has government support. Kensu and Shensi are overrun by Tung's spies. All pro-foreign officials are being removed from Sinang.

Is Gaining Ground

The correspondents of the paper also tell of threatened outbreaks on the north and credit Yong Yu, the "real ruler of China," with being behind the movement.

The Canton correspondent of a Hongkong paper states that the rebellion in Kwang Si is more serious than at first supposed. The rebels, 40,000 or 50,000 in number, have taken possession of several villages and towns and Pakiai, Pungsi, Kohsi and Lochow are in their possession. They are now marching into Yunan, armed with modern rifles. The names of their chiefs are Chan and Luk.

The officials at Canton are enlisting soldiers.

STARVED A BABY.

Parents Arrested for Misusing Little Children.

Binghamton, N. Y., Jan. 27. — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cronk, who came to Alexander Hill four years ago from McHenry, Ill., are under arrest for cruelty to their three children. The youngest died Thursday. Officer Wheaton found one child, three years old, chained in a chair and starved until it weighed only twenty pounds. It had been in the chair all its life. The condition of the other two children was pitiable. A fourth child died several weeks ago. The three-year-old prisoner died shortly after being released.

TROOPS FOR ORIENT.

Detachment of Marines Going to the Philippines.

Washington, Jan. 27.—A detachment of marines consisting of 309 men and 16 officers, under command of Maj. George Barnett, left here for the Philippines to relieve men whose terms of foreign duty have expired. The detachment will arrive in San Francisco Jan. 30, and sail Jan. 31 on the transport Thomas.

SCHWAB ALL RIGHT.

At Least the Cable Sent by Him Says So.

New York, Jan. 27.—Oliver Wren, private secretary of President Charles Schwab of the United States Steel corporation said that he had received the following cable dispatch from Mr. Schwab at Palermo, Italy:

"Reports concerning health being worse entirely unfounded. Am better."

Earthquake in Mexico.

Mexico City, Jan. 27. — News has been received here by the minister of the interior of earthquake and volcanic disturbances near Urique. Nantamna mountain has been riven in twain and the atmosphere is filled with volcanic dust.

Big Office Building Damaged.

New York, Jan. 27. — Fire in the thirteen-story office building at 15 Murray street yesterday damaged the structure to the extent of about $75,000. The stock and furniture of a number of tenants was damaged.

Killed in a Fight.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 27. — Mrs. Joseph Brown, colored, was killed last night in a fight with revolvers among negroes. It is said that others were wounded by the fusilade. The police have made several arrests.

AFTER TEMPESTUOUS VOYAGE

Steamer Dawson City Arrives at Port Townsend.

Port Townsend, Wash., Jan. 27. — The steamer Dawson City, eighty-six days from Nome, reached here yesterday under sail after a tempestuous voyage. The entire trip was marked by a succession of accidents and exasperating delays, while the fury of the elements seemed to combine to injure her passage to her destination. Soon after starting south the boilers commenced leaking, with the result that the fresh water supply was consumed. Then fuel began to run short and the vessel was forced to resort to such canvass aboard as could be fashioned into sails. The vessel put into Port Moller for fuel and water, and after remaining two weeks, started again, only to run into fresh storms which drove her from her course. Again fuel ran out, so the Dawson City headed for Dutch Harbor. At this port her sailors deserted and refused to continue the voyage. The run from Dutch Harbor to this port was made in twenty-two days, a very good showing considering the weather and the facilities for handling the vessel. The Dawson City brought no passengers except her owners, Felix Brown of Seattle and his wife.

VALESCO IS BANISHED.

Bolivian Government Gets Rid of Its First Vice President.

La Paz, Bolivia, Jan. 27. — At noon yesterday the first vice president, Col. Valesco, was banished under an executive decree for an indefinite period. A police patrol conducted him to the Peruvian frontier. The reason for this action was that Vice President Valesco, being a leader of the opposition, could not assume the presidency without creating political disturbances. The second vice president, Dr. Anibal Capriles, will assume the presidency when President Pando goes to Acre. During the past week several conferences have taken place between the Brazilian minister and President Pando. The object of these meetings has not been definitely ascertained, but it is believed that Brazil is seeking to dissuade the Bolivian government from proceeding with the military expedition to Acre. It is said that Brazil is offering in exchange the Madeira territory, situated on the Bolivian frontier, with financial facilities for Acre.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL BURNS.

Thirty-Six Patients Are Driven Out Into the Cold.

Biddeford, Me., Jan. 27. — By the burning of the smallpox hospital yesterday thirty-six men, women and children patients were forced to escape in their night clothes. The mercury was several degrees below zero and all suffered terribly from exposure. One man is expected to die. When the fire was discovered some of the patients mattresses and dragged them out on the snow far enough away from the building to be out of danger from the fire and huddled together upon them. Notwithstanding the dread of the disease firemen and police went at the building with a will, but the hospital was burned to the ground.

AMERICAN SHOES POPULAR.

Efforts to Discredit Them in England Prove Wholly Unavailing.

London, Jan. 27.—The invasion of the American shoe is so seriously affecting the English trade that extraordinary methods have been adopted to discredit the yankee article. One shop attracts a crowd by showing a section of an alleged American shoe with a description of the different ways in which it is said to be "faked," such as cardboard sole, a filling of iron, waste and sheep lining, compared with a section of an English boot containing nothing but the finest materials. But the popularity of American shoes is spreading rapidly nevertheless.

BRITISH ARE PLEASED

Over Signing of Treaty to Settle Alaskan Disputes.

London, Jan. 27.—The signatures of the Anglo-American treaty to settle Alaskan disputes at Washington Thursday has given great satisfaction to the English press on the ground that it arrives at a critical moment in the Venezuelan difficulty and is further proof of the uninterrupted friendship existing between Great Britain and the United States. This is the point that is elaborated upon in the articles upon the subject rather than the intrinsic value of the measure concluded. Little doubt is felt that the United States senate will accept the treaty.

CZAR GIVES TO THE BRETONS.

Sends $5,000 to President Loubet as Evidence of His Sympathy.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The czar has sent President Loubet $5,000 for the relief of the Breton fisher folk engaged in the sardine industry, who are suffering severely from the scarcity of fish, as "evidence of my lively and inalienable sympathy for my friend and ally, France." The president, in reply, telegraphed an expression of the profound gratitude of France for this new mark of the czar's friendship.

DRIVEN TO DEATH.

Negro Flees From Bullets Only to Be Drowned.

Owensboro, Ky., Jan. 27.—A mob of 200 negroes surrounded the house in which Policeman Brown had John Jones, a negro. The policeman let Jones out and told him to run for his life. About 100 shots were fired at the fleeing negro, who jumped into Green river and was drowned. Jones, it is alleged, assaulted Ada Talbott, wife of Luther Talbott at Livermore

WOLCOTT GIVES UP

CLIMAX REACHED IN THE COLORADO SENATORIAL FIGHT.

ACCEPTS ELECTION OF TELLER

WOLCOTT WITHDRAWS FROM FIGHT AND WANTS CONTEST DROPPED.

MAKES CHARGES OF TREACHERY

TELLER ELECTED BY FRAUD, BUT EXONERATED FROM BEING A PARTY TO IT.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 27.—The climax in the senatorial fight in Colorado came last night when ex-Senator E. O. Wolcott, the candidate of the so-called "Stalwart" wing of the Republican party, announced his practical withdrawal from any further contest and urged the people of Colorado to accept the situation as it stands by the selection Saturday of Senator Henry M. Teller to succeed himself by the joint session of the Democratic senators and representatives. The announcement was made in a signed statement in which Mr. Wolcott charges certain Republican leaders associated with the anti-Wolcott forces in the Republican ranks with treachery, deliberate and continuous, although he disposes of other of the anti-Wolcott crowd by characterizing the mas "dupes" of the main conspirators.

He refers to the refusal of the anti-Wolcott members of the legislature to unseat the Democratic members from Arapahoe county, and calls it a crime against the Republican party and against justice.

Mr. Wolcott claims that Lieut. Gov. Haggott, when he withdrew from the senate chamber, and with less than a dozen senators whose seats were undisputed, organized another senate, was by his associates in the state government, which support "fell away from him," however. Continuing, Mr. Wolcott said:

"There were three joint sessions of the general assembly. At the last one 51 Democrats voted for Teller. No other joint session had been held and no Republican voted in a joint session. The election of Mr. Teller was tinctured with fraud, first, in the trickery of the adjournment by the Democrats of the house; second, in the arbitrary and fraudulent exclusion of two regularly elected senators."

Speaking of Mr. Teller, the ex-senator says that in no sense was he a party to the frauds above referred to, although he was the beneficiary. He pays the following tribute to the senator-elect:

"He has served Colorado nearly a generation at Washington, and whatever may be our regret that he no longer marches in the ranks of the party which has so highly honored him, every citizen of the state wishes him health and strength and believes that he is single-minded in his devotion to the material interests of the state."

Mr. Wolcott concludes his statement by saying that for himself he has not the slightest sense of personal disappointment, nor does he cherish rancor toward anybody. He declares he will always be found in the ranks of the Republican party of Colorado.

CONGRESS.

Senate Gives Out the Panama Canal Treaty.

Washington, Jan. 26. — The senate late Saturday afternoon held a brief executive session and voted to make public the Panama canal treaty. The letters of transmission of the president and secretary Hay were brief and formal and contained no recommendations.

In the House.

The house worked all day on the agricultural appropriation bill and definitely passed it, with only one amendment—an increase of the appropriation for free seeds from $270,000 to $300,000. The house adjourned until Sunday, when eulogies on the late Representatives De Graffenreid and Shepard of Texas were delivered.

JORDAN BEAT CHILD.

Citizens Think He Caused Little Girl's Death.

Smith Center, Kan., Jan. 27. — Albert Jordan, a wealthy farmer, has been placed in jail at Crystal Plains, near here, charged with the murder of his four-year-old adopted child. While in a rage, Jordan beat the child and later it died. The citizens are excited and there has been talk of mob violence. A coroner's jury is investigating.

SAN DOMINGO CLAIMS.

Settlement of Pending Matters Is Expected.

San Domingo, Republic of Santo Domingo, Jan. 27.—At the request of President Vasquez, United States Minister Powell had a two hours' interview with the chief executive, with the result that it is probable that an arrangement will be made within the next few days for settlement of all the pending American claims.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Overflow From the Wires in a Condensed Form.

FLOOD IN OREGON.

Most Severe Rainstorm Experienced in Ten Years.

Ashland, Or., Jan. 27. — Southern Oregon is in the grip of the most severe rainstorm and flood that has been experienced here in more than ten years. Traffic on the Southern Pacific railroad through the Rogue river valley and across the Siskiyou mountains is demoralized by slides and washouts. Two miles of track near Central Point is rendered unsafe by the raging waters, while slides and washouts have occurred near the summit of the Siskiyous. Powder river threatens to overflow a portion of Baker City.

BIG FIRE IN IRELAND.

Trade of the Town Paralyzed by Destruction of Warehouses and Shops.

Armagh, Ireland, Jan. 27.—A great fire broke out here yesterday and spread so rapidly that the local fire brigade was unable to cope with it, and assistance had to be sent for from Belfast, thirty-five miles distant. Ten of the largest warehouses and shops in the center of the town were destroyed, the damage being estimated at $300,000. The trade of the town is paralyzed by this destruction. The timely removal of a quantity of dynamite from one of the doomed stores averted a worse disaster.

Fireman Fatally Injured.

Lockport, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The building occupied by the Daily Review was destroyed by fire yesterday. Three adjoining buildings were badly damaged. The loss is $35,000. Herman R. Hovey, fireman, was fatally injured.

BLOCKADE OF THE VENEZUELAN COAST MAY BE RAISED THIS WEEK.

Washington, Jan. 27. — A long conference between Minister Bowen and Sir Michael Herbert, the British ambassador, beginning at noon yesterday, following a further conference between Sir Michael, Sig. Mayor des Planchis, the Italian ambassador, and Count Quadt, the German charge d'affaires, indicated diplomatic activity in Washington yesterday over the Venezuelan situation. All negotiators declined to discuss the results of yesterday's meeting, but general statements by them that the situation warrants hope of early relief is significant of what has been accomplished in the last twenty-four hours. By this time the London, Berlin and Rome foreign offices are in possession of Mr. Bowen's third proposition stating the nature of the guarantees he is prepared to offer for Venezuela if his initial request is complied with and the blockade raised at once. Strict reticence is maintained by all the negotiators as to the nature of this guaranty, and until the joint reply of the powers is received this will not be disclosed. Count Quadt has been advised by the German foreign office of the Reasons for the Bombardment of the San Carlos forts. This explanation agrees with that cabled the Associated Press from Berlin. Minister Bowen, and also the state department, are greatly impressed with the attitude of the representatives in Washington of the allies throughout the present negotiations. While acting at all times under instructions from their foreign offices they have expedited matters considerably by their straightforward manner of dealing with Venezuela's representative. Today there will be conferences between all the negotiators, but no definite action is expected regarding the blockade for a day or two.

It is the belief of all the negotiators, as well as the state department, that the answer of the allies to Minister Bowen's proposition Saturday will mean the withdrawal of all the blockading ships, while a refusal to accept the guarantee offered by Mr. Bowen must result in the continuance of the blockade by all three allies, Great Britain, Germany and Italy.

HOSTILITIES CEASE.

German Warships Making Surveys of the Lake Maracaibo Bar.

Caracas, Jan. 27. — The German cruiser Falke and the gunboat Panther are still making surveys of the bar at the entrance of Lake Maracaibo.

The news published at Willemstad, Curacao, to the effect that German traders at Cucuta and San Cristobal have been murdered by Venezuelans is false. The political situation is unchanged. The revolution is losing ground.

GERMANS CALM.

Press Discusses the Bombardment of San Carlos.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—The German press discusses calmly the bombardment of San Carlos. The leading newspapers here and in the provincial cities publish telegrams from New York, reproducing the views held there, and giving the supposed attitude of the United States government in regretting the bombardment, the loss of life it caused and its consequences.

The newspapers take the position that if the United States put itself in the place of Germany it would see that the commander of the Panther, unless the blockade were to become a mere operetta, was obliged to enter the lagoon at Maracaibo, and that the action of the fort and the subsequent cooperation of the Vineta with the Panther was an inevitable consequence.

The newspapers attach some importance to President Castro's throwing ridicule on the blockade, and his remark that he could render the blockade useless through the Maracaibo lagoon.

The foregoing statement is a summary of the editorials published in the National Zeitung, the Post, the Boersen Zeitung and other representative organs.

WRECKED BY A WASHOUT.

Engineer and Fireman Killed and Others Injured.

Portland, Or., Jan. 27.—The Atlantic express over the Oregon Railway and Navigation line was wrecked by a washout two miles east of Bingham Springs in the Blue Mountains. Engineer Patty and Fireman Milligan were killed and several passengers were slightly injured. The engine and tender turned completely over and the engineer and fireman were carried down with it.

PLAYS ON THE "GREEN."

Arthur Stanley Wheeler Dismissed by Faculty of University of Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 26.—As the result of a gambling scandal at the University of Wisconsin, Arthur Stanley Wheeler, an instructor in English, has been dismissed by the faculty, and William Atwater, a junior student, who is the son of a Chicago Congregational minister, has left town. Mr. Wheeler admits that he has frequented gambling resorts in Madison, and has no criticism for the faculty in asking for his resignation. He is a son of Prof. Wheeler of Yale and came to the university last fall as an instructor. He was highly recommended by the authorities at Yale. An investigation by the faculty resulted from the disclosures made by Atwater, who was taking the civic historic course. It is alleged he had been a loser at the gaming table to the extent of $1,100 and made a complaint to the faculty.

MATERIAL SYMPATHY.

Fund for a Girl Who Had Her Left Hand and Left Leg Cut Off.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 27.—A sympathetic citizen of Sioux City started a fund for little Gracie Molden, five years old, who had her left hand and left leg cut off last week while picking up coal in the railroad yards, and now the fund is growing at a wonderful rate. The fund was started with $1 and now it has reached $115. Employes of local business houses have begun to take up collections in the stores and several churches took up collections at their services yesterday for the little sufferer, who is at the hospital. Donations are also coming in from surrounding towns.

GRAVE IN THE SNOW.

Finlander Attempts to Commit Suicide in an Unusual Manner.

Duluth, Jan. 27.—Frans Nankgromberg, a Finlander of some education and who speaks five languages, attempted to commit suicide yesterday under peculiar circumstances. He applied for lodging at the police station Saturday night, and was allowed to go Sunday morning. He had 11 cents and spent 10 cents for chloroform. He walked to one of the residence streets near the normal school, and, after carefully digging a hole in the snow, lay down and inhaled enough of the drug to produce unconsciousness. He was arrested and given medical attention.

WANT FOOTBALL MADE A CRIME.

Asks a $5,000 Fine and Five Years in Prison for All Players.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 27.—Among the freak bills introduced in the state legislature is one which is designed to put a stop to the playing of football in South Dakota. The provisions of the bill are severe, and under it the standing of the football player is even worse than that of a criminal. A player makes himself liable to a fine of $1,000 and five years' imprisonment, while the simple announcing of his intention to play makes him subject to being placed under a heavy bond.

MAY HAVE BEEN MURDERED.

Man Is Found Under Circumstances Indicating Foul Play.

Muscatine, Iowa, Jan. 27. — Martin Woods, recently released from the penitentiary, where he served ten years as an accessory to the blowing up of the homes of John Mahin, E. Kessinger and N. Rosenburger of this city in 1893, was found dead in bed. There are strong indications of foul play. It is said that Woods threatened to tell who his accomplices were in the dynamiting outrage. The blowing up was the result of the active participation of the parties in a prohibition movement at the time.

Death of a Veteran.

Sturgis, S. D., Jan. 27. — Henry H. Williams of this city, aged about sixty-six years, died on the 16th at the soldiers' home at Hot Springs, of heart failure, the result of a general breaking down. Deceased had experienced a varied life. He was a veteran of the Civil war and drew a pension of $8 per month. He went to Montana in 1866 and came to the Black Hills ten years later as one of the pilots on the old six-horse coach.

Money for South Dakota.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 27. — The total bills for special appropriations so far introduced in the present session of the South Dakota legislature amount to $610,309.24, with several of the state institutions not yet heard from, and the militia to yet make known its wants.

Escaped From Jail.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Jan. 27.—Fred Forsyth and Tennis Vanderquist escaped from the county jail at Nevada by digging a tunnel through the floor of the jail to the jail yard. Forsyth escaped from the same jail a year ago.

Bank of Boyd.

Stanley, Wis., Jan. 27.—A new state bank is being organized to start business about Feb. 1 at Boyd, Wis. It will be known as the State Bank of Boyd and will be capitalized at $25,000.

Giant Powder Burns.

Central City, S. D., Jan. 22. — A quantity of giant powder caught fire and was entirely burned in the Dalton tunnel of the Columbus Mining company, near here, without exploding. The miners barely escaped suffocation.

Child's Body Found.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 27.—The body of a newly born infant was found in an empty box car at Lewiston, on the Northwestern road. It is supposed the body was put in either at Tracy or at Waseca.

UP TO THE SENATE

PANAMA CANAL TREATY IS TRANSMITTED BY THE PRESIDENT.

CABINET SATISFIED WITH IT

COLOMBIA AGREED TO ALL POINTS WITH EXCEPTION OF ANNUITY.

COMPROMISED THAT AT $250,000

RATIFICATION EXPECTED WITHOUT ENCOUNTERING SERIOUS OBSTACLES.

Washington, Jan. 26. — Yesterday's meeting of the cabinet was one of the most important held in several weeks. The subjects of great moment were discussed fully, the session continuing for two hours. All the members of the cabinet were present, Secretary Hay leaving his home for the first time in several days to attend the meeting.

He presented a draft of the Panama canal treaty signed Thursday evening and both the president and his associates in the cabinet expressed satisfaction with the results achieved through the long and difficult negotiations.

The treaty is identical with that drawn by the government several months ago and at that time submitted to the Colombian government with the single exception of the amount of annuity to be paid Colombia for the right of way of the canal. This government proposed an annuity of $100,000, while Colombia demanded $650,000. During the several months of negotiations Colombia

Agreed to All Points

in the treaty proposed by the United States with the exception of the annuity. For several days active efforts have been making to secure an agreement on this question, but not until Thursday were they successful. The Colombian government then agreed to accept an annuity of $250,000. This was entirely satisfactory to the president and Secretary Hay, and while it is a larger amount than was offered at first, it is believed by administration officials that the senate undoubtedly will accept the figure named in the treaty, particularly after it is made clear that a lesser amount would deprive Colombia of income which she is now actually receiving.

All other points than this one of money compensation remain as they stood in the original draft of the treaty and are completely satisfactory to the United States government. The United States will have control of the canal as required by the Spooner act. The treaty provides for the payment by the United States to Colombia of $10,000,000 in gold and $250,000 annually thereafter. The lease of a zone six miles wide for 100 years is granted. The United States has the right to send troops to protect its property in case Colombia cannot do so.

Practically in Perpetuity,

It was not Mr. Hay's intention to transmit the signed treaty to the senate yesterday, but after the president and he cabinet discussed it the conclusion was reached that it would be advisable to send it to the senate at the earliest possible moment. The formal letter of transmittal, therefore, was prepared at once and late in the afternoon the treaty was sent to the senate. The president and members of the cabinet are confident that the treaty will be ratified at a reasonably early date without encountering serious opposition. The Venezuelan situation was discussed at length, but it was said by authority that no change in the attitude of the United States is in contemplation at this time.

SMALLPOX IN MINNESOTA.

Weekly Report Shows 153 New Cases in the State.

St. Paul, Jan. 26.—During the week ending Jan. 19 there were 153 new cases of smallpox reported throughout the state. Alexandria reports only 9 new cases, and the total for Douglas county is 21. Hennepin county has 8 cases in Minneapolis and 1 in Hopkins. Those counties reporting the largest number of cases are Douglas, 21; Big Stone, 18; Sibley, 16; Otter Tail, 14; Wright, 12 and Hennepin, 9.

GIVES PRINCE A CHANCE.

King Oscar Will Turn Over Government to Gustaf for a Time.

Stockholm, Jan. 25—King Oscar has decided to temporarily intrust the government of the country to the crown prince, Gustaf, who will take over the regency next week. This action of the king is taken as a result of medical advice. He has abandoned his projected visit to Norway.

State Guardsmen.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 25.—Adjt. Gen. Conklin has commissioned H. J. McCashau of Watertown as quartermaster and William A. Hazel of Aberdeen as adjutant of the Second regiment, state guard.

Robbers Frightened by Boys.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Jan. 25.—Robbers were frightened by boys before they succeeded in entering the Vincent bank in Webster county. The cracksmen had partly broken the door to the bank.

THE WORK OF DEMONS.

Kentucky Democrats Charged With Maltreatin and Abusing Youtsey.

Indianapolis, Jan. 23.—Charles Finley, secretary of state under William S. Taylor, former governor of Kentucky, in a statement in the Indianapolis Journal, reveals the methods used upon Henry E. Youtsey by Kentucky Democrats to force from him a confession implicating Taylor and Finley. Youtsey, Finley says, has always been partially insane and was a fit subject for cruelties which rival in horror those of the Spanish inquisition. While in prison numerous new rules were formulated for his special benefit so that he might be entangled in them and punished. Sunday after Sunday he was kept in his cell on bread and water; ball and chain were attached to him that he might be made ignominious in the eyes of visitors to the jail, among them women friends. While bathing behind a screen a guard would frequently expose him suddenly to the gaze of visitors, members of the legislature, their wives and daughters. He has been flogged, beaten, and miserably maltreated and has been for two years in the power of men who had ceased to be human beings, but demons. Finley declares that any statement wrung from Youtsey is a poor basis, therefore, another demand for the extradition of the man who was honestly elected governor of Kentucky.

SKULL ABNORMALLY THIN.

Strange Argument of Attorney in Manslaughter Case.

Des Moines, Jan. 23.—The case of the state vs. Jack Phillips, convicted of manslaughter, was argued on rehearing before the supreme court yesterday. Phillips, while acting as a special policeman at Eldon, clubbed Clarence B. Debard so severely that he died. I. M. Tomlinson, for the defense, argued that the killing of Debard must be held to have been accidental because the autopsy had shown Debard's skull to be abnormally thin and that if Phillips misjudged the thickness of the skull and inflicted blows that ordinarily would not have caused death to a man he should not be held responsible.

SHORTAGE ALLEGED.

Moorhead Man in Jail Charged With Attempted Arson.

Moorhead, Minn., Jan. 23. — E. L. Buckmaster is in the county jail and will be given a hearing on a charge of attempted arson. It is alleged that Buckmaster attempted to burn an elevator at Kragnes on New Year's night. He had been checked out and laid off, and the grain in the elevator was to be weighed up the following day. An the surety company that furnished Buckmaster's bond was interested in locating him it is thought that the attempt to burn the elevator was to destroy evidence of shortage.

TWELVE MEN DEAD.

Thirteen More Are Injured in a Wreck on the Great Northern.

Leavenworth, Wash., Jan. 23. — Twelve men dead and as many more injured was the result of the rear-end collision that occurred on the Great Northern railroad five miles west of Chiwakum. An extra from Skikomish, loaded with lumber, and three cars containing laborers ran into a rotary snowplow, killing or injuring all of the twenty-five workmen. Ten cars are piled up in a heap, with nine victims of the wreck still underneath. The names of the dead are not obtainable.

$100,000 FIRE.

Large Elevator and Warehouse at McGregor, Iowa, Burned.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Jan. 23. — At 3 o'clock this morning the large grain elevator belonging to the Spencer Grain Company of Minneapolis and the Hunting & Gilchrist warehouses, all located on the river bank at McGregor, Iowa, were totally destroyed by fire, together with 92,700 bushels of grain. Foreman Davidson of the elevator was seriously injured by the explosion of the boiler and may die. Estimated loss $100,000; nearly covered by insurance.

SUICIDE OF A SCOUT.

George E. Van Buren, a Montana Character, Ends His Life.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 23.—George E. Van Buren, a veteran scout, committed suicide at his ranch in Rattle Snake valley, Missoula county, by shooting. Van Buren had been drinking heavily and feared he was going insane. He left his house, saying he could not sleep, bidding his wife "good night, darling." His body was found later. Van Buren was a noted soldier and scout, an old friend and companion of Buffalo Bill.

FIRE IN MILWAUKEE.

Brick Warehouse and Contents Damaged to Extent of $75,000.

Milwaukee, Jan. 23.—Fire early yesterday morning in the brick warehouse of William Grossman & Co. caused a loss to building and contents of about $75,000. The building was owned by Adolph Meinecke and was filled with a stock of groceries, coffee, spices and baking powder belonging to the Grossman firm.

Block and Residence Burned.

Pillager, Minn., Jan. 23. — The Pillager Post block, together with Editor William Pemer's dwelling and contents were burned. No insurance.

Swedish Prince Ill.

Stockholm, Jan. 23.—The court ball usually held on the birthday of King Oscar, which fell on yesterday, was countermanded because of the illness of Prince Eugene, the king's youngest son, who is suffering from a tuberculous hip. His condition is serious.

Killed by a Snowslide.

Logan, Utah, Jan. 23.—Joseph Moser, Jr., and Albert Moser, two young men of Whitney, Idaho, were killed by a snowslide in the Cub river canyon yesterday.

TREATY IS SIGNED

AGREEMENT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF PANAMA CANAL IS CONCLUDED.

SENATE WILL NOW TAKE IT UP

SECRETARY HAY AND COLOMBIA'S REPRESENTATIVE AFFIX SIGNATURES.

COLOMBIA COMES TO HER SENSES

BELIEVED THAT TREATY WILL RECEIVE APPROVAL OF THE SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 24. — The treaty between the United States and Colombia for the construction of the Panama canal by the United States was signed yesterday in this city.

The treaty was signed at Secretary Hay's house, Mr. Hay acting for the United States and Mr. Herran, the charge d'affaires of Colombia, who had been specially given full power to negotiate the treaty, signing in behalf of Colombia. The treaty will have to go to the senate for ratification, and it is believed it will be transmitted to that body to-day. It is stated details of the agreement will not be made public in advance of the transmission of the treaty to the senate.

It is understood that Secretary Hay consulted leading members of the senate from time to time on essential features of the treaty he was negotiating, so that it is believed it will meet the approval of the senate at the present session. Fears had been entertained until this week that Colombia would not be willing to accede to the wishes of the United States in the matter, and that recourse to the Nicaragua canal project might be forced on the government of the United States. But this week events took a more favorable turn and Colombia transmitted instructions and authority to Dr. Herran, its representative here, that made possible a conclusion of the long negotiations.

CRUSADE AGAINST VICE.

All-Night and Sunday Saloons Next Point of Attack.

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 24. — Davenport's crusade against vice inaugurated by Bishop Henry Cosgrove of the Roman Catholic diocese of Davenport resulted in an order from Mayor Becker for the closing of winerooms run in connection with Davenport saloons. Several persons, many of them women, arrested in winerooms, were brought into police court and sentenced to various periods in jail. Bishop Cosgrove, in a statement offered for publication, expressed his satisfaction at the results accomplished, but stated that the movement would not be relaxed before the all-night and all-Sunday saloon has been driven out.

LUCKY DRILLER.

Gets Soft Water and Raises Value of the Old Farm.

Woonsocket, S. D., Jan. 24.—Lafayette Pierce, a farmer living near this place, has one of the most valuable artesian wells in the state. It was recently sunk and flows soft water, something unusual in artesian wells, which, with but few exceptions, flow water which is very hard. The well sunk by Pierce is 375 feet deep and flows 350 barrels each day. The total cost of the well to him was only about $140. It was drilled with a home-made machine. The striking of the well has advanced the price of the farm $1,600.

PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED.

Engineer and Fireman Killed and Twenty Passengers Injured.

Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 24. — The Chicago and St. Paul limited passenger train on the Chicago Great Western railroad, running forty miles an hour, struck a defective frog last night at South Freeport, Ill., and left the rail. The locomotive and the baggage and buffet car rolled over and Engineer S. Sheridan and Fireman G. Grace were killed. Conductor Garr, Baggageman Speed and twenty passengers were injured. None of the injuries is severe.

TWO WOMEN INJURED.

Their Cutter Struck by Fast Passenger Train.

St. Peter, Minn., Jan. 24.—The westbound passenger on the Northwestern struck the sleigh in which Mrs. M. P. Quist, Mrs. A. D. Abraham and Mrs. Ben Currier of New Sweden were coming to town, on the crossing west of the city. Mrs. Currier escaped with a few bruises by jumping, while the other two sustained serious injuries, the extent of which has not yet been ascertained.

THEY HAVE IT IN FOR HIM.

Montana Legislature Turns Down the Governor's Nominee.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 24. — On the ground that he was identified with the Heinze faction in the late campaign, the senate, in executive session, has refused to confirm the nomination of W. R. Stewart, who was appointed judge of the Fifth senatorial district by the governor. The appointment was made to fill the vacancy created by the election of Judge Holway to the supreme bench.

IS MOURNED BY MANY.

Great Crowds Attend the Funeral of Editor Gonzales.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 22. — About 2,000 people attended the funeral of N. G. Gonzales at Trinity Episcopal church at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, packing the galleries, aisles and vestibule and every part of the building. About 300, unable to find standing room within, remained outside, braving a cold, misty rain which froze as it fell. With the exception of the funeral of Gen. Wade Hampton in the same church last April, the assemblage was the largest and most representative seen in South Carolina in the last quarter of a century. Gov. Miles B. McSweeney, Former Gov. J. C. Shepard, now presiding over the state senate in the absence of the lieutenant governor; most of the members of the general assembly and state officers, and scores of leading men from every part of the state were present. All business places in Columbia were closed during the funeral hours. Bishop Ellison Capers of the diocese of South Carolina, assisted by Rev. Churchill Satterlee, rector of Trinity church, and Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. Col. Tillman has made no statement and his friends remain reticent.

MOTORMAN IS PUNISHED.

Accident to President Roosevelt at Pittsfield Now Closed Incident.

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 22.—The distressing incident connected with President Roosevelt's visit to the Berkshire Hills last summer, when his carriage was demolished by an electric car, and his secret service guard, William Craig, killed, was finally closed yesterday in the superior court. The motorman, Euclid Madden, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter, and was sentenced by Judge Pierce to six months in the house of correction and ordered to pay a fine of $500. The conductor of the car, James T. Kelley, who was also indicted, had his case placed on file.

JULIAN RALPH DEAD.

Noted Author and War Correspondent Passes Away.

New York, Jan. 22.—Julian Ralph, author and war correspondent, died last night at his residence here. Dr. Calvin S. May, who attended Mr. Ralph, gave the cause of death as dropsy, complicated with ulcer of the stomach and enlargement of the liver. Mr. Ralph was stricken with a hemorrhage while he was acting as correspondent with the British army during the Boer war. A second hemorrhage occurred at St. Louis immediately after he had received his appointment as Eastern representative of the Louisiana Purchase exposition.

FINE INAUGURAL PARADE.

Pennsylvania's Executive Inducted Into Office.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 22. — Samuel W. Pennypacker yesterday was inaugurated governor of Pennsylvania to succeed William A. Stone. William M. Brown succeeded J. P. S. Gobin as lieutenant governor, and Boies Penrose was elected by the general assembly to succeed himself in the United States senate. The inaugural ceremonies of the governor took place at noon. The inaugural parade was the finest the state capital has ever seen.

SAID HE WAS BOOTH.

Supposed Slayer of Lincoln's Assassin Called to View Suicide's Remains.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 22. — It is announced here that Boston Corbett, the man who was supposed to have shot and killed John Wilkes Booth in a burning Virginia barn after the assassination of President Lincoln, has been summoned from Old Mexico to identify, if possible, the remains of D. E. George, the man who committed suicide at Enid, Okla., and who announced just prior to his death that he was John Wilkes Booth.

KELLY IS GUILTY.

Ex-Member of St. Louis House of Delegates Convicted of Perjury.

St. Louis, Jan. 22.—Charles F. Kelly, member and ex-speaker of the house of delegates, was found guilty of perjury and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Kelly took the reading of the verdict coolly. He was charged with having sworn falsely before the grand jury in his testimony concerning the use of the $75,000 in the suburban railway deal in the house of delegates.

COOPER TO ORIENT.

Will Succeed Admiral Wilder in Command of Asiatic Squadron.

San Francisco, Jan. 22. — Rear Admiral Philip H. Cooper, accompanied by the flag lieutenant, Victor Blue, has arrived here, en route to the Orient. They will sail on the steamer Korea for Manila, where Admiral Cooper will succeed Admiral Wilder as second in command of the Asiatic squadron. Admiral Wilder was detached a few weeks ago on account of sickness.

GREAT DAY FOR THE PLATTS.

Senator From New York and the Connecticut Solon Are Re-Elected.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22. — The two houses of the legislature in separate session yesterday selected Senator Thomas C. Platt to succeed himself as United States senator.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 22.—The general assembly yesterday re-elected Orville N. Platt to serve as United States senator for a fifth term.

Reed Smoot Elected Senator.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 22. — Reed Smoot was yesterday afternoon elected United States senator from Utah to succeed Senator Rawlins. Mr. Smoot's election will be ratified to-day at a joint session of the legislature.

Stone to Succeed Vest.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 22.—Former Gov. William Joel Stone, candidate of the Democratic caucus, received a majority of the votes cast in both houses for the successor of United States Senator Vest.

FARMERS COMBINE

MOVEMENT UNDER WAY TOWARD FORMING A GIGANTIC UNION.

EXPECT TO DO SOME DICTATING

BELIEVE THEY HAVE BEEN TOO LONG THE BUTT OF MONOPOLIES.

SCHEME BEING RAPIDLY PUSHED

WILL HAVE GREAT INFLUENCE IN REGULATING COMMERCIAL EVILS.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—A movement is under way among the farmers of the country toward forming a gigantic union.

All through the West hundreds of farmers' organizations are being formed, and this afternoon a farmers' meeting will be held at Broadlands, Champaign county, Ill., for the purpose of uniting the strength of that region.

They will call the gathering to order at 1 o'clock and preliminary measures will be adopted for the founding of their association, which, it is expected, will spread quickly all over the state. The farmers believe the time has come for them to unite for their own protection.

The trend of everything is toward protection and consolidation. The farmers' business is about the only great occupation that has been left to shift along individually, and the farmers believe that they have too long been the butt of monopolies. It is believed that a farmers' union will be the strongest association in the world—able to dictate absolutely to the trusts that now control the business world—including the agriculturists. It is argued that a hundred farmers joined together for mutual protection, will be a thousand times stronger than the same number of farmers as individuals.

Thoroughly Intrenched,

Throughout Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota the movement toward organizing is being rapidly pushed. In some parts of Illinois unions have been formed.

If the 3,000,000 Western farmers can be brought into one great combination it is argued that they will possess a force which has never been counted on—a force that will have more power to regulate commercial evils than all other influences combined.

The movement toward uniting the various farmers' unions into the national body will soon be started.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES.

Attempt to Settle Senatorial Controversy in Colorado Fails.

Denver, Jan. 26. — Last evening a committee from the Republican state central committee called upon the Democratic senate and asked that a committee be appointed for a conference. A committee was chosen, but when the Republicans made known that their object was to reach a settlement of the senatorial controversy the senators declined to treat with them. It is said that the Republican representatives of the state central committee made a definite proposition that the senate should reinstate one of the two Republican senators unseated a few days ago, thus making the legislature a tie on joint ballot and preventing the election of a United States senator at this session. It is also said that the Democratic senators declined positively to listen to any such proposition. The Republican senators took no action yesterday on the resolution for joint session with the house to vote on United States senator. The Democratic senate has resumed its continuous session in the senate chamber.

REV. DR. SMITH CALLED.

Westminster Chapel, London, Wants the St. Paul Preacher.

St. Paul, Jan. 26. — An associated Press dispatch from London states that Rev. Samuel G. Smith of St. Paul has been invited to fill the pulpit of Westminster chapel, one of the best churches in London. Dr. Smith said last evening that he had received no official invitation from the London church, but he admitted that there was a possibility that the call would come. Dr. Smith will consult the members of his own church should an official call be received before announcing whether he will leave St. Paul.

Render Cattle Immune.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Dr. Leonard Pearson, dean of the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania yesterday announced that experiments had proven that cattle may be rendered immune from tuberculosis by vaccination.

Would Kill His Wife.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., Jan. 26.—August Steinke, attempted to kill his wife last evening by shooting her. The couple have not been living together for several months. He is under arrest and lodged in jail.

Died of Smallpox.

Hudson, Wis., Jan. 26. — Word was received from Gordon, Wis., that William Krienke of this city had died of smallpox in Cornell Bros.' camp near that place on Tuesday. He was a single man.

CONGRESS.

Statehood Bill Occupies the Attention of the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 23. — The statehood bill again occupied the attention of the senate yesterday. During the debate several spirited colloquies occurred in which senators on both sides of the question charged the others with obstructing important legislation.

In the House.

The house yesterday passed 235 private pension bills. They included pensions to the widows of Gen. Franz Sigel at $100 a month; Gen. Francis Negley, at $50, and Rear Admiral Henry Picking at $40.

The Alaska delegate bill was passed. It provides for the representation of the Territory of Alaska in the house by a delegate.

WILL BUILD AT BUFFALO.

Washburn-Crosby Company Will Enter Eastern Field.

Minneapolis, Jan. 26. — The idea which the Washburn-Crosby company has nurtured for years of establishing a branch of its great flour-making business at Buffalo, N. Y., is going to be carried out. J. S. Bell and John Washburn, respectively president and assistant treasurer of the company, have practically bargained for a site for a flour mill, an elevator and warehouse. The several flour mills at Buffalo have a daily capacity of perhaps 3,000 barrels. The mill which the Minneapolis millers will erect will have a capacity of at least double that.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR SITE.

Gov. Van Sant Makes Selection at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 26.—Gov. Van Sant of Minnesota, accompanied by several of the world's fair commissioners from that state, visited the administration building of the world's fair headquarters and spent most of the day there in conference with President Francis, Director of Exhibits Skiff, Director of Works Taylor and a number of the department chiefs, discussing plans for a state exhibit in 1904. In the afternoon Gov. Van Sant selected a site for the state building to be erected on the grounds.

BANK SAFE BLOWN.

Burglars Secure But 28 Cents for Their Trouble.

Eagle Grove, Iowa, Jan. 25. — Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock three bank robbers attempted to wreck the Bank of Vincent, located at Vincent, Iowa, a small town on the Chicago Great Western, ten miles northwest of Fort Dodge. They were frightened away by some parties coming into town before they had completed their work. They used nitro-glycerine to blow up the vault, but only secured 28 cents. The interior of the bank was damaged.

WAR TIME LEADER.

Former Lieutenant Governor of Illinois Is Dead.

Jefferson, Wis., Jan. 26.—Ex-Lieut. Gov. Francis Arnold Hoffman died at his home at Riverside farm early yesterday. The deceased was well known as a writer on agricultural topics, besides being a practical farmer. He was lieutenant governor of Illinois during the war times and afterward moved to Jefferson, where he bought a large tract of land and has ever since resided. A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER XIII.

Startling News.

It was a fortnight since Vance Rothesay had gone, and Ralph Caryl, who had gone to Boston for the day at the same time, had not yet returned.

The next day he had sent a note to his sister, saying he had been detained, but should come the last of the week.

Of course, the encounter at the railroad station had been repeated, with plenty of variations, and some blamed one party, while others differed, and the affair furnished talk for some time.

Julia was angry at her brother that he should have done such a foolish thing, and immensely curious as to why he had done it. She now felt sure he had known Vance Rothesay before.

As the days went by, she became a little anxious, although Dic Burt furnished her with occupation.

She had discovered that he was more than willing to kill time with her, but that, while he was very much fascinated with her, she had not moved him from his allegiance to Kate Purcell. This exasperated her. There was a stubborn fealty in him bad though he was, that many a better man does not possess.

The two were walking along the road one evening at sunset, when they were met by Mr. Purcell, who bore in his manner unmistakable signs of emotion.

"When did you hear from your brother, Miss Caryl?" he ased, endeavoring to speak as usual.

Startled, Julia answered:

"Not for a week; what has happened?"

"There are rumors," began Mr. Purcell; "but you know so little confidence can be placed—"

"I have been very anxious," said Julia, controlling herself all the more easily that she had no great love for her brother.

Still, she was extremely anxious that he should come to light, and carry on his purpose there.

She appeared so calm that Purcell went on:

The body of a man has been found in one of the back marshes in Boston—a man who has been murdered. This statement was made in last night's paper; to-night it is thought the body has been identified."

"It is Ralph!" whispered Julia, her face now entirely colorless and her eyes dilated with horror.

"Some say there is no doubt of it. Still, it is not certain. I thought it might save a great deal of trouble if you could go into the city. I know it is terrible, but eventually you will have to do so. You will be summoned."

"I will go with you, Miss Caryl," said Dick; and we must go directly. There is a train at half-past 8 o'clock. We will take that."

Even in that time, Julia had the thought that this should make a strong link between her and this man. But if Ralph was gone was there any object in detaching Burt from Kate? She would do it for the mere sake of conquering.

Burt, who seldom read the papers, asked, as the three hastened along:

"Does suspicion fasten upon any one?"

"Not as yet."

Julia knew that Ralph had very strange associates, and she thought the deed might have been done in some gambling quarrel.

The 8:30 train carried her and Burt in to Boston, and in that short ride she did not forget to leave the impression upon her companion that she relied upon him—that he could support and comfort her.

Whatever were Dick's feelings he did not reveal them, and Julia felt like dropping for his stolidness.

"Shall we go directly there?" ased Burt, as they stepped from the cars.

"Yes. I cannot endure this uncertainty."

Burt helped her into one of the waiting hacks, gave the order "to the police headquarters," and sat down in silence beside her.

In silence that dismal ride was taken. Julia's mind was principally occupied with the fact that if this was Ralph who had been killed, then she had hope of that fifteen thousand dollars he had promised her. Things always did come out so with her—the prize was always snatched away from her at the moment she was about to grasp it. She was thinking thus while she leaned back in the carriage, apparently overcome by the dreadfulness of the errand on which she was going.

At the police office, where they stopped, they were directed to the place where the body lay.

"Anything new been discovered?" Burt asked, as he turned to leave the room.

"Nothing. But the police are on the track," was the answer.

"As usual," muttered Burt. "But what does that amount to?"

In a few minutes more they reached the house to which they had been directed. It was situated on a quiet back street, and presented outwardly the appearance of a private dwelling.

Julia's face grew whiter, in spite of herself, as Burt went in at the door, and she sat waiting his summons.

But she was very calm when he returned saying:

"This is the place."

She clung to his arm as she went up the steps. The man in the hall stepped forward and asked:

"Are you the sister?"

"Yes," she replied.

"Let me tell you, then, that the face of the man is unrecognizable. It is in such a condition that it is hidden from sight. The body was not found until it had lain a couple of days. You will follow me."

Julia listened to his words with a horror she had not felt before. She felt now like turning and fleeing, and she made a movement backward, saying aloud:

"Oh, I cannot go!"

"Remember that it is a duty you must perform," said the cold, monotonous voice of the official. "It is necessary that you see him."

Julia recalled her vanishing self-possession, and Burt himself could hardly restrain a shudder as the door was flung open, and they followed the man into a long, bare room, the only object visible being several low, flat benches at one end.

"There is but one other body here now,' said the man. "The body of an unknown woman who was drowned, and who has not been identified."

Yes, there were two figures stretched out, motionless, with that dreadful unmovableness that seems to belong only to dead bodies.

The visitors passed by one—the woman, whose marble, upturned face showed none of the troubles of its life.

At the next bench they paused, and Julia, who had thought she could not look at him, found her gaze irresistibly drawn toward the still figure.

There was a cloth over the face, but the neck and hands—the whole form, in its ordinary clothes, was visible.

Neither of the two who had come to see this body felt any doubt as to who had been its tenant in life.

Though not any of the features were visible, yet everything else proclaimed its identity. The tall and slender figure, the soft brown hair, the white hands that had been so well and aristocratically shaped, the form of the finger nails, the cameo ring, with its exquisite head of Zenobia, which Caryl had managed to keep through all his poverty, the clothes—all were the same.

The officer successively called Julia's attention to every detail, and he seemed convinced himself as he listened.

"Do you know if there were any marks upon the body?" he asked.

"No: I never knew of any. But still there might be, and I not know."

"Your mother is living?" was the next question.

"Yes."

"I must request you to telegraph to her, directly, then. There is probably no reasonable doubt that this is your brother's body, but she will settle the question absolutely, I think. And you know it is a question of the utmost importance as regards the case."

The dry, emotionless tone in which the man spoke, as if she were an automaton who had come to view the body, seemed to threaten to set the girl wild.

She was already fearfully excited, and every word he said increased that feeling, which could be read in the hectic spots upon her cheeks and the fierce brightness of her eyes.

"Let us go!" she whispered, clutching at Burt's arm, and when he had put her into the carriage and sat down beside her, she cried:

"I hate that man! He is everything dreadful! He has made even that horrible time more horrible!"

Dick was somewhat shaken himself—he would not have been moved in that way if he had been in the midst of a melee where half a dozen men were killed around him.

But he quickly recovered himself. His nerves were well sheathed, and he found it not at all unpleasant work to soothe his companion into calmness.

He hastily drew the curtain of the carriage, for he did not fancy being seen, as the lights of the streets flashed into the windows. He knew too many people in the city, and he did not care to be questioned concerning his companion.

"Those bodies are to him only blocks of something to be identified, and we were machines that might act in that capacity," he said. "It's custom; I beg, Miss Caryl, that you will try to be strong; that you will bear up."

He was sitting on the seat with her, and he leaned very near her, having half a mind to put his arm around her, but not exactly daring to do so.

Julia's quick penetration told her that he was much more attracted, more moved by her beauty than he had ever been before, and she was not slow to take advantage of it.

If she could only fetter him to her now! To confess the truth, Dick Burt had for her a fascination which no other man had ever been able to exert.

His manly, but rather coarse, beauty half-captivated her, who had not too refined tastes. She had no idea of marrying him, but even when her brother's death removed the first incentive, she was more than ever bound to win his love.

She sat silent for some time after he had spoken. She had been really much moved, but she was rapidly recovering and becoming alive to the opportunities of the occasion. She was very cunning and had all her wits in full activity.

He thought her still overpowered by the scene she had just passed through, while she was only thinking of the most telling manner to adopt with him.

"If I could only give you courage!" he whispered, leaning very close.

She looked up at him. In the dim light she could see how full of enticing fire her eyes were, albeit her face was so pale.

"You are so strong!" she murmured. "What should I have done without you to-night?"

Burt blushed with pleasure. He had no idea of a woman's subtle art; he was quite ready to be intoxicated with a girl who spoke and looked like this.

Still he was stubborn, and he was not going to give up Kate Purcell, though he had forgotten her now.

"I am glad I have been any help to you," he said.

"And I am alone now—Ralph has gone. Oh!" and she shuddered and sobbed.

She did not say she had never seen Ralph much and that she had never cared a fig for him.

Burt's first impulse was to beg her to take him as a life-long companion, but then the thought of Kate came into his mind, and he did not wish to shut himself off from all chance of securing her, so he took refuge in uttering some vehement protestations of being at Julia's command for any service whatever.

Julia was angry as she thought she saw what withheld him from an avowal, and her voice was still tenderer and still more suggestive as he said:

"You are very kind—too kind Do not make my future life more than ever lonely by the memory of your words."

Burt drew her nearer to him, while he uttered some hurried, foolish words which did not mean anything, and then he bent down and kissed her two or three times with fierce passion. She did not resist. For the moment she believed she had secured him. Then she remembered that he must be one of those men who do not consider themselves bound by such things—indeed, she was wise enough to know that "men of honor" do not invariably marry every girl to whom they have murmured passionate words and who they have kissed.

At this moment the carriage drew up at the Old Colony depot, and the door was flung open by the driver.

Julia always thought if she had had five minutes' more time, then she would have heard an offer of marriage from Dick Burt. But she did not have the five minutes, and she was obliged to alight and walk into the depot, not in an enviable frame of mind.

But Dick was secretly relieved a little at the interruption. This woman had for him a kind of intoxication, but he was always conscious of the fear that, if he should ever be led into marrying her, he should eternally regret it.

He was shrewd, though he did not dissect his feelings; for aught he knew, Julia Caryl was all that she now seemed, yet something held him back. Was it loyalty to Kate Purcell? He believed it to be that.

It was nearly eleven o'clock when Julia reached the beach that night, and she retired to bed very much dissatisfied with herself—borne down by a sense of failure that almost overwhelmed that other sense of horror at her brother's fate.

CHAPTER XIV.

Investigation.

Mrs. Caryl had been telegraphed to come directly to Boston to give her evidence regarding the identification. But, instead of her arrival the reply had been sent that Mrs. Caryl was ill—had been somewhat ill for a few days and the news had prostrated her; she could not leave her bed—impossible for her to come.

A summons was sent at the same time to Julia, who was thus compelled to leave the scene of her labors.

She was really indignant with Ralph. He always failed in everything, and even in getting himself killed he must foil all her plans. It was exasperating to have to leave Dick Burt at this time.

She was almost alarmed when she thought seriously of the matter, and found that she was interested in Dick Burt more than she had ever been in any one.

She knew that she was under a kind of infatuation regarding him, but she yielded herself to it, knowing it was dangerous to do so, and that this yielding would bring her only repentance; but this knowledge made no difference.

The thing she had begun only as the fulfillment of a bargain with her brother, she was now impelled to accomplish by the force of a passion that was growing up within her. Not that she even yet thought she would marry Dick, but she must bring him to her feet. Time enough then to decide that question. Mixed with the curious attraction he had for her was the fierce desire to humiliate him.

Had he not kissed her, and without a word of love? And she had permitted it—nay, she could not recall that moment without a pleasure which half frightened but wholly captivated her. Yes, so sure as she lived, Dick Burt should come to her a suppliant.

Such thoughts filled her mind as the cars bore her rapidly away from the shore and toward Carylville.

It was not a very dutiful or affectionate daughter who came home to her sick mother. She had so little affection for Ralph that she wondered why her mother should bemoan him so.

Had he ever brought anything but misfortune upon them?

She asked this pettishly, after listening to the outpourings of her mother's sorrow.

"But he is my son!" was the pathetic reply.

And even Julia held her peace after that.

Meantime action was taken in regard to the murdered man, and it seemed positive that it was Ralph Caryl who had been killed that the investigation began upon that assumption.

A detective came down to Carylville to ask the mother and daughter a few questions.

"Now the whole of his miserable way of life will come out. Oh, it is shameful!" cried Julia. "Everything will be made known; not a decent thing can be said of him. People will say, 'No wonder and no great loss if he was killed. He has left the world just as he lived in it—shamefully!"

In this mood she went down stairs to see the man in plain clothes whose duty is was to "work up the case."

First of all, he must find out something of Ralph Caryl's habits—who had been the young man's acquaintances. As yet it seemed nearly impossible to discover anything. Caryl had been so long absent that all his old acquaintances had lost sight of him. He had taken pains, also, not to have his return known, and had avoided his old haunts and his old chums.

The man who rose on Julia's entering the room was middle-aged, grave-looking, almost ministerial in appearance.

"Miss Julia Caryl?" he said, as he advanced.

(To Be Continued.)

Ironing Without Fire.

Every house had its tinder box, but starting a flame with flint and steel was a tedious process, at the best, and "borrowing fire" was usual among neighbors when one had the chance to lose his over night. I am unable to say how long this custom continued, but I must have been seven or eight years old when a vagabondish neighbor came to our house one morning with his wife's foot stove to get some coals. He was a reckless liar, he would of whom it was said, he "would lie for the fun of it," when the truth would have been much more to his advantage. As we had had our breakfast, my mother said to him:

"Your folks must have slept late this morning, Mr. Davis."

"Bless you, no!" he replied. "We were up at daylight, and my wife has done a large ironing."

I remember with what good-natured effrontery he joined in the laugh against him when my mother said she would like their recipe for doing an ironing without fire.—J. T. Trowbridge in the Atlantic.

A Milk Epidemic.

Of the typhoid epidemic traced to milk, one of the most typical was that at Springfield, Mass., where, in July and August of 1892, 150 cases occurred, concentrated in one of the most beautiful suburban districts of that city. The investigation, by Prof. W. T. Sedgwick, showed that the path of the pestilence was coincident with the route of a certain milkman. It was next discovered that a portion of his product came from a farm where several cases of typhoid fever had occurred during the preceding summer. Shortly before the outbreak of the epidemic the discharges from the patients were spread upon a tobacco field. Manure from the field, carried on the boots of the farm hands, was obvious about and in a well near by. On the bottom of this well, and submerged—in leaky cans—stood the milk to be cooled before it was sent to Springfield. The chain of evidence was thus complete.—C. E. A. Winslow, in the Atlantic.

Is "Chortle" a Dictionary Word?

When Lewis Carroll wrote:

"O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!"
He chortled in his joy,

he doubtless anticipated no perpetuity for his queer verb, any more than for his equally queer and almost as ingenious adjective, frabjous. But chortle tickled the fancy of his readers. It suggested the gurgle of senile exultation, and seemed, like Shakespeare's duke, to "fill a place." Hence, it has had currency enough to get into one large dictionary, and, in time, it may establish itself, as chuckle and giggle have done.—Prof. George L. Kittredge, in Harper's.

Wall Street Safe.

A trio consisting of father, mother and precocious young daughter were craning their necks to see the tops of skyscrapers in Wall and Broad streets when the father exclaimed:

"What a calamity would be witnessed if an earthquake visited the vicinity?"

The precocious child quickly quieted the parent's fears by remarking:

"Wall street is safe from such an event, as their isn't room for those buildings to fall anywhere.—New York Times.

A Pessimist.

The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer during a recent discussion with a friend asked him if he knew the definition of a pessimist.

"Of course," replied his friend, "he is one who is sore on himself and so in general. Is not that your definition?"

"Hardly," replied Dr. Slicer. "A pessimist, in my opinion, is a man who has just left an optimist."—New York Times.

DETECTIVE GIVES SOME POINTERS OF INTEREST.

Usual Custom of Placing Jewels in a Bureau Drawer Is a Bad One—Beneath the Pillow or Mattress the Safest Places.

"While there has been considerable house entering by burglars in this city this winter," said a headquarters detective to a Washington Star reporter, "most of the offenses were committed by youthful amateurs whom we ran down in time. Most of the robberies committed were small, and there has been a very gratifying lessening of crimes which are committed by professional crooks.

"One reason for this is the rule of the Washington police to run out of town suspicious characters and to keep an eye constantly open for the real things who may be known. But there is one point I wish to impress upon our residents as to the disposition of their jewels and valuables, and that is this: Persons who have jewelry of any kind, upon removing it from the person at night are prone to throw it down upon the bureau or upon some similar conspicuous place in the room. They feel, of course, that the valuables are safe from theft as regards the inmates of the house, and as a rule such is the case, but it does not follow that they are safe from the burglar's hands.

"Money and jewels should never be thus carelessly laid aside, even for the night. Some receptacle should be had for them, and neither the jewels nor the receptacle should be placed in a bureau drawer, as is so often the case. The thief banks upon this well-known habit, and knows exactly where to look for the goods he is hunting.

"He also knows that men as a rule carry their rolls of money in their trousers pockets, and these are usually hung close to the bed. So many hauls of money and jewelry are made, the thief escaping undetected, that they ought to make people more careful, but it would appear that such is not the case.

"It is a very easy matter to drop a lady's jewels in a small bag and to place this under the pillow at night, as it is easy for the man of the house to place his wad in the same position. Again, in the event of a fire, scattered jewelry cannot be gathered up from the dressing table where it has been thrown the night before haphazard. A thief can clean out a room of all that is worth stealing while its occupants sleep, but he cannot reach under a pillow or a mattress without awakening the sleepers—in fact, he will not try.

"Some people advocate the small safe or an iron box as a receptacle, but they have never found favor with me, because the visible presence of a safe is a temptation to crack it, an easy and quiet job, as a rule as regards house safes, while a box can be picked up and readily carried off under the thief's arm. There is no place absolutely secure from a good cracksman, except a safe deposit vault, and these we don't have about the house like refrigerators.

"The pillow or mattress protection is the best. In the case of a fire the mind would instantly revert to the hidden valuables, and they could be grabbed easily before flight down the fire escape or the hall staircase."

Some Big Dumb-bells.

Some pretty big dumb-bells are required to exhibit the strength of the modern strong man. A visit to a works where this line of business is specially catered to discovered some remarkable weights. A pair of single-grip dumb-bells with hollow balls weighed thirty-seven pounds each when empty and eighty pounds when filled with shot, which is the usual method of increasing the weight. A half bar bell, or double-grip dumb-bell, weighed 240 pounds, while a full-sized fifteen-inch bar bell for a modern Hercules weighed 600 pounds when fully loaded. The record bell made by this firm was on an order for an eighteen-inch bar which weighed 316 pounds when empty. Besides these giant playthings, the standard sizes, from two pounds and upward, look like those designed for some kindergarten or pigmy race.

Everybody Rose.

A certain preacher of original methods once delivered a sermon on the duty of paying one's debts, and at the close called upon those members of the congregation who faithfully observed this rule to stand up.

Everybody rose, with the exception of a dejected-looking man in a back pew, whom the preacher at once noted.

"I see one brother who is not standing," he said; "what does that mean? Does our brother not pay his debts?"

"It means," said the sad man slowly, "that I try to tell the truth, and also, perhaps"—here he paused and looked round over the congregation—"that I can't get what some of the people about here owe me!"

Witness Was Excused.

Henry N. Spaan, the attorney, was recently cross-questioning a German witness. The point involved was to ascertain what condition the defendant was in from drinking liquor. The witness testified that the man was not drunk.

"Well," exclaimed Mr. Spaan, sharply, "were you ever drunk?"

"No, sir; I never was."

"How many can you drink without getting drunk?" asked the attorney, going up close to the witness.

"Vat you mean, kegs?"

The attorney excused the witness.—Indianapolis News.

UNCLE ISRUL'S FORESIGHT.

Thrifty Yankee Who Kept a Store on a Small Scale.

Uncle Isrul Trask was one of those thrifty Yankees who, as his neighbors averred, would squeeze a dollar "till the eagle on it hollered" before allowing it to leave his pocket. He was a shopkeeper in a small way, but his business had not proved, in the long run, so profitable as his several matrimonial ventures, which had been three times celebrated. Soon after the last event of the kind had been solemnized, one of his intimates rallied him with:

"Well, Uncle Isrul, heard's how you'd bo'n an' done it ag'in. How'd you make out this time? Pooty well, as usual, hey?"

"Well, neighbor," drawled Uncle Isrul, in his soft and saintly way, "I did pooty well, 's may say, pooty well. Ye-es, Hetty's a godly woman, neighbor, a godly woman—with a little prop'ty!"—New York Times.

CAT ROOSTS WITH HENS.

Some Queer Associates on a Farm in Pennsylvania.

Farmer Johnson of Red Rock is the owner of a cat, which from kittenhood, almost, has shown a great fondness for the society of chickens. From the time Tom was half grown it has been no unusual sight to see him at night on the roost with the chickens.

He follows them all day. He betrays no attachment for any one fowl, but associates impartially with all. The chicks have become accustomed to him, and he is evidently regarded as a protector. Tom retains sufficient cat nature to remain curled up snug and warm.

Tom frequently can be seen side by side with a setting hen on one nest, wherein he is content to remain for hours.

Odd Marriage Certificate.

At a wedding at Eastown Baptist church, recently, it was noticed when the certificate of marriage was made out that the name "Thomas" appeared on the document no fewer than nine times. Both the bride and groom were named Thomas, and, of course, their parents, also. The minister's name was Thomas, and the register also signed with the word Thomas. It was, indeed, a gathering of Thomases.—Tit-Bits.

Medical Bubbles.

Doctors have invented a new form of bubble. Neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago are known to be affections of the ends of the nerves, which lie just under the skin of the painful region. It has been discovered that by injecting air under the skin the ends of the nerves are lengthened and the pain relieved. The bubble of air is pressed by the fingers and caused to move about until the parts are relieved. In dislocations, fractures and bruises the same treatment has given relief.—London Globe.

Thought She Would Go Crazy.

Hulls, Ill., Jan. 26th.—"I couldn't sit longer than five minutes in one place. I was always tired, but could not rest or sleep. I couldn't help crying and feeling that something awful was just about to happen. I thought I would go crazy." In this way does Mrs. A. M. Fynh of this place tell of the illness from which she has just recovered.

Mrs. Fynh's case was remarkable. If she fell asleep she would wake up frightened, her mouth dry and her nerves all worked up. She was lonesome and melancholy even when surrounded by loving friends. Her bones ached. She had to make water four or five times every night. She was constipated. She had a voracious appetite, yet was always hungry between meals. She coughed up a great deal of white phlegm.

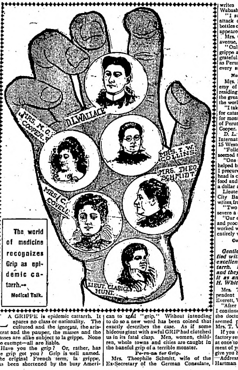
She heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and after using them says:

"By the time I had taken five boxes I was a new woman. I can not tell how much good they did for me. Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills life was such a drag to me. Now I can do my work and feel glad that I have work to do. I am completely restored."

Men are more apt to complain of the ingratitude of friends than of the injustice of enemies.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP.
RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

Congressman Geo. H. White's Case.
A Noted Sculptress Cured.



The world of medicine recognizes Grip as epidemic catarrh.—Medical Talk.

LA GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful GRIP had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Pe-ru-na for Grip.

Mrs. Theophile Schmitt, wife of the Ex-Secretary of the German Consulate, writes the following letter from 3417 Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"I suffered this winter with a severe attack of la grippe. After using three bottles of Peruna I found the grip had disappeared."—Mrs. T. Schmitt.

Mrs. Celeste Covell writes from 219 N. avenue, Aurora, Ill.:

"Only those who have suffered with la grippe and been cured can appreciate how grateful I feel that such a splendid medicine as Peruna has been placed at the door of every suffering person."—Mrs. C. Covell.

Noted Sculptress Cured of Grip.

Mrs. M. C. Cooper, of the Royal Academy of Arts, of London, England, now residing in Washington, D. C., is one of the greatest living sculptors and painters of the world. She says:

"I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh and la grippe. I have suffered for months, and after the use of one bottle of Peruna I am entirely well."—Mrs. M. C. Cooper.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barber's Union, writes from 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Lieutenant Clarice Hunt, of the Salt Lake City Barracks of the Salvation Army, writes from Ogden, Utah:

"Two months ago I was suffering with so severe a cold that I could hardly speak.

"Our captain advised me to try Peruna, and procured a bottle for me, and truly it worked wonders. Within two weeks I was entirely well."—Clarice Hunt.

Congressman White's Letter.

Tarboro, N. C.

Gentlemen:—I am more than satisfied with Peruna and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."—George H. White, Member of Congress.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer Independent Order of Good Templars, of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctors called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned. Peruna cured me."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Senator Thompson has introduced a bill in the legislature to increase the state aid to high schools to $1600 per year.

Dispatches from Washington to the twin city papers are to the effect that Thomas Lowry will be a candidate for United States senator to succeed Moses E. Clapp.

The News today prints the Red Lake bill in full. The bill is a very fair one to both the Indians and the settlers, and gives general satisfaction to all in this section.

All of the citizens of Thief River Falls are and should be equally interested in securing the opening of the Red Lake Indian reservation, and all should pull together until the desired result is accomplished. Any division of the people here may prove disastrious.

Sam Fullerton has discovered that commission men have raised a fund of $200 with which they propose to corrupt the legislature and defeat some of the measures recommended by Mr. Fullerton for the protection of game in the state. The legislators are getting very high priced if it takes this amount to defeat Sam's pet theories.

The Crookston Times is afraid that the auction sale of the Red Lake reservation lands will allow a great portion of the land to get in the hands of speculators. As the bill provides for only 160 acres to be sold to one person and that to be followed by a residence of five years, it is hard to see how speculators will be able to secure any large amount.

If the coming legislature will pass a good roads bill directing road tax to be paid in money as other taxes and then expend where needed on the highways under competent township or county officers, it will earn the gratitude of every one who travels country roads. The present road district and pathmaster system is a miserable failure and no one recognizes this fact more keenly than the farmers.—Waseca Journal Radical.

The scheme of W. F. Street, of Bemidji, to have the state appropriate $200,000 per year for five years for drainage work in Northern Minnesota, will probably not be considered by the legislature this winter, but it will some day, and when that time arrives, a portion of the state that today is almost a wilderness will be the richest agricultural spot in the state. The government land north of the Red lake will never be settled up until it has been drained, yet it is large and fertile enough to support a population of 75,000 people.

Senator Stephens, of Polk county, is preparing a bill which will put all the hail insurance companies in the state out of business. His bill provides for the repeal of the bill under which the present mutual companies are organized, and provides for the assessors in the various townships assessing a state tax on all growing crops for the purpose of creating a hail insurance fund, and any losses by hail to be paid by the state out of this fund. A large per cent of the hail insurance companies doing business in this state have failed and farmers sustaining losses have never secured a cent in payment.

The evident earnestness of President Roosevelt's Intentions in regard to trust legislation is causing uneasiness in certain republican quarters. That the president is seriously in earnest is becoming more apparent every day. He has made known through his attorney general and his friends in congress on just what lines this legislation must be directed. In so doing he disclaims any intention to influence legislation improperly. But he feels that he would be false to his office and to the people if he did not use all legitimate means to secure from this session of congress legislation which will be effective. He has therefore caused the administration plan to be put in concrete from—into the form of a bill. This bill is heralded to the public and on it the president invites discussion.

The are members of the president's party, men of influence and standing in the party councils, who are at present utterly opposed to the presidential trust policy. It is hardly necessary to state that, the most conspicuous of these are in the senate. They dare not oppose Roosevelt openly. They have tried in vain to influence him personally. They are driven to the extremity of circumventing him if possible indirectly.—Washington correspondence in the Minneapolis Journal.

City Drug & Jewelry Store.

Determined to Stop It.

Recently Maj. Scott, Indian agent at Leech Lake, gave an interview to the Minneapolis Tribune regarding the sale of liquor by Walker saloon men to his charges. A Walker paper suggested that the agent had been misquoted, and to this Maj. Scott has fired a whole broadside in reply. He says among other thing.

"This open defiance of authority and utter disregard for law, order or decency, is a disgrace to the community and an insurmountable obstacle to any village which aspires to be anything better than wayside station. Why the property owners of Walker, the people who must make the town if it ever amounts to anything, permit this wholesale crime to exist, this open violation of the law to go unpunished, when they know it is a killing frost to the advancement of the town, I cannot understand. Why they will permit their wives, daughters, mothers and little children to be daily exposed to the evils which this whisky selling to Indians entails is difficult to determine. If neither pride in the village, nor love of law and order would induce them to suppress this public nuisance, it would seem that common decency would demand it."

Breese and Cedar.

Mr. A. A. Peterson, and brother Carl, drove to Thief River today.

We hear that Miss Murphy is soon to start a new building on her farm.

Our popular farmer Mike Williams was in the city today doing some trading.

The interior of the Bolton store has just been remodeled and presents a much improved appearance.

Does it rain in Breese now days? No, its only those crocodile tears because people do tell why she has such severe headaches.

Rumor says the advertised articles were in a young man's pocket all the while. An accident of course, but planned to give his worthy friends a little free advertising.

The many friends of Mrs Andrew Blumquist are pleased to hear of her improved health. The hospital authorities have every hope of an entire recovery in the near future.

A petition for a saloon on Bradford's addition was alledged to be in circulation in Breese last week. It was said to be signed by some of the tough element and a number of minors.

Fred Hogenson, who accidentally shot himself sometime ago, died at his home near Breese, Sunday Jan. 18th. Deceased was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hogenson, and was a remarkably bright young man, a favorite with all who knew him. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

There is soon to be a change in the management. For the letter, of course, since a long suffering public demands something more than has been given. A large number of the prominent citizens are circulating petitions for its removed to the Bolton store. We imagine it will be a revelation to those few who aided the opposition.

The oyster supper and dance held by the M. W. A. at the residence of A. C. Breese was the social event of the winter. A large number of Woodmen were present and the installation of officers for the coming year occupied the early part of the evening. The business of the evening concluded, the dance begun and lasted until the wee small hours. The lodge musicians furnished excellent music, and the lodge ladies an excellent supper. Everyone voted the affair a great success, and Mrs. Breese an ideal hostess.

A. S. Stomes has been appointed postmaster at Rollis, in place of P. O. Bergh, resigned.

Presbyterian services in the east room of the city hall next Sunday both morning and evening.

The Ladies of St. Bernard's society will give a supper in the Odd Fellows hall on Friday evening February 20.

There will be services in the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church next Sunday evening at 7:30. All invited.

The Soo line will make many extensions this year and many are of the opinion that it will build to Thief River Falls.

L. M. Hoag went down to Crookston last week to work in the Bank during the absence of the cashier upon a visit to Iowa.

Some surveyors—supposed to be in the employ of the Great Norther—arrived in the city last week and proceeded north.

John Conery has pneumonia and is a patient at the South Spring hospital. He is improving, and will soon be entirely well.

Fire last Thursday night at Red Lake Falls destroyed the building occupied by Remick & Brunnell's harness shop. They had $1200 insurance.

Dr. Gamble, of this city, and Dr. Dunlap, of Crookston, performed an operation upon Ed Haugset at the South Spring hospital Tuesday.

The Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church will meet next Thursday Feb. 12th with Mrs. A. B. Helgeson. All are cordially invited.

Ex-Auditor Adam Zeh has been appointed deputy clerk of court and besides his official duties he will engage in a general real estate and insurance business.

Chas. A. Brink, one of the proprietors of Hotel Markham, at St. Hilaire, has bought a saloon in Bemidji which he has already entered into possession of.

Closing out sale of lots in Meehan's addition. If you want bargains in city property talk to James Meehan, Jr., K. M. Hansen, Alex Sweeas or M. C. Harlow.

The social meeting of the Young Peoples society of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church will meet with Mrs. A. B. Helgeson Friday evening the 13th of Feb. at 8 o'clock.

The treasurer of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church in this city, Mr. Hans Langseth, has sent $104.08 to the suffering in Finland from the congregation and others that have contributed.

Best kerosene oil for 12c per gallon at Central Mercantile Co.

Gov. Van Sant has made an appeal for aid for the famine-sufferers of Sweden, Norway and Finland. P. O. Hegglund, of Rocksbury, has been appointed to collect funds in Red Lake country.

Postmaster Richardson last week received a copy of the Manila Times, a daily paper published in the Philippines. It was sent to him by Lieut. Sam Bardelson, a former resident of this city.

The coldest weather in January, according to F. J. Stebbins, U. S. observer, was on last Friday, Jan. 30, when it was 31½ below zero. The warmest day was on Jan. 25, when it registered 34 above zero.

James Meehan has settled with the insurance companies for the loss he sustained by the burning of his buildings recently. The insurance companies have given him $589, which is very satisfactory to all concerned.

The people who insist that there must be snow to produce a good crop have nothing to complain of now. The state is covered from end to end with the white blanket, not very thick, but thick enough to be called snow.

The members of the Thief River Falls bowling team went to St. Hilaire last night and played a game with the team of that place. The local team was composed of Messrs. Mossefin, Harris, Durbin, Langseth and Fuller.

The ground hog came out of his hole Monday after a nap that began last November and saw his shadow, which means that there will be six weeks more of cold weather before spring—if you believe in the ground hog.

A meeting of the Swedish Mission congregation will be held next Sunday, Feb. 8, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 7:30 in the evening in the Swedish Mission church on the East Side. Rev. A. Tornell will conduct the services.

James Flett is giving a special course of lectures in the high school here. Mr. Flett is a gold medalist of a Canadian University, a fellow of the Royal College of Preceptors of London, England, and probably one of the best scholars in Northern Minnesota.

The Thief River Falls Fire Department will give their annual grand ball on Friday evening, Feb. 20, this year. This is the last Friday before Lent and this fact taken in connection with the reputation that the firemen enjoy as entertainers insures that they will have a successful ball.

Ole Peterson, who is hunting wolves this winter in the vicinity of Germantown, was in the city the first of the week. He reports that he has already killed eight, and expects to shoot many more before the snow goes off. The wolves hate Ole worse than the Devil does holy water.

We are painters. There are others who call themselves decorative artists, or other high-sounding titles. We are painters, not wood twisters, and our aim is to paint well—as well as it can be painted. If you want that kind of painting consult the Jaranson Painting Co., shop east end of bridge.

Owing to the illness of Rev. Saterlee, pastor of the M. E. church at Crookston, Rev. Flesher by arrangements of the presiding elder will peach there next Sunday. Rev. Butler, pastor of the M. E. church at St. Hilaire, will preach for the pastor here Sunday at 11 a. m. and Rev. Dr. Dodds at 7:30 p. m. Communion services will follow.

The Great Northern is making experiments which contemplate nothing less than the abolition of the telegraph as a means of communication on the railroads, and this not alone for short distances, but through the whole system. As a substitute, it is proposed to use the telephone, making the steel rails do service as a medium of communication. The rails are expected to take the place of wires as conductors.

The High School Literary association is making arrangements for a lecture and entertainment course. There will be four numbers in the course, the last one being a home talent in the form of a musical. The first number of the series will be by Dr. S. Paige Johnson under the management of the Columbian Lyceum Bureau of St. Paul. Watch for the date. This course is given principally for good entertainment it will afford, and incidentally for the benefit of the high school piano fund.

There will be a meeting in the Copp school house tomorrow evening of the farmers living in that vicinity. W. H. Blunt, of the Thief River Falls creamery, will address the meeting on dairying, and Prof. James A. Wilson will tell those present how to improve the country schools. There is a disposition upon the part of some living in that district to join their district with the one in this city. If this was accomplished the Thief River Falls district would be a very large and wealthy district.

The Municipal League held a meeting Monday evening, although little business of importance was transacted. A remonstrance was sent to Representative Simons against the bill introduced by him known as H. F. 114. The committee appointed to investigate city affairs reported progress and was extended more time An amendment was made to the constitution, which provides that the constitution cannot be amended except by a two-thirds vote, and the president of the association was asked to secure the city hall in which to hold future meetings.

Rev. B. Luttman, of Thief River Falls, conducted services in the German Lutheran church at Comstock on Sunday last. Rev. Luttman also preaches in the German congregations in Excell, Holt, Germantown and other places, a large field to cover, too much in fact for one man. He hopes that the Comstock congregation, with the aid of other congregations that can be established in the western part of the country will be able before long to support a minister of their own. Rev. Luttman is an earnest and indefatigable worker in the Lord's vineyard.—Warren Sheaf.

Resume of the News.

Fresh Reliable Brief

From the Capital.

Senator Clapp has reported to the senate the Elkins bill agreed on by the interstate commerce committee.

Senator Penrose introduced a bill authorizing the purchase of the farm at Appomattox on which the surrender of Gen. Lee took place.

The appointment of William A. Richards of Wyoming as commissioner of the land office, to succeed Binger Herman, was confirmed by the senate.

The plans for the enlargement of the Hope Indian school at Springfield, S. D., have been completed and the work will be placed on the market at once.

The bill providing for the construction of a revenue cutter to be stationed at Honolulu, Hawaii, was favorably reported to the house by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

The Brazilian minister and the Bolivian charge d'affaires in Washington called separately on Secretary Hay to acquaint him with the position of their respective governments in the dispute over the possession of the territory of Acre. It appears that the situation is really critical.

Casualties.

Hunter Taylor, a wealthy young stockman of Douglas, Kan., was killed by his mule team running away.

Hundreds of persons witnessed the death from the center of the new East River bridge in New York of Patrick McDermott, an iron worker. McDermott fell 156 feet.

By the burning of the smallpox hospital at Biddleford, Me., thirty-six patients were forced to escape in their night clothes. The mercury was several degrees below zero and all suffered. One man is expected to die.

The department store of A. Lederer & Co., occupying nearly the entire block between Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets on Halsted street, Chicago, was damaged by fire to the extent of $90,000. Nearly the entire loss was on the stock.

Personal Mention.

Wilhelm Jorden the poet died suddenly at Baden-Baden.

Judge McDougall of Toronto, Ont., one of Canada's best known judges, was found dead in bed.

Judge James Fentress, for twenty-five years connected with the legal department of the Illinois Central railway, died at his home in Chicago, after a week's illness of pneumonia.

Boston's famous sculptor, painter and musician, Cyrus Cobb, is dead at the age of sixty-eight. Cyrus and his brother Darius, who survives him, were twin sons of Rev. Dr. Sylvanus Cobb.

Arthur Kirkpatrick, for a quarter of a century a leading banker and financier of Northern Missouri and quite wealthy, died at his home at St. Joseph, Mo. Rheumatism of the heart was the cause of death.

Mrs. Clara Horton Fuller, a pianist of some prominence in the musical world, was found dead in her apartments in the Metropolitan hotel, New York. Indications were that death had resulted from a hemorrhage twenty-four hours before the body was discovered.

Notes From Abroad.

The American tobacco trust has arranged with the porte to secure nearly the whole of the output of Turkish tobacco.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, wife of the American minister to Belgium, has captured King Edward by her ability as a cake walker.

Count Boni de Castellane has been re-chosen as deputy at the election made necessary by the invalidation of his former selection.

Prof. Tizzoni of the Bologna university has announced to the Royal Academy of Sciences the discovery of a serum to combat pneumonia.

Two of the largest warehouses and shops in the center of Armagh, Ireland, were destroyed by fire, the damage being estimated at $300,000.

The French Transatlantic company has made a working agreement with the American and other allied lines relative to transatlantic passenger rates.

The invasion of the American shoe is so seriously affecting the English trade that extraordinary methods have been adopted to discredit the Yankee article.

Lord Douro, eldest son of the duke of Wellington, declares he will marry a Gaiety girl, and his brother officers are trying to "rag" him from the regiment. An investigation has been ordered by the king.

The first vice president of Bolivia, Col. Valesco, has been banished for an indefinite period. The reason for this action was that he, being a leader of the opposition, could not assume the presidency without creating political disturbances. The second vice president, Dr. Anibal Capriles, will assume the presidency when President Pando goes to Acre.

The Bank of England authorities are at last beginning to realize that, apart from the watermark, the bank's notes are more easily forged than almost any in circulation. So they are seriously thinking of making some changes in them.

The construction is to be undertaken of a submarine boat, the dimensions of which will surpass those of any boat built or building in France. Her displacement when submerged will be 350 tons. She will be 49 meters long, 4 1-5 meters broad and will have a draft of 2¾ meters.

Sin and Sinners.

For thrashing his wife because she did not instantly join in family prayer, John Newdick of Kokomo, Ind., was fined in the mayor's court.

John Thomas, a negro, who shot and killed Sheriff Benjamin F. Ory of St. Charles parish, near New Orleans, was killed by a mob and his body burned.

Martin Howe of Chicago, who forfeited his bond while awaiting a retrial for the murder of James F. Harrity, Sept. 8, 1901, was arrested at Shawnee, an obscure village in Oklahoma.

Detectives made a raid on a loft in Prince street, New York, arrested Hyman Filarsky, the reported head of a fur company, and seized fur garments to the value of $40,000. It is claimed that all were stolen.

Indignation at alleged advances made by George W. Atkinson, a roomer, led to a revolver duel between Mrs. Anna Biggs and Atkinson in Chicago. The latter failed to score, but was himself shot in the shoulder slightly.

In two fights between posses and men suspected of being the robbers who looted the Bank of Union, Mo., Charles J. Schumacher of St. Louis, a detective, was instantly killed and a robber was shot from his horse, but escaped.

Because an acquaintance told him that his wife, who had been dead nine years, had been unfaithful to him fifteen years ago, Joseph Staubel of Philadelphia murdered John Blair, fatally shot Anthony Seitz and then committed suicide.

Lieut. Ludwig Barth, aged thirty-five years, a former officer of the German navy who was attached to the gunboat Irene in Manila bay during the time Admiral Dewey commanded the American fleet there, committed suicide at Knoxville, Tenn., by shooting.

A bride of three months admitted to Police Captain Dohler of Cleveland that she had assisted her husband in robbing twenty apartment houses. The woman is the daughter of a well-to-do family. Her husband denied that his wife had helped him.

Twenty students from the university called upon Editor Parker B. Pratt of the Salt Lake City Chronicle with the intention of kidnapping him. S. J. Cummings, his roommate, answered the call at the door and was immediately seized, chloroformed, and left unconscious upon the street.

A mob of about 200 negroes at Owensboro, Ky., surrounded the house in which Policeman Brown had John Jones, a negro. The policeman told Jones to run for his life. Shots were fired at the fleeing negro, who jumped into Green river and was drowned. Jones, it is alleged, assaulted a woman.

Philip Baer, city librarian, and Walter F. Sawyer, Nathan Springer and Moses Springer were arrested in New York by detectives from the district attorney's office on charges of attempted subornation of perjury in connection with an alleged swindling scheme through which enormous sums are believed to have been lost by the department of taxes.

Additional evidence that a band of Italian swindlers has systematically defrauded New York life insurance companies out of substantial sums by substituting bodies was discovered recently when representatives of several insurance companies opened a grave in Calvary cemetery, Long Island City, supposed to contain the body of a young Italian, and found that of an elderly, emaciated man.

Week's Doings in the State Legislature. . . .

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 27.—Dr. J. H. Dorsey of McLeod county sent up three bills designed to enforce some new methods for collecting taxes from corporations, foreign and domestic. The most important document of the three is intended to impose and collect taxes from corporations having their principal place of business outside of the state.

Bills introduced were:

Manner of building town roads; legalizing city expenditures for opening Indian reservations; assessment of taxation of foreign corporations; constitutional amendment relating to taxation; forfeiture of Hastings & Dakota lands repealed; making more than 8 per cent interest usury.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—A third tax code amendment was introduced in the senate by Senator J. T. Alley of Buffalo. Senator Alley's measure provides for a "wide open constitution," giving the legislature full power to tax whatever it choses, with minor conditions.

Senator J. F. Calhoun of Minneapolis introduced a bill to render effective the law which prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors and students. The measure aims to prohibit the use of subterfuge and sneaking methods in evading the law.

Bills introduced were:

Relating to cemeteries and crematories; relating to sale, gift, barter or furnishing of liquor to minors; vacation of public grounds, streets, alleys or highways within cities in this state; to amend General Laws relating to county roads; declaring all rural free delivery routes public highways four rods wide throughout their entire length; authorizing state auditor to deed real estate which has become property of state by escheat.

In the House.

Though the house had a comparatively tame session, most of the time being taken up in roll calls, the house judiciary committee indulged in considerable oratory afterward in regard to proposed short form of taxation clause in the constitution.

Five minor bills were passed.

Bills introduced were:

Amending elevator operator's license law; amending general election law; amending primary election law; payment of costs in murder trials of non-residents; beet sugar bounty; restricting sale of preparations of alcohol; relating to false advertising of preparations as not intoxicating or free from alcohol.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The use of unsanitary instruments, cosmetics, supplies and furnishings in barber shops is made a misdemeanor in a bill introduced by Senator George P. Wilson. The measure is an amendment to the present law which provides for the examination and licensing of barbers.

A second bill to relieve cities from the predicament of not being able to accept library donations from Andrew Carnegie was introduced by Senator A. W. Ferris. Bills introduced were:

Amending law relating to sale and lease of mineral lands in Minnesota; providing for the bonding of counties to build jails; amending probate court's power to appoint special guardians; amending General Laws relating to public schools; amending law preventing spread of infectious diseases; establishing an experimental fruit tree station; providing for creation of state art society, and prescribing its manner of appointment, powers and duties.

In the House.

Representative Dowling introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $2,000 for the relief of Mrs. Annie Nelson, who gave birth to triplets some time ago, a feat which so startled her husband that he at once deserted her.

The speaker named the fuel famine investigating committee.

Bills introduced were:

Amending laws relating to the serving of notice of cancellation of the purchase or sale of real estate; providing for the election of vice chairman of county commissioners; providing for landlord's lien on crops on ance of real estate by wife direct to husband; providing for the deposit of wills during the lifetime of the maker in the office of the judge of probate; providing for the appointment of referees in disputed insurance cases.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—A simple but impressive commemoration of the birthday of William McKinley was held in the house yesterday. The members of the house, standing, sang the first verse of the hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee,"

Rev. F. M. Rule, who acted as chaplain of the house, before making his prayer, suggested singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee" by the house, and in his prayer referred to the former president's birthday.

Representative W. I. Nolan of Minneapolis introduced a bill providing for juvenile criminal courts and the isolation of persons less than nineteen years old, charged with or convicted of crime. The bill provides for secret trial for children and prohibits newspapers from printing accounts of the trials.

Other bills introduced were:

Nomination of independent candidates; changing date of primary election; forbidding compulsory vaccination.

In the Senate.

Voters will not have to declare party affiliation at primary elections if a bill introduced by Senator L. O. Thorpe is passed. The measure provides that all tickets be printed on the same ballot. The voter will be required to put an X at the name of the party he wishes to support; otherwise his vote will not be counted. He must also select candidates from the column headed by the party he affiliates with; votes cast for other candidates will not be counted.

Bills introduced:

To prevent unnecessary delay in litigation, and to abate actions in certain cases; to amend section 6760 of General Statutes of 1894, relating to larceny; providing for maintenance of law libraries in counties having over 200,000 population; to legalize certain corporations organized under chapter 186 of General Laws of 1885, and making their certificates of incorporation legal.

Senate Approves Appropriation for the Capitol.

St. Paul, Jan. 31.—The bill continuing the state levy of 2 mills until $1,500,000 more has been raised for the completion of the new capitol, was passed in the senate, not a vote being registered against it.

Wilson's free-trade-with-Canada resolution was killed after long debate.

Bills introduced:

Amending General Laws of 1885 relating to incorporation of villages and their powers and duties; to appropriate money for buildings and equipment for department of agriculture of University of Minnesota; to compel notaries to attest by certificates of acknowledgment of any instrument required by law to be acknowledged; providing for compulsory plowing of ground infested by eggs of grasshoppers.

In the House.

The house worked a full two hours longer than usual, and then took a recess till Monday.

Mr. Bardwell had two bills relating to corporations. By one of them the public examiner may examine their stocks and, if their stock is found impaired, may allow the stockholders to submit to assessment to satisfy the deficiency, if they desire. But if that is not done within ninety days, he must ask for a receiver.

The other bill declares that corporation stock is personal property and may be transferred only by a proper entry on the company's books.

Two bills to permit savings banks to invest their funds in railroad bonds and railroad first mortgage securities, were sent up.

Twenty bills were introduced. Among them were:

Prohibiting adulteration of fruit syrups; providing for sixty-three boiler inspectors; creating another fish hatchery at Glenwood; Haugland's proposed tax code.

The senate reciprocity resolution was adopted.

FORTUNE IS WAITING.

Old-Time Black Hills Fighter Can Claim Estate.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 2. — If Boone May, the once famous Black Hills express messenger, is alive he may become heir to an estate consisting of considerable real and mining property and a snug sum of money in the bank. This property was left by William May, who died in the Black Hills three years ago, and who is said to have been a brother of Boone May. Boone May was the most noted of all the messengers who accompanied the treasure coach on its trips out of the Black Hills. He was known for his fearlessness and for the deadly execution he exhibited in the numerous encounters with the road agents that infested the region. He left here before the advent of railroads, and the last heard of him by his Deadwood friends was in South America. He was said to have shot and killed an officer of the Peruvian army, and to evade the wrath of the Peruvians, went to Brazil and thence to Venezuela.

WOLVES ARE BUSY.

Farmers Report Frequent Attacks Upon Live Stock.

Fairfax, S. D., Feb. 2.—Wolves are becoming very bold in some parts of Gregory county. A great many colts and calves have been killed by the animals this winter. Apparently encouraged by the ease with which they run down and kill calves and colts, some of the wolves do not hesitate to attack full grown horses. Herman Anderson reports that a pack attacked one of his horses, ran it into deep snow and then chewed and tore at the animal's throat until it died. A wolf hunt may be organized to rid the county so far as possible of the pests.

CRAZY WANDERER

Lands at Grand Forks Without Known Friends.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 2. — The authorities here are trying to locate the friends of Otto C. Cizek, who arrived here yesterday from the West in a demented condition. He is well dressed and well equipped with transportation, and is supposed to be on his way from Seattle to Detroit. He carried cards which indicated that he is an employe of the Citizens' Light and Power company of Seattle, and papers in his grip show that he has been at Denver and Detroit, Mich.

Farmer Fatally Injured.

Sumner, Iowa, Feb. 2. — Henry Kliner, a farmer, was fatally injured in a runaway. One lower limb was mashed to a pulp by the wheels passing over it.

Acquitted of Assault.

La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 2. — Charles Labelle, charged with assaulting sixteen-year-old Agnes Funger on July 3 last, was found not guilty.

A Daughter of the Beach

CHAPTER XIV—(Continued.)

She bowed, and he went on to say, in a voice possessing very little inflection:

"If I did not come here in the interest of the law, I should beg your pardon for intruding thus upon you. The preliminary survey that is always taken directly a murder is suspected has been peculiarly lacking in anything that can enlighten us. We are, in fact, as much in the dark as it is possible to be. Plainly, a man has been killed—that's all we know. I hope you will bear in mind that it is your duty to answer me fully, and that any prevarication or concealment, however slight, might mislead in a way fatal to the search for the guilty person or persons."

Again Julia bowed, this time very coldly.

"Here's a hard case to examine," thought the man, looking at the beautiful face before him as if he would like to read its secret.

He knew what he should learn here only what she chose to have him know of her brother's life.

The detective who had been put upon the case began to think he would find it a more tangled one than he had at first expected. He saw directly that this woman had something to conceal, and he wished to know everything.

He sat silent for a few minutes, not, apparently, looking at her, but still seeing her. That told him that she was not mourning very severely for her brother.

"Did your brother live here?" he asked, at last.

"No," replied Julia.

"Since when?"

"Not for many years—not since he became a man."

"He was wealthy?"

"My father was."

"But your brother was not?"

"Much of the property was lost during my father's life, and Ralph soon made away with the rest—that is, nearly all of it."

"Did your brother ever enter any business?"

"Yes."

Julia was by no means expansive; she replied, and that was nearly all. The man felt impatient enough with her to have boxed her ears or have shaken her well.

He must get at something that would give him some correct idea of Ralph Caryl's life. The one who would be in a position to know the young man's associates, friends and habits.

"Where?" he next asked.

"In Boston."

"In what kind of business?"

"In a commission house."

"What firm?"

"Really I do not remember."

The detective looked calm, but it was with difficulty that he restrained a movement of impatience.

However, he could find out the firm, but this was the easiest way of doing it, if only she chose to tell him.

"Do you happen to remember how long ago it was that he entered business?"

"About three years ago, I should think."

"Did he work in that way long?"

"Only a few months."

"And since then?"

"When he left that firm he went to Europe. He has been there ever since until he returned, a short time ago."

"Do you know why he left?"

"No. I never knew much of my brother's affairs."

"Apparently not, indeed. Still, you have been with him at the shore somewhere of late, have you not?"

Now Julia inwardly trembled. She did not intend, of course, that this man should discover anything of the real reason that had sent him to the shore, but she was almost convinced he would probe all her secrets; his pale-gray eyes never left her face; but there was not the slightest expression in them. She began to writhe under their gaze, though she concealed her fear.

"Yes," was the guarded reply. "When he came back from Europe, he came home here, and asked me to spend a few weeks at the shore with him."

"And yet, from your words, I gather that you are far from intimate with your brother—that you had very little to do with him. Was it not rather peculiar that he should invite you thus?"

"Perhaps it was. I only know that he did it, and I went."

"To what place?"

Julia told it, and the man made a note of it.

"Did he go merely for pleasure, or had he some other object?"

"I don't know; apparently for pleasure."

The detective had not intended there should be a hostile feeling during these questions; but Julia had introduced that element. He had come to the place, expecting to be aided in his inquiries, rather than obstructed. It was almost always the case that the friends of a murdered person wished the guilty brought to punishment.

Evidently this woman, for some reason, would rather let the matter rest. Investigation, plainly, would not be pleasant to this family. He must find out something of Caryl's antecedents, or, in the darkness of the case now he could not go to work.

But obstacles were an incentive to Henry Loud. They spurred him on to greater action.

"Then you know of no particular thing that called him to the shore?"

Julia looked full at her questioner, and lied.

"No," she said.

"And you don't know why he went to Boston that day?"

"No; in fact, I did not know he had gone until afterward. If you have observed people, sir, you will know that brothers—even affectionate ones—do not always tell their sisters where they go, or why."

"Very true. Plainly, this is a case where a brother was extremely reticent. Allow me to say, Miss Caryl, that, by your answers, you have made the work of finding the murderer of your brother somewhat more difficult than if you had been ordinarily frank. Nevertheless, I shall, doubtless, succeed, although you do not wish me success. Good-morning."

Julia stood for some moments in the position in which Henry Loud had left her. It was partially true what he had said. She would prefer that the guilty one never was found, if the alternative must be the revealing of the life of the Caryls for the past few years.

"That man suspects I know not what," she whispered, walking up and down the room. "Yes, Ralph's death has served us even worse than his life has. I would give a great deal to know how he came to his end. But the knowing will not bring him to life; it will publish all his misdeeds to the world, and we have managed to keep a rather fair name. However, I shall not help matters any. They may send their detectives to me, but I have wit enough for them. Will they find out why Ralph and I went down to the shore? No; I challenge them to do it; and if they don't, then I am safe from their busy tongues."

With this decision she went up to her mother's room. Mrs. Caryl was really ill. The shock and the grief had prostrated her.

As Julia sat down by her bedside, she thought it would be very convenient if her mother should remain too ill to be seen until the investigations were over; for Mrs. Caryl was a simple, unsuspicious woman, who would not know what to tell.

"Yes," thought Julia, "my mother must not, apparently, recover at present. If I am her nurse, I can arrange matters. Meanwhile," and a dark cloud came to her eyes—"meanwhile, I am leaving Dick Burt to the charms of Kate Purcell. But I do not give him up."

The officer when he left the home, did not directly leave the place. He sauntered about the neglected grounds, noting how the mark of poverty was on the fine old country-seat.

"Plainly this Ralph Caryl has had very odd places in his life," he was thinking, "and the Caryls of Carylville, in the person of Miss Julia Caryl, would prefer to keep the thing dark. Now, I don't intend it shall be kept so."

"I seem to have arrived at nothing as yet beyond the mere fact that Miss Caryl would like to hush up the affair, and that only tells me that I have a hard case. I wish I could have seen the mother; but Miss Julia does not mean I shall. However, if it's necessary, I will see her. Now for this place at the shore. Something must be revealed there that will set me on some kind of a track."

He hurried to the station, and caught the train for Boston. He sat in a deep study all the way down to the city.

He had been put on to the case two days before. He had made strictest examination of the spot where the crime had been committed. He knew everything of the manner in which the shot had acted—frightfully disfiguring the face, so that it was nobody's face—so that it could not be told.

The shot must have been fired within a few feet of the victim, and from a gun.

This much the detective knew, but the place of the murder had refused to give up any of its secrets.

It was a spot sufficiently frequented to show many marks of feet, but they were the tracks of different people, and from them—though he had carefully examined them—he could learn nothing.

Arrived in Boston, he went to headquarters.

"I have nothing to report," he said.

The officer in charge looked up in some surprise. Loud was usually very quick at finding a clue.

"You have your theory, I suppose?"

"No, not even a theory."

"Indeed! Is this going to be one of the mysterious cases?"

"I'm afraid it is. But I hope to get my finger on a clue before I sleep. I am going down to Colton to-night."

"That's that place on the south shore?"

"Yes. If I don't get any light there, I believe I'll throw up my position."

"Pshaw! Henry Loud throw up his position! What should we do? You are blue to-night, Loud."

"I am exasperated. Telegraph me at Colton, if you happen to learn anything."

And Loud left the office.

It was just before sunset that the detective alighted from the depot carriage near the little clump of fishermen's houses.

As he looked about the place his first thought was:

"A very odd spot for a woman like Miss Caryl to care to stay in. That brother and sister were furthering some scheme; I'll bet my life on it!"

He was determined to address the first person he met, knowing that two people like Ralph Caryl and his sister must be well known. His spirits rose as he walked, gazing about him, as any chance visitor might do.

In front of him slouched leisurely along a man in a red shirt, his hands thrust deep into his pockets. He had stopped to examine the new comer and to light his pipe, and was now going down toward the river.

Loud quickened his pace and overtook the man, saying:

"You have good fishing down here, don't you?"

"Toller'ble—too many perch, though. A feller gits awful sick of haulin' them in. An' then, the skinnin' o' them is too tough. Come down to fish, eh?"

"Yes. I wanted to get a day's rest from the store; so I came down here."

"Better hire my boat, then. I let it as cheap as anybody."

"I'll take it to-morrow, then—and hooks and lines?"

"Plenty. And cod lines, too. Ef ye go out far enough, ye can ketch cod, ye know, and sich."

Loud saw that the man was talkative. He drew out a cigar case and said:

"Here's a cigar that I'll wager is better than your pipe. Will you try it?"

When the man had lit it, he said, eager to tell something new:

"P'r'aps you ain't heard about that Caryl murder?"

Loud pricked up his ears.

"Caryl! Yes, I did see it in the papers. Have they found out anything about it yet?"

"Don't know. Caryl was a mighty pleasant feller to see—free and easy, and not above a feller."

"Bless me! Was it Colton where he was staying?"

"Cartain—this is the place! He boarded up there at that house on the hill," pointing; "and I always had a kind o' notion that he was sweet on Purcell's daughter, an' you can't get me off it."

Loud began to think he should soon have a theory of the affair now. There was a woman in it, then. Of course there was—he might have known that.

"Didn't other folks think so?" asked Loud.

"Don't know. I mentioned my s'picions one time to Burt, and he was mad as thunder; he wanted her himself. Burt's been courtin' her this long time, but somehow she don't take to him. She's a lady, if she does live in that little house, and cook and scrub."

Loud was getting excited now. Did Caryl have a rival in this Burt? He was beginning to see light.

"Who is Burt?" he inquired.

"I don't exactly know, though he's been here, off'n on for a number o' year. He's the only one that knew Caryl when he came here, but it's my mind that he was never exactly suited to have him here, and he was plagued if I joked him 'bout being cut out with Kate by his friend, and once he said, 'he's no friend o' mine.'"

Loud's eyes sparkled. Was this the clue—the same jealousy which will cause so many crimes as long as the world stands?

Already, in the detective's eyes, this Burt was the guilty one. He had found his theory and was working it out in his own mind. He was silent, not having decided what questions to ask next, when his companion gave a short sigh and said:

"I told Burt yisterd'y 'twas lucky he could prove an alliby, or he might git nabbed for this scrape of Caryl's."

"An alibi!" repeated Loud, his theory falling to pieces. "How's that?"

"Why, Burt was out fishin' all night with me the night Caryl was killed."

"Then he is safe enough from suspicion."

"Sartain. Otherwise he might be 'spected, you know, bein' a rival, or somethin' o' that sort. My wife, she has her queer notions, and she's been into Purcell's consid'able these last weeks, since Rothesay's been sick there, you know. She says if Caryl, or Burt, or anybody's going to be jealous about Kate, they'd better be jealous o' that Rothesay. She says she's watched him, and in spite of all the stories 'bout his goin' to be married, it's Kate Purcell that Rothesay loves."

And the man smoked on in great complacency, thinking of his wife's superior discernment.

Loud listened, seeing that the case was getting more complicated than he had foreseen even. He took it for granted that the man told the truth about Burt's being out fishing all night on the night of the murder.

"Is this Rothesay a fisherman here?" he asked.

"Lord bless you, no!"

Then followed a detailed account of how Rothesay had come to Colton and his illness.

"They say," the man continued, "that Rothesay didn't see Caryl all the time the man was here sick; only at the depot, when they had that row. Thunder! I never saw anything done so quick as Rothesay gave the lick across Caryl's face. You see, I happened to be on the platform; Rothesay was white as a ghost, and didn't look as if he had the strength of a flea."

Then followed a garrulous account of the encounter at the railroad station, to which the detective listened with intense interest.

It was very plain to be seen that Rothesay and Caryl, for some reason, were bitter enemies. Was Rothesay the guilty one?—or could he, also, prove an alibi?

Loud found himself more interested in the case than in any he had worked upon for years, but he sat, quite stolid-appearing, only making remarks now and then, to keep the man talking.

"Was Rothesay in love with Kate, also?" he asked.

"That's what my woman thinks' I told ye. But I don't myself believe that that's what they quarreled about, though it might be, in course. I heerd the words as passed between 'em, an' when Caryl, in a powerful sneerin' manner, asked somethin' about the other's sister, then—gosh!—didn't the sick man's arm fly out! Land! and didn't the blood spurt from Caryl's nose! and for an instant, I vow, I thought they'd pitch into each other and have it out. But the train came along, and that's the end of it."

"Odd, wasn't it?" responded Loud, leisurely taking his cigar from his mouth and blowing a cloud of smoke away. "Where is Rothesay now?"

"Gone to Philadelphy, I calc'late. That's where they said he was goin', an' where his gal lived as he was to marry. He's left his horse here; they are keep' on it up ter Joneses."

"Rather a mess he made of it, if he was engaged to marry one woman and fell in love with another, eh?" said Loud.

The man grinned and winked.

"'Tain't the first time such a thing has been done. But I'll bet that Rothesay was an honor'ble feller. He looked it; of you can tell a thing by a man's phiz."

After a little more talk, Loud became assured that he had gained all he could from that man, and he was decided on his next move. He was very curious to see the girl called Kate Purcell.

"You think I can get lodged at that house on the hill?" he said, rising from his seat in the sand.

"Oh, yes, for sartain! Mis' Blanchard she takes boarders, for her husband ain't much of a feller for a livin'. That's where Caryl an' his sister stopped, as I told ye."

After some more words, Loud succeeded in shaking off his companion, and sauntered on by the little brown house which had been pointed out to him as Purcell's.

He knew the fisherman with whom he had been talking was watching him, so he went directly to "Mis' Blanchard's" and engaged a room for the night.

As he turned away from the house, it had become quite dark, and he walked quickly down the hill toward Purcell's.

The night was very close and sultry, and all of the inhabitants seemed to be out on the beach, or sitting outside their doors.

He could see their figures moving about, but the clouds and fog made it so very dark that he could not tell whether the figures were men or women.

The house which he believed to be Purcell's was entirely dark, and he was standing still, hesitating whether to knock or wait and see if someone approached, when a figure did come near—a woman, as he saw at last. He spoke at once.

"Does Miss Purcell live here?"

"That is my name, and I live here," was the unexpected reply.

REDUCED TO POVERTY.

Russell Sage's Witticism, Told by J. Pierpont Morgan's Partner.

Not long ago, George W. Perkins, J. Pierpont Morgan's partner, noticed the aged Russell Sage poking his cane about in the gutter at the corner of Broad and Wall streets. He hurried over to Mr. Sage and asked him what he was looking for.

The past master in finance replied. "While buying a newspaper I dropped a cent in the gutter, and it has actually reduced me to poverty."

"Why, how can that be?" queried Mr. Perkins, with surprise.

"Why, don't you see, it makes me a penny-less man," chuckled the dean of the street, as he strolled away, apparently as happy as if he had made a lucky turn for a few thousands.—New York Times.

CONCERNS THOMAS B. REED.

Boating Party When He Was a Student at Bowdoin.

When the late Thomas B. Reed was a student at Bowdoin college he made a boating trip with some fellow students, and, their boat capsizing, they were cast away without any food, on a little sandy islet just large enough to afford them refuge. Here they remained, in a famishing condition, for several hours, when they were rescued and taken off. During the interval they tried many expedients to while away the time, and among them each was to signify his favorite poet and poem. When it came Reed's turn, he said:

"Well, I think I like best that fellow Gray, and his 'Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eat'n.'"—New York Times.

The Reporters Fixed Him.

Speaking of his Klondike experiences, Joaquin Miller says:

"I didn't mind the weather at all But the reporters had me frozen whenever they felt like it. One of them asked me if I had any regret about going there. I answered: 'Only that I've lost two years.' Immediately he wired his paper:

"'Joaquin Miller lost two ears.'"—New York Times.

"Good morning, sir," said a stranger, accosting Rip Van Winkle, as the latter came down out of the mountains from his twenty-year sleep, "and how are you feeling this morning?"

"I am feeling bum—very bum," replied Rip, in the usual grumbling way of mankind, "why, I never slept a wink all night."—Boston Post.

BIGGEST CRAB EVER FOUND.

One in Brooklyn Museum Over Eleven Feet in Diameter.

The biggest crab ever discovered, it is said, is now mounted and on exhibition in the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences. The natural home of this creature is under from 600 to 4,000 feet of water. The crab measures 11½ feet in diameter and for the most part it has a very beautiful complexion—for a crab—ranging from a delicate old-rose tint on the top of the carapace and legs to a pale brownish shade on the underside.

The two front legs have the usual crab claws, which are big enough to crush a man, but the others end in narrow brown hoofs without toes. The eyes on the branches are enormously large and the feelers are as big as garden hose.

The crab was taken off the Japanese coast and formed a part of a collection made by Prof. Bashford Dean of Columbia college last year and it was presented to the Brooklyn museum by Eugene G. Blackford. It took more than a month to mount it.

It is supposed that the giant crabs grow to twelve feet in diameter, says the Detroit News-Tribune, but the one in Brooklyn is the biggest ever captured. Not many of them are captured—not more than ten or twelve a year—although the Japanese are fishing over the grounds where they are found all the time.

The Japanese fishermen set lines several miles in length, with many hundreds of hooks, which are sunk to the floor of the ocean and left over night. When the lines are hauled in next morning all manner of extraordinary things are found attached, from giant crabs to sea lilies.

BUFFALO HAD TO CLIMB.

Logic of Situation Wouldn't Permit Any Other Movement.

A near relation of the late Baron Munchausen on the maternal side, lineally descended from Ananias and Sapphira, was telling a party of friends about treeing a bull buffalo in one of the trees of California.

"That story lacks likelihood," remarked the man who knows everything, like so many other men; "the buffalo belongs to the ruminant family, has four or five stomachs and walks on hoofs. It has no claws at all and could no more climb a tree than a Jersey cow."

"As a general proposition you are right," said the story-teller, with perfectly unruffled mien. "But this case was quite exceptional. We were after the buffalo with four of the most vicious dogs that I ever knew. One was a boar hound, one a great dane, one a psovie, or wolf hound, and the other a registered bulldog, with jaws like wrought iron. Well, they brought the buffalo to bay at the foot of a big tree and pressed him so blamed hard that he just had to climb. That was his only salvation."

Not That Time.

Senator Hoar, at the New England Society dinner that was recently held in Philadelphia, told the following story of his friend, Rev. Joseph Erskine of Edinburgh.

"The good Mr. Erskine at one time in his life lost handkerchief after handkerchief. He found, on investigation, that it was on Sundays these losses occurred, and accordingly one Sabbath morning Mrs. Erskine sewed his handkerchief in the tail pocket of his coat.

"'Noo,' said she, 'noo let us see what will happen.'

"Mr. Erskine, with the sewed-in handkerchief, passed down the aisle of the church that morning as usual to ascend to the pulpit, but as he sailed by the amen corner he felt a gentle tug behind, a delicate nibble among his coat tails. Thereupon he turned on the disappointed old woman in the corner and said with a triumphant smile:

"'No' the day, honest woman; no the day.'"

Champ Clark Taken for a Minister.

Champ Clark of Missouri was mistaken the other day for a Methodist exhorter. Congressman Clark had just completed a period in an impassioned speech against a claim bill, which he regarded as iniquitous. In appealing to his colleagues to make a record for economy, he said: "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation."

Soon afterward the house adjourned and a thin, little man, hard of hearing, said to him:

"Brother Clark, I came into the gallery just as you extended your invitation to those godless colleagues of yours to lift their feet out of the miry clay. I know you was a minister the minute I set eyes on you."

Mr. Clark said something about his duty, and it cost him $3.55 among his friends when the story got out.—New York Tribune.

His Style of Pills.

A Southern colored preacher of nimble mind and ready tongue, was in the habit of boasting that he could preach on any subject, and still keep the discourse in religious channels. One Sunday night he said to his congregation: "Now let any of the brethren name a thing to talk about. Anything." "Talk about pills!" shouted a keen old man who sat in the front row, and was desirous of tripping the preacher. "Pills!" A good subject! As you know, brethren, there are many kinds of pills. There are sugar-coated pills, to cure 'most anything. There are bromide pills to make you sleep. There are quinine pills for colds. But the pills I shall now consider are the gos-pills."

The easiest way to flatter some people is to tell them they are flattery proof.

A TRADE WITH NO PROFIT.

Man Who Gave Up Being a Cooper for Railroading.

"I've been in this job eight years," said a guard on an "L" train the other day, "and I like it pretty well. I had learned what I thought was a good trade, but found I couldn't get any work at it, so I went to railroading."

"What trade was that?" inquired the man who had preferred the brisk air on the platform to standing room in the crowded car.

"I was a cooper," said the guard, and made good wages when I could get work. But the bottom dropped out—bags did it—and here I am, putting in ten hours a day, keeping a lot of ornery people from kicking over the traces."

"Bags?" queried the listener.

"Sure," said the guard. "My work was mostly making flour barrels. Then they got to using bags—found 'em more convenient and cheaper—and the coopers were down and out. Now barrels are used only for liquid and to a certain extent for sugar. The man that got up the idea of using bags made money, but he put a lot of willing workers at the cooper trade on the waiting list for jobs. But I might do worse—this is better than running a surface car, anyhow. Forty-second street—Grand Central depot."—New York Mail and Express.

Few Old Men Can Say This.

Lakefield, Minn., Feb. 2d.—Wm. E. Gentry of this place makes the following statement:

"For over forty years I suffered with misery in my back and at times I could not pass water without great pain and a burning sensation. I have had to make water as often as sixteen times during one night—just a little at a time. I tried many kinds of kidney medicines, but all without any good result, until at last I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and my pains are all gone."

"I took six boxes and I am cured completely. I am 77 years of age and I feel better now than I have for over fifty years and I attribute it all to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have made some remarkable cures in this part of the state, and many old men and women are praising them highly as a cure for lame back, kidney and bladder troubles.

ROUT THE REBELS

SULTAN OF MOROCCO WINS A DECISIVE AND COMPLETE VICTORY.

THE PRETENDER IS CAPTURED

ARMY OF SULTAN ATTACKS PRETENDER'S POSITION AT DAYBREAK.

GREAT NUMBER OF REBELS SLAIN

PRETENDER'S FOLLOWERS ARE ALMOST ALL KILLED OR CAPTURED.

Tangier, Feb. 3. — The sultan's troops have utterly routed the forces of the Moorish pretender and captured Bu Hamara himself.

A special courier who arrived yesterday after making a record journey from Fez, brought this news. He reports that at daybreak last Thursday the army of the sultan, commanded by the war minister, El Menebhi, attacked the pretender's position and inflicted a complete defeat on his following, at the same time capturing Bu Hamara.

Sultan's Victory Absolute.

Another runner who has arrived here from Fez confirms the new of the defeat of the rebels, but says that the report of the capture of the pretender is incorrect. He adds that it is uncertain whether Bu Hamara's body was among the number slain. The sultan's victory was absolute, almost the entire following of the pretender being either slain or captured. His camp, provisions and ammunition were taken and the artillery which was lost by the sultan's army in the battle of Dec. 23 was recaptured.

Put Pretender in a Cage.

London, Feb. 3. — A dispatch from Tangier to the Morning Leader mentions a circumstantial report current in that city that Bu Hamara was brought to Fez in a cage and exposed to public derision. The dispatch adds that it is impossible to ascertain the truth and attributes the sultan's victory more to his bribery of the tribes that to military tactics. The bribed rebels suddenly abandoned the pretender's standard.

REBELLION IN CHINA.

Chinese Make Large Importations of Firearms and Ammunition.

Honolulu, Feb. 3. — The Pacific Mail steamship China has arrived here from Hongkong and Yokohama on her way to San Francisco. She brings the news that large importations of arms and ammunition are being made by Chinese in violation of the agreement of the powers. Vessels disguised as trading boats are going into the interior, laden with war material. It is thought that these unusual importations of firearms and ammunition are being made by the reform element, which is plotting to overthrow the Manchurian dynasty. There are many members of the reform party in Hawaii, and they have contributed liberal sums for the agitators in China.

HUSBAND OBJECTED.

Finds Another Man With His Wife and Kills Him.

Pittsburg, Feb. 3—The fifth tragedy within a week occurred yesterday at the little settlement of Clairton, just above Pittsburg. Caught in company with John Jackson's wife, William Smith was shot and killed by the husband. When Jackson pulled his revolver, Smith did the same, and in the fusilade that followed Smith was shot through the heart, while Jackson received a bullet in the abdomen, which probably will prove fatal. Both men were colored.

LOST LETTERS FOUND.

Five Hundred Stolen Pieces of Mail Matter Are Recovered.

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 3.—Over 500 letters were found buried in a lumber yard here. Every envelope had been slit, but money orders and checks to the value of several hundred dollars which could not be disposed of without danger of detection were left undisturbed. The envelopes were rifled of jewelry, cash and other gifts.

BOMB FOR A FARMER.

Second Attack of a Similar Nature Within Three Months.

Dixon, Ill., Feb. 3. — A dynamite bomb wrecked the home of Frank Gleffner, a well-to-do farmer living near here, and the three members of the family were painfully injured. This was the second time in the last three months that a bomb has been thrown into the house.

CAUGHT IN A SNOWSLIDE.

Two Smelter Company Employes in Wyoming Are Killed.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 3.—Charles G. Comer of Greeley, Colo., and Peter Larue, a French Canadian, both employed by the Boston Smelter company at Grand Encampment, were sent out Wednesday to repair the tramway telephone line. Four miles from station No. 3 of the tramway line they were caught in a snowslide down the mountain and killed.

BATTALION FORMED.

Militiamen of Black Hills Region Organized Into Body.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 3. — The Third battalion of the Second regiment, South Dakota state guard, has been created in the Black Hills, consisting of Company I at Custer, Company K at Whitewood and Company M at Rapid City, to which Troop A, cavalry, at Deadwood is attached for reports, this being the only cavalry troop in this part of the state. There has been a quickening of spirit among the various militia organizations in this part of the state recently owing to the passage and approval of the national bill.

ROULETTE DID IT.

Young Man Said to Have Taken Funds to Play the Wheel.

Duluth, Feb. 3. — Chief of Police Lowee of Grand Forks arrived here and took in custody a young man named Roy C. Smith, who is charged with having embezzeled $731 of the funds of the machinery concern of Collins & Sensolf some time ago. The young man had changed his name to Ralph C. Stone, and says that he had made no other effort to evade arrest. Smith has confessed that he took funds that did not belong to him, and that his downfall was due to gambling. He was fascinated by the roulette wheel.

KILLS HIS PLAYMATE.

Boy Accidentally Shoots Dead One of His Companions.

Albert Lea, Minn., Feb. 3. — Arthur Roberts, son of Frank Roberts of this city, was accidentally shot and killed by a playmate. The boys had been using a 22-caliber rifle for hunting and target practice, and after they had returned to the Roberts home they continued the gun play. A boy named Milton Malmer, aged fourteen years, took aim at some object, and just then the Roberts boy came into range around the corner of the house, and the bullet went through his heart. The boy was twelve years of age.

PRICE OF TWINE.

Warden Wolfer and Board of Control Fix Schedule for Coming Season.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 3. — The board of control and Warden Wolfer have fixed twine prices for the coming season as follows; Standard, 500 feet to the pound, 6 3-4c; sisal the same; standard mixed, 550 feet to the pound, 9 1-2c; manila, 600 feet to the pound, 10 1-2c; pure manila, 650 feet to the pound, 11 1-2c.

These prices are considerable below last year's prices and are much lower than the prices asked by the independent twine concerns.

The output will be 7,000,000 pounds.

JILTED MAN TAKES LIFE.

Commits Suicide on the Night He Was to Have Been Married.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 3.—William Winters, one of the most prominent men in Butte and former county auditor, shot himself through the head with a revolver last night, dying instantly. It is said Winter's fiancee broke their engagement, and this, it is believed, led to his suicide.

On a table within a foot of the corpse were many wedding presents. The ceremony was to have been performed last night.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 3.—The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and the Chicago Great Western have practically closed a deal for 160 acres of land in Sioux City. The deal is considered to mean that the extension of these two lines to Sioux City is assured. It is said the two roads will use the tract for terminals. The price paid for the tract is $128,000.

Hermit Ends His Life.

St. Paul, Feb. 3. — John Tillman seventy years old and said to be a granduncle of Senator Tillman of South Carolina, was found dead in a chair at his home yesterday afternoon. There was a bullet wound in his forehead. An old pistol found in his lap showed that death had been of his own seeking. Tillman had lived the life of a hermit for years. He was reported to be wealthy.

Smelter Workmen Strike.

Deadwood, S.D., Feb 3.—Three hundred employes of the Golden-Reward smelter have gone on strike because of one man being laid off. About 700 other men will be thrown out of employment as a result, the company having decided to close down two of its large mines. It is claimed that the question of wages does not enter into the trouble.

MAY PATCH IT UP

PROPOSITIONS INVOLVING COMPROMISE SUBMITTED TO THE ALLIES.

BELIEVED THEY WILL ACCEPT

SUGGESTION COMES FROM ONE OF THE REPRESENTATIVES OF ALLIES.

MODIFIES THEIR CONTENTION

TO HAVE PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY.

Washington, Feb. 3. — Propositions involving a compromise of the allied powers' contention for preferential treatment in the settlement of their claims against Venezuela have been submitted to the governments of Great Britain, Germany and Italy by their representatives at Washington, and while no answers have been received as yet, there is reason for the belief that the allies will see a way to accept the latest proposition. This compromise has been suggested by one of the representatives of the allies here, and while it has not formally received the indorsement of Minister Bowen, it is felt that he will not enter serious objection to its adoption provided the United States and the other claimant nations outside the alliance can be convinced that their own interests in Venezuela will not be substantially injured by which seems to offer a solution of the present serious hitch in the Washington negotiations. The details of the proposition now under consideration by the three allied nations are not obtainable, but in a general way it is understood to be a modification of the allies' contention that they be recognized as Venezuela's preferred claimants in the payment of the indemnity. The plan suggested provides that for a short period, perhaps six months or a year, Great Britain, Germany and Italy shall receive exclusively 30 per cent of the customs receipts of the ports of Porto Cabello and La Guayra, and that at the end of this period, the exact length of which is yet open to decision, all the claimant nations be placed on the same footing, and at the expiration of that time the 30 per cent of the receipts of these two ports be divided among in ratio based on the amount of each nation's claim. The plan is regarded as a compromise which will enable the allies to withdraw their ships from Venezuelan waters without serious loss of prestige.

Yielding to a Plan

All the Claimant Nations

Whether the claimant nations outside the tripartite agreement will assent to this scheme is not yet known. Mr. Bowen has been assured that the representatives of the allies here will give him a final answer at the earliest possible moment. Meantime exchanges are still in progress between the allied governments and their respective embassies here in the effort to agree on a plan of settlement that will be acceptable at once to Venezuela and to the octagonal alliance of France, Belgium, Spain, Denmark, Holland, Norway, Sweden and the United States.

France May Butt In.

Caracas, Feb. 3.—The French legation has notified the Venezuelan government that by virtue of the convention of 1867 France was allowed to collect directly part of the revenues of several customs houses in Venezuela as a guarantee for her diplomatic claims arising out of the previous revolution. France, it is said, renounced forever by the convention of 1885 the existence of this right on condition that the interest on this debt should always be regularly paid. As this payment has not been made, France, without asking the authorization of Germany, England and Italy, intends to revive her right of collection. The French charge d'affaires has twice called on President Castro during the past forty-eight hours. The activity on the part of France evidently is in connection with her intention to revive her rights, and is considered an answer to the attitude adopted by the allied powers.

Miles Dines With Edward.

London, Feb. 3.—Gen. Miles was the guest of the king and queen at dinner at Windsor castle last night. The prince and princess of Wales and others were among the party.

Cracked a Safe.

Dexter, Kan., Feb. 3.—Three cracksmen wrecked the safe of the State Bank of Dexter early yesterday and secured $1,500. They then escaped on a hand car.

Corpses Washed Ashore.

London, Feb. 3. — The Norwegian steamer Avona, Capt. Dreyer, has gone ashore at Lemvig, Denmark. Three boats and six corpses have been washed ashore. It is feared the remainder of the crew were drowned.

Killed by Mob of Miners.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 3.—Constant A. Sobrilefsko, a Russian local miner who had worked during the strike, was yesterday kicked and stabbed to death by twenty-one of his infuriated countrymen.

PERCHED ON A ROCK.

Wrecked People Await Rescue Off the California Coast.

San Francisco, Feb. 2.—The steam schooner Crescent City ran on Fish Rock, off the Mendocino coast, during a gale early yesterday morning. Her passengers and crew, numbering in all about twenty-five, took refuge on the rock. The steamer Scotia was signalled and after beating about five hours, launched a boat which took eleven persons and transferred them to the Scotia. The life saving crew from Point Arena could not launch a boat, but attempted to shoot lines over the rocks from shore. Owing to the wind all efforts in this direction were unsuccessful. About fifteen persons are still on the rocks and are in no danger except from exposure. The Crescent City is slowly breaking up.

LONG HOLDS HIS OWN.

Physicians Are Loth to Give Encouragement.

Boston, Feb. 2.—While Hon. John D. Long, former secretary of the navy, who is at St. Margaret's hospital, held his own yesterday, there was no material improvement in his condition, and he continues to be a very sick man. On the other hand no serious complications are anticipated for some hours, and Miss Margaret Long, his daughter, who arrived yesterday afternoon, after a hasty journey from Baltimore, went down to the family homestead at Hingham last night. The physicians in attendance on Mr. Long are loath to give encouragement. Frequent bulletins were issued during the day and evening by the physicians in charge, but as a rule they were all of the same nature.

STERNBERG ARRIVES.

New German Minister Will Take Up Venezuelan Matter.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Baron Speck von Sternberg, the German minister to the United States, arrived in Washington at a late hour last night. He was accompanied by the baroness Speck von Sternberg. They were met at the station by one of the German attaches and went at once to the embassy residence. The baron will not be able to take up the Venezuelan negotiations with Minister Bowen until he has presented his letters of credence to President Roosevelt. It is expected he will do this to-day.

INTERSTATE FAIR.

Business Men Organize to Make Annual Show at Sioux City.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 2.—Plans are now under way which will result in the giving of annual interstate fairs in Sioux City in the fall. At a meeting of business men articles of association were adopted making the capital stock $25,000. The name of the corporation is to be the Interstate Live Stock Fair association. The first fair is to take place this year. There will be large exhibits of live stock and agricultural products and a splendid race meeting.

GOES DOWN WITH COAL.

Abandoned Brigantine Sinks in the Atlantic Ocean.

Port Arthur, Tex., Feb. 2. — Capt. Thomas Renton of the steamer Maverick, which arrived yesterday from Philadelphia, reports that on Jan. 21 he sighted the barkentine Nineveh, 421 net tons, of New York, in the Atlantic ocean loaded with buckwheat coal. The vessel showed no signs of life and had ten feet of water in her hold. Ten hours afterward the Nineveh sunk in latitude 32 degrees and 50 minutes north and longitude 73 degrees and 29 minutes west.

ERUPTION IS FEARED.

Volcano in San Salvador Showing Signs of Becoming Active.

San Francisco, Feb. 2.—The volcano of Izalco, in the Central American republic of San Salvador, has increased its activity and there is fear of an eruption. For several months the volcano has been smoking, but now fire issues from the crater and is accompanied by rumblings. The officers of the steamer City of Panama report that the volcano belches smoke and fire at intervals of about fifteen minutes.

QUAY'S COUP.

Favorable Report Tacking Statehood Bill Onto Supply Measures.

Washington, Feb. 2. — The committee on organization of the executive departments, of which Senator Quay is chairman, has ordered a favorable report upon the statehood bill, offered by the senator as an amendment to appropriation bills.

President Mellen Has Close Call.

Prescott, Ariz., Feb. 2. — President Mellen of the Northern Pacific railroad passed through here yesterday morning in the private car Mayflower. The car had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire en route from Phoenix. While coming up a heavy grade a spark from the engine set fire to the end of the car and it was with great difficulty extinguished.

McDunough Accepts.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 2. — John F. McDunough, former secretary of state, announced that he would accept the appointment as justice of the supreme court of the Philippines, which was tendered him several days ago.

French Vessels Injured.

Toulon, France, Feb. 2.—The French battleships Gaulois and Bouvet are reported to have been seriously damaged during the naval maneuvers. No details are obtainable. The squadron sailed hence yesterday.

In Far Northland.

HUNGER LIES BEFORE THEM.

Swedish Peasants Have Very Little Hope.

A newspaper correspondent who is visiting the famine-stricken district in the north of Sweden confirms the reports as to the critical conditions that confront the peasants of these latitudes. In certain districts King Oscar's Arctic subjects are in a state that borders on complete destitution. The most pitiful conditions were found at every point.

Only the most meager relief supplies which have temporarily ceased in certain districts stand between the peasants and starvation. Were the relief resources to slacken for any considerable number of days during the next six months it is hard to conceive how thousands of human beings and cattle could escape death from hunger. Even now they are subsisting on less than half the regulation rations of famine times. This description of the situation is based on an inspection of typical districts and is indorsed by government officials, pastors, school teachers, innkeepers and others in hourly contact with the widespread misery. Such authorities vigorously condemn the action of the sawmill companies in forcing the famine sufferers to work for beggarly wages and then saying their condition has been grossly exaggerated.

At present the problem that is giving the relief authorities most concern is the need for securing enough seed grain—principally barley—in order to enable the ruined farmers to sow new crops. Only a small percentage is required, since a hundred thousand bushels are in sight.

Inquiries from philanthropic Americans directed to King Oscar through the central relief committee, which has been formed for the purpose of affording aid to the starving people of the north of Sweden, were answered by a message from the king through the usual channels. The message says:

"The needs of the people continue and gifts of money will be gratefully received."

As previously announced in these dispatches, the people in the north are without food owing to bad seasons for crops, and measures for their relief are now urgent because of an extremely severe winter.

FEATURES OF THE FAMINE.

Even the Fish in the Streams Forsake the People.

Unlike famines which ordinarily attract attention, those which have brought starvation to the inhabitants of northern Sweden and Finland were caused not by drouth, but by too much moisture. The crops were drowned out, and the vegetable products not destroyed in that manner were frozen in the ground.

The lack of crops has made it necessary also for the peasants either to kill or dispose of the stock, because there was no hay or fodder for feed. Heretofore milk has been an important part of the diet of these people, but it was impossible to keep the cows alive. This led to another very important feature of the case. It will be necessary to import cattle and stock when the summer season comes on, and this will be so expensive that most of the peasants will not be able to do it.

Added to this sad state of affairs is a fish famine. For some reason which is not altogether explained, fish have almost entirely disappeared from the streams in Northern Sweden. It may be due to the impoverished condition of the country and the lack of food. However that may be, there are none to be had and the supply is thus shut off in this direction too.

These stricken districts are very poorly settled. While there are a great many people, they are spread over a large territory. The little huts and shacks are often miles apart and it would take days to make a passage to one of them. Some of them have been reached and supplied with food and like necessities, but others have not and probably cannot be reached until favorable weather.

King Edward Wins a Prize.

When the winner of the grand prize in the Swedish art lottery was announced there must have been a general murmur of disappointment, not because the winner was unpopular, but because he already possesses a surfeit of the desirable things on this earth. The winner was none other than King Edward of the British empire. King Oscar won the twenty-first prize.

Norway's Hard Times.

Norway's customs returns show a deficit of $1,000,000 on account of the diminished consuming power of the country. On the other hand, the Swedish customs show a surplus of $2,500,000 and the Danish customs a surplus of $500,000. Even in Sweden and Denmark trade is slack and the number of unemployed is great, but the economic crisis does not amount to such a catastrophe as in Norway.

Decoration for a Churchman.

Dr. Erick Norelius, president of the Augustana Swedish Lutheran synod, is the latest American to be honored by decoration as a knight of the Swedish order of the North Star. As far as can be recalled at present he is the third citizen of Minnesota, the North Star state, to be thus honored by King Oscar, the others being A. E. Johnson of the steamship and land firm, and Dr. Wahlstrom, president of the Gustavus Adolphus college, St. Peter.

PRAISE FOR MINISTER SWENSON.

An Excellent Diplomat and Popular With the Danish Court.

In announcing the accession of Lauritz S. Swenson of Albert Lea, Minn., as dean of the diplomatic corps at Copenhagen, the New York Herald, in its Paris edition, added:

"The Swedish and Russian ministers, who were above Mr. Swenson in seniority, have just left. Baron Beck-Friis, the former doyen, has retired to his estates in Sweden after twenty-five years' service at the Danish court, and the Russian minister, Count Benckendorff, was appointed ambassador to the court of St. James.

"Mr. Swenson, who was appointed in 1897 to Denmark, under President McKinley, is 'persona grata' at the court and very popular among his colleagues. He is also considered an excellent diplomat. During the somewhat delicate Danish-West Indian negotiations he had an opportunity to show his mettle.

"Mr. Swenson will act in his new capacity as spokesman at the ceremony which takes place on New Year's day, when the diplomatic corps 'in pleno' presents its congratulations to King Christian at Amalienborg."

Mr. Swenson gave his first official dinner in honor of Crown Prince Fredrik recently. Premier Deuntzer and other high Danish officials were present, as well as members of the diplomatic corps.

Would Emulate Nordenskjold.

At the Arctic club's dinner at New York there was read a letter from Capt. H. C. Johannesen of Tromsoe, Norway, suggesting an expedition along the north coast of Europe and Asia from west to east. The suggestion attracted considerable attention and should it be undertaken Capt. Johannesen may be captain. He navigated the Lena, which accompanied Nordenskjold on the Vega as far as the Lena Delta. His seamanship in the Arctic is vouched for by such eminent men as Dr. Nordenskjold, Dr. Nansen and Capt. Sverdrup.

Capt. Johannesen estimates that $30,000 will cover all the expenses for such an expedition as the one he has in mind.

A Patron of Agriculture.

Hr. Sissener, a former member of the Norwegian storthing from Smaalenene, died recently at the age of fifty-three at Röade. He was greatly interested in agriculture and did much by speech and with his pen for its advancement. He was himself a practical and progressive farmer.

Norway Is Warlike?

Some one started a joke about a Norwegian attack on Sweden unless the consular question was speedily settled. There was even mention made of mobilizing troops within three months. Soon the Norwegian and Swedish papers were eagerly discussing the question, but all treated it as a huge joke.

Useful Recreation.

KILLED IN WRECK

DISASTROUS COLLISION ON THE SOUTHERN PACIFC RAILROAD.

CRASH TOGETHER AT FULL SPEED

ENGINES AND CARS PILED IN A MASS IMMEDIATELY TAKE FIRE.

ENGINEERS BURNED TO DEATH

TWENTY PERSONS KILLED AND MANY RECEIVE SERIOUS INJURIES.

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 30.—A disastrous collision occurred on the Southern Pacific railroad early yesterday between passenger trains No. 9, westbound, and No. 8, east-bound. The wreck occurred near Vailsburg, Ariz., seventeen miles east of here, and details as to the cause are difficult to obtain. From the best information obtainable it appears that both trains were running at full speed and came together with a terrific crash. The engines and cars piled up in a mass and immediately took fire from the exploding oil tanks of the engines. The flames were communicated to the cars. Eleven cars were quickly consumed. As soon as the news of the wreck reached Tucson a relief train was made ready and sent to the scene of the disaster. This train has just returned, bringing seventeen of the injured. A number of the injured were taken to Benson, Ariz. The first news of the wreck reached here when a tourist car which had been broken away from the east-bound train ran down grade to Tucson, where it was stopped.

Eight Persons Killed.

At last accounts twenty bodies had been taken from the mass of burned and charred wreckage, and it is believed that several more are buried in the twisted and tangled mass of iron and steel. Both engineers, Bruce and Wilkey, and Fireman McGrath, were burned to death in the wrecks of their engines. Seven persons were seriously injured and many more received painful injuries.

When Manager Agler was asked what information the local railroad officials had received concerning the collision at Vails, he said:

"Telegrams we have received say that the collision took place at 2:55 o'clock this morning and that it was caused by negligence of the telegraph operator at Esmond, a station five miles this side of Vails, and fourteen miles east of Tucson."

Fire Prevents Rescue Work.

The crash and the scenes immediately following were beyond description. Fire broke out at once. The flames, followed by the oil from the broken tanks of the engines, quickly communicated to the cars and the whole mass was soon in flames. Those who were able to escape from the cars in the rear of the trains quickly came to the rescue. But all their efforts went for little, as the pile of debris was heated to such a degree that the workers could not approach near enough to do any good. Smoke from the burning oil and cars, as well as escaping steam, blinded all those who got near the flames. Even in the face of all these obstacles the passengers and trainmen who were able to be of any service whatever rendered noble aid to the wounded.

RAISING THE BLOCKADE.

No Agreement Yet Reached in the Negotiations.

Washington, Jan. 30. — The British and Italian ambassadors and Count Quadt, the German charge d'affaires, called on Mr. Bowen, Venezuelan representative in the negotiations looking to a raising of the blockade and a settlement of the claims against Venezuela, about 10:30 o'clock last night. The conference broke up at 12:30 o'clock and the representatives of the allies proceeded at once to their homes. It was made known that no agreement had yet been reached for the raising of the blockade, and that further word must be awaited from Europe before this stage of the negotiations is passed.

The President Returns.

Washington, Jan. 30. — President Roosevelt and party arrived in Washington from Canton at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. On alighting from the train the president walked briskly toward the locomotive, where he shook hands with the engineer and fireman. He and Secretary Cortelyou then entered a carriage and were driven to the White House.

Another Passes Dardanelles.

Constantinople, Jan. 30.—The third Russian torpedo boat destroyer passed through the Dardanelles Monday evening, bound for Sebastopol.

Stirs Up San Domingo.

Santo Domingo, Jan. 30. — United States Minister Powell has demanded of the Dominican government a reply to his demand for immdiate payment of the $350,000 alleged to be due to the Clyde line of steamers.

Boiler Exploded.

Anniston, Ala., Jan. 30.—The boiler on plant No. 13, of the Southern Car and Foundry company exploded yesterday, killing five persons and wounding several. The cause of the explosion is not known.

POSTOFFICE IS A WRECK.

Posse of Dayton Citizens in Hot Pursuit of Two Safe Robbers.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 31. — Two safe crackers blew open the safe of the Dayton postoffice early yesterday morning, exchanged shots with Marshal Eric Frosberg and C. W. March, proprietor of the Commercial hotel, and made their escape on foot to the country, having been headed from the station, where they were trying to take a south-bound Minneapolis & St. Louis train. Most of the money and stamps in the office had been placed in the bank the night before. A posse of Dayton citizens is in pursuit under the leadership of Sheriff Henry Olson. The interior of the postoffice building was wrecked and fragments of the safe door were blown through the front window into the street.

BONDS FOR RAILROAD.

Adams County Offers $50,000 as an Inducement.

Grand Rapids, Wis., Jan. 31.—Fifty thousand dollars is the offer of Adams county as a bonus to any railroad company that would build a line north and south through the county. A committee was appointed to negotiate with the railroad companies of this state. To receive the $50,000 the company must start from Grand Rapids and traverse Adams county to Portage and also to guarantee to establish seven stations within the county. Adams is the only county in the state which has no railroad within its boundaries.

FUNSTON TO THE PHILIPPINES.

General Expects to Be Sent Back Before Long.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 31.—Gen. Frederick Funston said last night that he would not be surprised if he was ordered back to the Philippines before long. He has recovered from all his wounds he says, and can well endure active service for awhile. In answer to a question, Gen. Funston expressed doubt as to the stability of the Cuban government. He says, however, it had a better chance for prosperity than South American republics on account of the high character of the men in control.

CONFERENCE ON COMMERCE.

Senate Will Not Agree to the House Amendments to Nelson Bill.

Washington, Jan. 31.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Hanna moved to disagree to the amendments of the house of the department of commerce bill and agree to a conference. The chair appointed Messrs. Hanna, Nelson and Clay on the part of the senate.

Once Famous Bandit in Trouble.

Hot Springs, S. D., Jan. 31.—"Doc" Middleton of Ardmore, has reason to believe in the old adage, "Misfortunes never come singly." The excitement produced when he was recently attacked by hoboes in his saloon seems to have aroused the better element in that neighborhood, and he has been prosecuted for selling liquor without a license. The case has been continued and he is out on bonds.

Old-Time Black Hills Fighter Can Claim Estate.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 2. — If Boone May, the once famous Black Hills express messenger, is alive he may become heir to an estate consisting of considerable real and mining property and a snug sum of money in the bank. This property was left by William May, who died in the Black Hills three years ago, and who is said to have been a brother of Boone May. Boone May was the most noted of all the messengers who accompanied the treasure coach on its trips out of the Black Hills. He was known for his fearlessness and for the deadly execution he exhibited in the numerous encounters with the road agents that infested the region. He left here before the advent of railroads, and the last heard of him by his Deadwood friends was in South America. He was said to have shot and killed an officer of the Peruvian army, and to evade the wrath of the Peruvians, went to Brazil and thence to Venezuela.

WOLVES ARE BUSY.

Farmers Report Frequent Attacks Upon Live Stock.

Fairfax, S. D., Feb. 2.—Wolves are becoming very bold in some parts of Gregory county. A great many colts and calves have been killed by the animals this winter. Apparently encouraged by the ease with which they run down and kill calves and colts, some of the wolves do not hesitate to attack full grown horses. Herman Anderson reports that a pack attacked one of his horses, ran it into deep snow and then chewed and tore at the animal's throat until it died. A wolf hunt may be organized to rid the county so far as possible of the pests.

CRAZY WANDERER

Lands at Grand Forks Without Known Friends.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 2. — The authorities here are trying to locate the friends of Otto C. Cizek, who arrived here yesterday from the West in a demented condition. He is well dressed and well equipped with transportation, and is supposed to be on his way from Seattle to Detroit. He carried cards which indicated that he is an employe of the Citizens' Light and Power company of Seattle, and papers in his grip show that he has been at Denver and Detroit, Mich.

Farmer Fatally Injured.

Sumner, Iowa, Feb. 2. — Henry Kilner, a farmer, was fatally injured in a runaway. One lower limb was mashed to a pulp by the wheels passing over it.

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 27.—In the senate Mr. Quay, in charge of the omnibus statehood bill, insisted on its consideration to the exclusion of other business.

A resolution offered by Mr. Morgan of Alabama questioning the credentials of Dr. Herran, the Colombian charge d'affaires, who signed with Secretary Hay the canal treaty, caused the senate to go into a long executive session. At its conclusion the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was passed.

In the House.

The house yesterday made a new record in the matter of appropriation bills. The military academy bill was passed without a single word of debate. The Indian bill, which followed, was not completed.

A resolution was adopted calling on the postmaster general for the correspondence in the Indianola, Miss., postoffice case.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senator Quay made an effort yesterday to hold the senate in continuous session to consider the statehood bill, but failed to hold a quorum and was compelled on that account to allow the senate to adjourn at 6:20 p. m. The day was spent in consideration of the statehood bill.

In the House.

The house devoted the day to bills reported from the judiciary committee, passing about thirty. Most of them were of a minor character, relating to the times of holding court, etc., but two were of general importance. One was to meet the original package decision of the supreme court by making intoxicating liquors imported into states subject to the jurisdiction of such states. The other bill is the senate bill to increase the salaries of federal judges.

Senator Rawlins Starts a Sharp Debate.

Washington, Jan. 29.—A sharp debate was precipitated in the senate yesterday when Mr. Rawlins called up his resolution directing the secretary of war to furnish the senate the proceedings of a number of courts martial in the Philippines.

The statehood bill was taken up at 2 o'clock and Mr. Lodge spoke in opposition to it. An attempt by Mr. Aldrich to divide the business of the senate with the statehood bill failed, and the senate at 5:15 o'clock adjourned.

In the House.

The house made slow progress with the Indian appropriation bill. The senate amendments to the bill to amend the bankruptcy act were agreed to.

Senate Pays Tribute to the Memory of Senator McMillan.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The chaplain of the senate in his prayer yesterday referred to the late Senator McMillan of Michigan, the day having been set apart to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. McMillan.

At the conclusion of the routine business Mr. Burrows (Mich.) called up the resolutions relative to his late colleague and paid an earnest tribute to his memory. Several other senators also made eulogistic addresses.

In the House.

Yesterday was the last private claims day of this congress in the house, and members with bills on the calendar carried everything before them in committee of the whole. Forty-five bills in all were acted on favorably despite the efforts of Mr. Payne, the Republican floor leader, assisted by Mr. Cannon and others, to defeat some of them.

Senator Quay Reports His Statehood Amendment.

Washington, Feb. 2.—In the senate Saturday Mr. Quay favorably reported his amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill embodying the statehood bill.

The Rawlins resolution calling on the secretary of war for information regarding courts martial in the Philippines, was laid before the senate, but it again went over.

In the House.

When the house reconvened Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock it was still the legislative day of Friday and the consideration of the claims bill favorably acted upon in committee of the whole was proceeded with. There was not a quorum present, and the situation was at the mercy of Mr. Payne, the Republican floor leader. He allowed the bills to which he was not opposed to be passed, but every one to which he raised objection was laid aside upon his demands.

Washington, Jan. 30—A few minutes before Senator Lodge suspended his speech in opposition to the omnibus statehood bill yesterday Senator Quay, in charge of the bill, introduced the statehood measure as an amendment to each of two appropriation bills, the agricultural and the sundry civil bills. The document was handed in very quietly and the occurrence attracted no attention at the time. The amendments contained in each case all the provisions of the bill as it came from the house and provides for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union. Senator Quay would not discuss the purpose of these steps, but his friends practically admit that it is the intention so to join the measure with the bills providing money for the conduct of the business of the government as to render it necessary to accept statehood in order to secure the passage of the appropriation bills.

HOBSON QUITS NAVY.

He Sends His Resignation to the President.

Washington, Feb. 3. — Naval Constructor Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac episode, has tendered his resignation to the president through the secretary of the navy. Rear Admiral H. C. Taylor has recommended that the resignation be accepted. The action of Hobson was the result of the failure of congress to pass the bill providing for his retirement and the recent order assigning him to duty on the Pacific coast. He has been engaged for a long time in trying to secure transfer to the retired list.

Hobson is credited with an ambition to enter politics, but some of those who know him say that while this may be true, his immediate object in desiring to be relieved of active service is to go upon the lecture platform.

FIRE IN TREASURY.

Flames Endanger Eighty Million Dollars.

New York, Feb. 3. — Fire was discovered in the upper floors of the assay office in the subtreasury, shortly before 1 o'clock, Saturday. It had been smoldering for some time, and had done considerable damage, breaking through the roof. It was soon under control.

An extra squad of police and detectives surrounded the building, and the doors of the subtreasury were closed.

As soon as the alarm was given, the safes, containing about $80,000,000, were locked, and all the loose cash was gathered up and rushed into safes and locked up. The books were also taken to places of safety.

SOFT COAL MINERS MAY QUIT.

Anthracite Workers Are Figuring on Being Assessed a Dollar a Week.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 3. — Anthracite mineworkers here have been informed they probably will have to aid the soft coal workers soon. This news was brought by the delegates who have just returned from the national convention. Now that the soft coal operators have refused to give their men an increase a strike is expected. The anthracite delegates say they found all the bituminous men determined to insist upon an increase, and they rely largely upon the anthracite workers for assistance. If a strike is ordered the hard coal men expect to be assessed $1 a week.

SET FIRE TO REFORM SCHOOL.

Collusion Between Boys and Girls to Destroy Institution.

Ogden, Utah, Feb. 3. — An attempt was made yesterday to burn the state reform school, which contains about 150 inmates. The fire was discovered in both boys and girls' dormitories, and for some time the flames threatened to envelop the entire building. The fire was brought under control; however, before serious damage was done. It is charged that there was collusion between the boys and girls to destroy the institution. The officials have already begun an investigation.

RUN DOWN BY TRAIN.

Railroad Man Killed While Using the Tracks.

Larimore, N. D., Feb. 3. — William Bolkin, a lineman for the Great Northern, was instantly killed while coming here from Niagara, N. D., on a railroad tricycle. He was overtaken by Train No. 4.

Bolkin has been here but a few days, coming from Minneapolis. It is reported that he has a wife in St. Paul.

Stabbed to Death in a Fight.

Maysville, Ky., Feb. 3. — Charles Duncan was stabbed to death here last night. Henry Tight is charged with the crime. A crowd of colored men entered Burke's saloon late in the night and Duncan and Tight fought. Later Duncan fell to the floor. He had been stabbed three times. No one saw the deed done. As Tight fled and cannot be located the officers think he is the author of the crime.

For South Dakota Institutions.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 3.—The boards of regents of education and charities and corrections have been before the appropriations committees of the two houses and submitted estimates of the amounts which the different institutions under their charge desire in the way of appropriations from the present session. The total asked by the regents is $723,600, and that which the penal and charitable institutions would like is $699,200, making a total of $1,422,800. Of this amount $515,000 is asked for new buildings.

HOW BUBONIC TRAVELS.

Mazatlan Was Infected by Rats From San Francisco.

Washington, Jan. 31.—This bulletin has been issued by the state department:

"The state department has received advices from Mazatlan, Mex., that searching investigation by the authorities leaves no doubt that rats among vegetables shipped direct from Chinatown, San Francisco, conveyed the plague to that community."

ADDICKS HANGS ON.

Eighth Ballot Held on the Contest for Senator.

Dover, Del., Jan. 31. — The eighth ballot for United States senator yesterday resulted as follows:

Long Term—Addicks, 21; H. A. Dupont, 10; Dr. Black, 21. Short Term—Addicks, 19; Higgins, 8; T. C. Dupont, 2; H. A. Richardson, 2; John Biggs, 21.

Total vote, 52; necessary to a choice, 27; no election. Adjourned until noon to-day.

TREAT ALL ALIKE

THREE ALLIES SHALL NOT BE GIVEN PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT.

BOWEN INSISTENT ON THAT POINT

MAKES HIS POSITION VERY CLEAR TO THEIR REPRESENTATIVES.

SITUATION IS VERY UNCERTAIN

OFFICIALS AWAITING DEVELOPMENTS WITH SOME CONCERN.

Washington, Jan. 31. — The Venezuelan situation is still very uncertain and officials are awaiting with some concern the developments of the next forty-eight hours. No final answer has come to Minister Bowen's proposition offering a guaranty as demanded by the allies, as a preliminary to the raising of the blockade and the relief of the unfortunate situation in which the blockade places the people and government of Venezuela. The contention of the three allies that they shall be given preferential treatment in settlement and payment of their claims as against all the other seven creditor nations is the point on which the negotiations now hang fire. Minister Bowen is insistent that the allies shall not have preferential treatment in the matter of the Payment of the Claims.

and in all his conferences with the representatives of the European governments here he has made his position very clear. It is known that he has declined to modify his demands in this respect. Pressure along certain influential lines has been brought to bear on the allies to show the justice of Mr. Bowen's contention. The rejection of his proposition for the treatment of all the creditors alike, it is believed here, would result in throwing the case to The Hague tribunal, before which body all the nations having claims against Venezuela would be placed on an equal footing. It is known that the allies would prefer that this should not be done, as consideration of the claims by that body would entail much delay in their settlement, and there are other features which make it desirable to the allies that the outside that body. One of them is that if they come before The Hague, Venezuela would have the right to set up counter claims as an offset to those presented by the allies. These, it is said, might reduce considerably the amount of money to be paid by Venezuela.

Claims Be Settled

For these and other reasons it is not surprising to well informed persons here that the European governments are taking time to consider fully their reply to Mr. Bowen's proposition before making their final answer. At the same time, the fact that they have not agreed upon their final answer caused an uneasy feeling in Washington and some apprehension as to what the future may bring forth.

Minister Bowen continues hopeful of a favorable answer to his proposition. He realizes that the question is an important one to the nations involved, and is not unwilling that they should take time to consider the question fully.

INJURED IN A WRECK.

Trolley Car Crashes Into Another While Going at Terrific Pace.

Pittsburg, Jan. 31—One of the worst wrecks the Pittsburg Railway Traction company has experienced since its organization occurred last night. A score of passengers were injured and two cars were completely destroyed. Traffic was stopped for several hours. Eight victims are in the hospital; the others were taken to their homes. A car on the Homestead branch was on its way to Pittsburg. Just as it passed Forward avenue it struck a huckster's wagon. After going some distance it backed up the hill to see what damage had been done. Just then it was met by a second car coming down the hill at a terrific pace. When the collision occurred the trolley wires were crossed, causing a fire which completely consumed both cars in the wreck. Fortunately all of the injured passengers were taken out before the flames reached them.

FERRY BOAT SUNK.

New York Central Tug Crashes Into the Liberty.

New York, Jan. 31.—A new York Central railroad tug while rounding the Battery collided with the Liberty island ferry Liberty at the latter's landing. The ferry boat was struck on the port side, just forward of the cabin and a large hole was cut in her below the water line. She filled rapidly. No person was injured.

Put to Death in Prison.

Constantinople, Jan. 31. — The Armenian clerk Agap Hatchakin, who was arrested on Jan. 6 for attempting to assassinate the Armenian patriarch Ormenian, died in prison yesterday. It is supposed he was put to death in order to hush up the matter.

Raise President's Salary.

Washington, Jan. 31. — Representative Bristow of New York yesterday introduced a bill increasing the salary of the president of the United States to $100,000 a year.

BISHOP IN DANGER.

Catholic Prelate Warned of Approaching Murder.

Davenport, Iowa, Feb. 2. — Rev. George Giglinger, secretary to Bishop Cosgrove of the Catholic diocese of Davenport, yesterday received a letter threatening death to the bishop, and promising that within thirty days the homes of all the priests in Davenport and Ald. Lunger and George W. Cable would be blown up. The bishop ordered all Davenport priests to preach against winerooms, gambling and all-night saloons, creating a sensation, and as a result Davenport has been cleaned up. The city had the name of being the worst place in America. The letter is poorly written and unsigned, and is supposed to be intended to cause the crusade against vice to come to an end. The letter says further particulars will be sent in another letter.

STRUCK WITH BEER BOTTLE.

Damage Suit in Famous Fort Dodge Case Is Lost.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Feb. 2. — Mrs. Nellie Williams of Manson lost her suit for $10,000 against the Mineral City Park Association of Fort Dodge. Mrs. Williams was struck on the head by a beer bottle dropped from the band stand into the amphitheater during the progress of a race meet held here last fall. Her attorneys claimed her skull had been fractured by the blow, and that she had received permanent injuries through negligence of the park association. The jury was out five hours.

NOT USED TO BLOOD.

Chicago's Famous Slaughterhouse Turned Stomachs of Red Men.

Chicago, Feb. 2. — Fifteen Blackfoot Indians are in Chicago seeing the sights, but they couldn't stand the blood at the stock yards. They were taken there yesterday morning, full of expectancy, but when they reached the killing room of Armour's one of them fainted and three more were sick to their stomachs. The rest covered up their eyes. They were hurried out of the place into the fresh air. Some of them are students at Carlisle.

RALPH APPOINTED.

Drainage Ditches Are Under His Care for Next Year.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 2. — The county commissioners yesterday appointed George A. Ralph engineer of all the county ditches now under construction. The total mileage of these ditches is sixty. Bonds for their construction to the amount of $55,000 were sold yesterday.

HOW SNAKES SNARE BIRDS.

Peculiar Fascination Exercised by Swinging Movement.

The cobra of the cape fascinates birds by coiling itself on a branch, erecting its head and swinging to and fro. "Sundowner" states that the snake will go on "fascinating" and keeping the bird twittering and unable to leave the tree in which it is "for hours," and that if the bird is driven away it comes back. This may be a "yarn." But from the curious fascination which non-terrifying objects such as "lark glitters," have for some birds, and their apparent inability to resist hovering round the lure the far greater mesmerizing power of the serpent may be conjectured.

Movement, more or less regular, is always part of the means of fascination employed by the snakes. Their fondness for music of any kind is not extended to the sound of the human voice singing, which snakes clearly do not appreciate at all. They only care for "instrumental music," which includes the concertina, tom tom and jew's-harp. But from experiments made in this country it was evident that they like the bagpipes best.—Spectator.

VELOCITY OF THE EARTH.

Instruments Enable Scientists to Measure It With Exactitude.

In order to calculate the linear velocity of the earth in its orbit we must first know its distance from the sun. If we can measure the earth's velocity the sun's distance can be computed. If the velocity can be determined with great accuracy the resulting value of the sun's distance is proportionately precise.

The methods of spectroscopy have been so far improved that we are within measureable distance of determining the solar parallax by spectroscopic observations.

If any star near the zodiac be observed with the spectroscope at the two seasons when its longitude differs from that of the sun by ninety degrees, we can deduce not only the velocity of the star along the line joining star and earth, but also the mean velocity of the earth in its orbit.

Spectroscopic observations of stellar velocity in the line of sight are now so good that the value of the solar distance which may be had on the principle described is at least of the same order of accuracy as values derived from older methods.—New York Sun.

NOT THAT BRAND OF APPLE

Less Luscious Article Than That Which Tempted Eve.

As a Christmas gift to the Paris branch of the J. P. Morgan Co., the head of the great banking house sent ten barrels of the finest American apples. A glimpse of these apples prompted the remark "that those Frenchmen will feel now as though they never know how a real apple tastes."

In selecting these luscious gifts Mr. Morgan experienced all the irritation of a Christmas shopper. Useless to say that he wanted the best. Samples were shown the great financier of one particular apple which the dealer asserted was the best on the market. The tenacity with which the dealer clung to this particular quality of apple annoyed Mr. Morgan, and he said sharply:

"If Eve had tempted Adam with this apple that couple would still be in Paradise."

His Awful Blunder.

The careless man perpetrated the most awful blunder imaginable last week. It is really not a subject for laughter, and yet some of the man's friends had to laugh when he discovered his mistake and they saw his rueful face. You see, the man was going to send a friend a bunch of roses as a Christmas greeting, and at the same time he ordered a wreath sent to the house of an acquaintance whose sister had died the night before.

The man is a sympathetic soul, and he was plunged in woe when he went to the florist's to leave his order because of this friend's distress, so just how he did it will never be known, but the card intended for the bunch of roses was placed on the wreath, and that meant for the wreath was placed on the roses, and the former went to the house of the dead marked "A Merry Christmas," and the latter went to the debutante marked "With deepest sympathy," a mix-up that was ridiculous, however little the subject calls for laughter, now, wasn't it?—Baltimore News.

Greatly-Petted Fire Horses.

The horses of the New York fire department receive more petting probably than any other horses in the world. In nearly every engine house each of the stalls bears the name of the horse occupant occupying it, large black letters on aluminum marking the quarters of "Tom," "Harry," "Dick," or "Major," as the case may be. The firemen are proud of their dumb friends, and not only do everything possible to make them comfortable when they are off duty, but take pleasure in providing them with little luxuries and tidbits.

Accounted for the Crowds.

At the time of the recent Yale-Harvard fotball game in New Haven, the nearly thirty thousand people present so filled the streets of the Elm City that there were crowds everywhere. The little daughter of the Rev. Mr. Mudie had come to town with her mother. When she saw these great throngs of people all around her, she showed her early religious training by exclaiming:

"What is it, mamma, Resurrection day?"

THE GREAT NILE DAM.

Its Designers and Engineers Now Satisfied of the Complete Success of Their Plans.

Now that it is an assured fact that the Nile dam will do the work which its designers and engineers intended, a description of its construction and the benefits which it will confer on the country of Egypt is interesting reading. It is certain that the land will enter upon a new phase of prosperity with the present year. The completion of the dam adds a small principality to its cultivated area, and assures the blessing of perennial irrigation to Egypt as a whole, assuring bountiful annual harvests to a land where famine has been intermittent from time immemorial.

The conditions requiring the Nile dam were very special, existing nowhere else to such an extent. The Nile rises from December to March annually, flooding a certain portion of its valley, leaving after its subsidence a deposit of fertilizing mud. This flooded portion is practically all there is of habitable Egypt, the only exceptions being some land irrigated from canals, that are small and rather primitive.

When the Nile rises to a certain height it will be a good year in Egypt; failing this height, it will be a poor year. The poor years, years of deficient flow, are fairly numerous, and this fact has prompted engineers for the past sixty centuries to devise ways of controlling the flow—restraining the excessive flow of some years in order to have water available in the dry season, and storing up water in the lean years, to have it in the dry season—thus making the Nile an even source of fertility, year by year.

The time-honored methods were to direct the water during the flood season into basins inclosed by embankments, from which led canals to the cultivated lands. These were poorly made, were continually being silted up and then cleared by forced labor—a continual source of misery and rebellion among the fellaheen or peasantry.

In the dam just completed there are 140 sluices, 23 feet high and 6 feet 6 inches wide, and 40 more about half that height, all closed by heavy gates, so adjusted that they can be moved by hand, even against great pressures of water. There was also built a system of four locks, providing for navigation, and much ingenuity was expended on the gates of these locks, particularly the upper ones, where the pressure of the 1,000,000,000 tons of stored water is sustained.

The locks are each 260 feet long and 32 feet wide, permitting the passage up the river in safety of a considerable vessel. Each of the two upper gates is made strong enough to sustain the pressure of the water, even if the other gates were wrecked. The gates are peculiar in opening like coach-house doors, hanging from the top on rollers.

The plan of using this great barrage, or dam, is to leave the sluices open during the floods, allowing the red fertilizing mud to flow on and be deposited on the lowlands. At a suitable time the sluices will be closed in order to catch some of the flood, and then the normal low water flow of the river will slowly fill up the basin above the barrage. The water will be let down, beginning, say, in May, throughout the year in larger and larger amounts, filling the irrigating canals and providing for water until the floods begin again in December.

The cost of the dam was $10,000,000. At one point it is 130 feet from the bottom to the top of the dam, and much of it was built in a deep trench blasted out of the bed of the river. There are 180 steel sluices through the structure. Over 8,000,000 sandbags were used in the false work of preparation for the main structure, and a coffer dam, remarkable in itself for heavy construction, was built merely to pave the way for the dam proper.

The dam is expected to add 300,000 acres to the cultivated area of Egypt, to add over $12,000,00 a year to the revenue of the province and to pay for itself in the first good year.

The illustrations show the extent of the country which the dam will effect and the masonry work used in its construction.

Self-Sacrificing Snail.

A scientific paper gravely tells of a snail cultivator on a large scale who provides the market with those delicacies. He usually has 50,000 of them feeding in a vast park which is surrounded by a wall about two feet six inches high.

In consequence of the escape of many giddy snails, a sort of ledge was put on the top, projecting an inch or two on the inside, so that the snail crawling up the straight wall would meet with an obstacle. Still the slim creatures managed to get away, and were found scouring the open country with all the joyous abandon of acquired freedom.

After patient research, and this is the part of the story which is to be most unfeignedly believed, it was found that one accommodating snail would place himself like a swallow's nest under the ledge, while all those who were desirous of escaping crawled over his shell, and thus reached the edge of the ledge—and liberty.

Plants Act as Lightning Rod.

Science, as everyone knows, is very often the interpreter of legend, as often almost as it is the destroyer of myth and superstition. A notable instance of this happy fate has just been discovered by the Garden in relation to the humble and familiar wild flower, the stonecrop (sedum tectorum), a flower which is known in the lake region as the thunder flower and at Arras as fleur de tonnerre. In the pages of the Pharmaceutical Journal our contemporary has discovered the following interesting explanation of this ordinary name: Two pharmacists, it is related, were once walking together when they stopped to admire a fine profusion of the stonecrop on the roof and the outbuildings of a primitive farmhouse.

Mooney Won at Last.

Mooney stood shamefacedly in the dock, casting furtive glances at the justice, who eyed him sternly.

"Well, Mooney, you are accused of beating your wife. What have you to say why you shouldn't be punished?"

"Who says I beat her, sir?"

"She herself testifies to it."

"What! The old lady herself don't deny it! Well, then, I'll pay wid pleasure, for I'll be hanged if it isn't the first time in all our rows that she's owned up to coming out second best!"

Too Realistic a Name.

Since three men have hanged themselves in Gibbet lane, Halesowen, Worcestershire, England, it has been decided to change the name of the thoroughfare.

A WORD IN SEASON

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD ADVICE, COURTEOUSLY GIVEN.

Whole Current of Young Man's Life Probably Changed for the Best by Well Meant and Kindly Admonition Gently Offered.

It is impossible to correctly value a good word spoken under favoring conditions. An illustrative incident is related in the experience of Hon. John Mahin, the veteran editor and publisher of the Muscatine Journal, whose sturdy antagonism to the liquor traffic and the drink habit is of more than state-wide knowledge. Some fifteen years ago, traveling upon a train from Muscatine to Kansas City, Mr. Mahin entered the lavotory of the sleeper as the train approached the latter city. Hanging from the wall was the coat of a young man from West Virginia. In the pocket was a flask of liquor. The West Virginian, an intelligent, manly appearing fellow, courteously offered Mr. Mahin a drink, which, of course, was declined. When their toilets were completed and they were again seated in the coach, near each other, Mr. Mahin, attracted by the young fellow's gentlemanly bearing, ventured a kindly word of admonition against the practice of using intoxicating beverages. "That is what my mother has been telling me," said the young man.

"And where will you find in all the world any one more deeply interested in your welfare, one who loves you more devotedly, than your mother?" inquired Mr. Mahin.

"That is true," responded the West Virginian in recognition of the kindly intent of the advice of the older man, "and the young lady to whom I am paying attention has also given me the same advice."

"Then you have the most powerful of all motives for breaking away from the habit," said Mr. Mahin, "and let me urge upon you the great importance of such a course and its influence upon your future career;" and a conversation ensued, in which the young man promised to abandon the drink habit.

Three weeks later Mr. Mahin was traveling over the same road on a train from Kansas City and was accosted by the West Virginian, who recognized him. "I have kept my promise," said the young man. "I was visiting an uncle in Kansas City. There was a social gathering at his house at which wine was served. All partook but myself. Afterwards my uncle, who uses beverages, commended me for declining, so you see I had not lowered myself in his esteem by refusing to drink."

Fifteen years rolled by and the Christmas-tide of 1902 was approaching. One day there came to the residence of Mrs. John Mahin at Muscatine an express-package from Chicago. It contained a beautiful mantel clock, and with it a note recalling the circumstance on the train which we have related. It was from the West Virginian, now a successful western manager of a large manufacturing industry in the east. He had steadfastly adhered to the promise he had made to her husband fifteen years ago and in grateful remembrance asked the acceptance of a memento to mark a kindly deed that affected a turning point in his life.

The incident reveals its own moral. It is found not only in the wisdom and firmness of purpose of the young West Virginian that made a man of him, but in the kind and discreet counsel given him by one whose advice was not obtrusive, but was none the less honest, earnest and effective. Too few people realize how great a good may be achieved by a kindly word uttered in the right spirit and at the right time.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

ONE OF HERMANN'S TRICKS.

Magician Puzzled a Select Company of Bohemians.

Not many months before his death the magician was a guest at the famous but now defunct Whitechapel club, the rendezvous of Chicago Bohemians. On the night in question a venerable Japanese priest was present. In the course of a few tricks Hermann picked up a deck of cards and asked some one to select a card. The seven of clubs was the card drawn from the pack and it was shown to the spectators, but not to the magician. The card was replaced in the deck, which was shuffled and then handed to one of the spectators.

"Look through the deck, please," said Hermann.

The holder of the cards did as requested.

"Is the card that was drawn in the pack?" asked the wizard.

"No, sir," answered the spectator.

"What was the card?"

"The seven of clubs."

"Well, gentlemen, if one of you will kindly unlace the prelate's shoe, you will find the card that has vanished from the pack."

After a smiling protest the Japanese priest unlaced his shoe, and there, to the amazement of all, was found the seven spot of clubs.

Where Silence Was Golden.

"Did you know that I passed your door last evening?" said the young man tenderly.

"Of course," replied the beautiful girl, with reproach in her glistening eyes. "Do you think I would not know your step?"

"Certainly," said the happy young man, as he directed the conversation away from the subject and avoided remarking that he passed the door in a cab.

WOMEN SUFFER.

Hard to attend to daily duties with a back that aches like the toothache.

A woman's kidneys give her constant trouble.

Backache is the first warning of sick kidneys, and should never be neglected.

Urinary disorders annoy, embarrass and worry womankind.

Dangerous diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease are sure to follow if the kidneys are neglected.

Read how to cure the kidneys and keep them well.

Mrs. James Beck of 314 West Whitesboro street, Rome, N. Y., says: "I was troubled with my kidneys for eight or nine years; had much pain in my back; as time went on I could hardly endure it; I could not stand except for a few moments at a time; I grew weak and exhausted; I could not even do light housework, let alone washing and ironing; I could not stoop or bend; my head ached severely; I was in pain from my head down to my heels; centering in the kidneys it was a heavy, steady, sickening ache; I could not rest nights, and got up mornings weak and tired. I thought I was about done for, when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for kidney complaints, and got them at Broughton & Graves' drug store. Within a week after commencing their use I began to improve, and from that time on rapidly grew better. I used five boxes in all and was cured. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many others, and my case ought to convince the most skeptical sufferer to give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine, which cured Mrs. James Beck, will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists. Price, 50 cents per box.

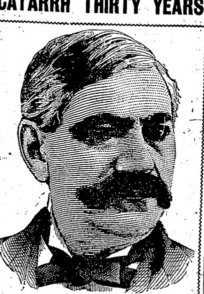
CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.



CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known not only in his own State, but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meckison, Member of Congress.

THE season of catching cold is upon us. The cough and the sneeze and the nasal twang are to be heard on every hand. The origin of chronic catarrh, the most common and dreadful of diseases, is a cold.

This is the way the chronic catarrh generally begins. A person catches cold, which hangs on longer than usual. The cold generally starts in the head and throat. Then follows sensitiveness of the air passages which incline one to catch cold very easily. At last the person has a cold all the while seemingly, more or less discharge from the nose, hawking, spitting, frequent clearing of the throat, nostrils stopped up, full feeling in the head, and sore, inflamed throat.

The best time to treat catarrh is at the very beginning. A bottle of Peruna properly used, never fails to cure a common cold, thus preventing chronic catarrh.

While many people have been cured of chronic catarrh by a single bottle of Peruna, yet, as a rule, when the catarrh becomes thoroughly fixed more than one bottle is necessary to complete a cure. Peruna has cured cases innumerable of catarrh of twenty years' standing. It is the best, if not the only internal remedy for chronic catarrh in existence.

But prevention is far better than cure. Every person subject to catching cold should take Peruna at once at the slightest symptom of cold or sore throat at this season of the year and thus prevent what is almost certain to end in chronic catarrh.

Send for free book on catarrh, entitled "Winter Catarrh," by Dr. Hartman. "Health and Beauty" sent free to women only.

ONE OF THE GALLEONS OF SPAIN.

Mystery in Dismantled Hulk Which Has Evidently Lain for Generations in the Pacific Ocean.

Under the waters of San Diego bay, over by Point Loma, Cal., in the vicinity of the quarantine station, lies the dismantled hulk of some ancient galleon, which has probably lain there for generations. As to how it got there and as to whether it belonged to Cabrillo or the fleet of some other explorer can be merely a matter of surmise, but its construction indicates that it is of very ancient date. It is said that the Portuguese fishermen have known of its whereabouts for a long time past, as they sail over the water all about that section.

It remained, however, for two young men, John Skowes and a companion, one day recently to bring in the first tangible proof of its existence. In some manner they learned of the whereabouts of the old vessel, and there being an exceptionally low tide they started out to investigate it. After some little difficulty they located a part of the bow of what seemed to have once been a large vessel of very ancient construction.

As far as they could get out in the water they found some ten feet of the bow, and the rest probably lies beyond that in deep water. To a considerable extent the heavy planking has been torn off by the tides which have swept over the old hulk for many years, leaving bare huge ribs over a foot in diameter, showing the vessel to have been a large one. Upon investigation of the planking which remained they found that in the whole construction not a single piece of iron or nails in any form had been used by the builders. Most of the planks had been attached by means of wooden pins, and what was still more remarkable they found in several spikes of copper.

With considerable difficulty they removed one or two of the spikes and brought them back to the city. The spikes are about six inches long and plainly forged out by hand.

The wreck is a matter of much speculation among those who have known of its existence and there might be an interesting tale in connection with it. The probabilities are that it is one of the deserted galleons of some old Spanish adventurer of ancient days, which was sunk in the sands and had been gradually worn away by the action of a century's tides.—San Francisco Call.

CAUSE OF COW'S STRANGE BEHAVIOR.

Amateur Farmers Much Alarmed Over Antics of Animal Who Only Wanted to Be Milked.

The playwright, Glen MacDonough, tells a good story on himself, apropos of his first attempt to try to lead a rural life. He and two other friends hired, some years ago, an old farmhouse in New Jersey. They would go out every night one summer, doing all their own work about the house and living on viands which they had brought out from their clubs. After they had been in the country about three weeks it occurred to them that there was one thing necessary to complete the rural landscape. They had no cow. So they went to the nearest town and purchased an animal that was warranted pure Jersey. The cow was installed on the front lawn and became so tame that she slept on the piazza and wandered about everywhere like a good club fellow. One morning in coming out of the house to catch the early train the three men were much alarmed at the odd conduct of their new purchase. She was in a fierce mood, bellowing and lashing her tail. As McDonough went toward the gate she made one wild rush at him and he was forced to seek refuge in a tree. She held the rest of the party prisoners for some time. It was in July, and a fearfully hot day. There was no doubt about it. The cow was mad. The managing editor of a newspaper, who was one of the party, made his escape by a window and the back way, and hastened to town to consult a veterinary surgeon. This gentleman consented to go down to the farm for $10 down, and his railroad fare. He arrived, and the beleaguered man watched the proceedings with interest. The cow had settled down, but still looked wild. The vet approached. He looked at the cow a few minutes and then went into the house. Then he sized up the three men for one moment and made the laconic remark, "Milk her." It had never occurred to the city men that cows had to be milked, and the animal had been with them three weeks without having been relieved, and was consequently in an unhappy state. And this famous first can of milk cost the trio $12.

LIKE THE OLD HOME IN ERIN.

Wealthy Pittsburg Man Has a Fine Reproduction in His Yard of the Ancient Family House in Ireland.

The finest replication of an Irish house in America, says the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph, stands in the yard of James R. Mellon, corner of North Negley and Rippey streets, East End. It has been erected regardless of cost, and is an exact duplicate of the ancestral home in Ireland, where Judge Thomas Mellon, now in his 90th year, was born in 1813.

It is built of stone, has small light windows, is thatched, the annex covered with Antwerp tile, the house is covered with vining roses and the building is a veritable thing of beauty. The home in Ireland stood near the banks of Lough Foyle, at Camp Hill Cottage, Lower Castleton, Parish of Cuppaugh, County Tyrone. It was built by Judge Mellon's grandfather, and occupied by the judge's father, Andrew Mellon, who came to America in 1818, landing at Baltimore with his large family. It required three weeks to cross the mountains in a Conestoga wagon to Greensburg.

Squire Robert M. Graham, of Ligonier, says that he can remember when his relatives, the Mellons, came down the slopes of the Laurel hill into the beautiful Ligonier valley. The family came near settling at Elderaridge, where the father had been negotiating for a farm, but had decided to buy near Turtle creek.

When James R. Mellon visited the old home in Ireland a couple of years ago he brought home with him the cornerstone of the old house, with the letters "A. M." and "1790" carved upon it, and this stone now has a place in the house he has built, just over the old fashioned open fireplace. The andirons and some other relics are also from the old house in Ireland.

It is a quaint sight and it touches sentimental chords to enter the East End house through the ancient style door, the upper half opening separately, to tread the stone floor, see the spinning wheel in the corner of the room, the old time cupboard, chair and tables and crane in the wide open fireplace.

THE SENSE OF HUMOR.

Proof That It Is Not Confined to Sex, Age or Condition.

The crude humor that makes the small boy want to throw a stone at a silk hat on a man bristling with dignity is not to be disposed of as a mere ill-conceived prank of youth. There is deep in most people a spring of unsubduable humor that leaps gleefully when conscious dignity gets a fair tumble. That is why, for all the solemnity of the place, the soberest charity and the best bred propriety in the world could not prevent a titter at a little farce that happened in a church in Brooklyn.

A gentleman and his wife, who were offended at something the preacher said, gravely rose and stalked toward the door, with their heads held high in assertive disdain. The wife followed the husband.

Unfortunately, when they were halfway down the aisle, the husband dropped his glove and stooped to pick it up. Fate, the humorist, determined that the wife should keep her head so high that she did not see her husband stoop. She went sailing on and doubled over him in riotous confusion.

The congregation held its breath and kept its composure. The two recovered themselves and went on. Hoping to escape quickly, they turned to what looked like a side door. The husband pulled it open with an impressive swing. Before he could close it out tumbled the window pole and a long duster and a step ladder. The congregation could hold its mirth no longer, and man and wife fled to the real exit in undignified haste, amid a general and persuasive snicker.

THE ONLY COMPLAINT LEFT.

Ingenious Excuse That the Boy Offered for Smoking.

In an Irish town the lads of a school acquired the habit of smoking, and resorted to the most ingenious methods to conceal it from the master. In this they were successful until one evening, when the master caught them puffing most vigorously.

"How now?" shouted he to one of the culprits. "How dare you to be smoking?"

"Sir," said the boy, "I am subject to headaches, and a pipe takes off the pain."

"And you? and you? and you?" inquired the pedagogue, questioning every boy in his turn.

One had a "raging tooth"; another, "colic"; the third a "cough"; in short, they all had something for which the weed was an unfailing remedy.

"Now, sir!" bellowed the master to the last boy, "pray, what disorder do you smoke for?"

Alas! all excuses were exhausted, but the interrogated urchin, putting down his pipe and looking up in his master's face, said, in a whining, hypocritical tone:

"I smoke for corns, sir!"

Her Philosophy.

Miss Pretty Teacher (soon to be married)—Of course we're tired to death of teaching. I'm going to stop soon. Why don't you?

Miss Prim (who is always talking marriage but has no offers)—I'd like to.

Miss Pretty Teacher—Why don't you, then? You're not consistent. Something's the matter with your philosophy. What is it, anyway?

Miss Prim—Kant, principally.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone.

Help and happiness surely awaits you if you accept Mrs. Pinkham's advice. Disease makes women nervous, irritable, and easily annoyed by children and household duties; such women need the counsel and help of a woman who understands the peculiar troubles of her sex; that woman is Mrs. Pinkham, who with her famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have restored more sick and discouraged women to health and happiness than any other one person. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. Write today, do not wait.

Will not the volumes of letters from women who have been made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince others of the virtues of this great medicine?

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me?"

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. If you have some derangement of the feminine organism try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will surely help you.

Mrs. Emilie Seering, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—If women who are always blue and depressed and nervous would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would find it the medicine they need to bring them to a more cheerful frame of mind. I was terribly worried and downcast, and was thin and bloodless. My back ached all the time, no matter how hard I tried to forget it or change my position to ease it, and the pain at the base of my brain was so bad that I sometimes thought that I would grow crazy; I had the blues so much and was always so depressed I could not seem to shake them off; half of the time I did not seem to have the courage to do my work; everything seemed to go wrong with me, and I was always worrying and fearing the worst. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first few doses a load seemed lifted from my shoulders, I felt better in every way. The blues left me and my head stopped aching; before long my back was better too, and I looked younger and stronger. I took six bottles in all, and it is with thankfulness that I acknowledge that my present good health is due to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letter and signature of above testimonial, which will prove its absolute genuineness.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

From present indications the next Republican state convention will be one of the most interesting ever held in the state, as already numerous factions are laying wire for control.

The Crookston Journal gives the people of this city some very good advice. It advises harmony, and that is the only thing that is needed here. If we have harmony we will have the best city in Northern Minnesota in a few years.

Gov. Van Sant says that Senator Nelson is easily the foremost man in the state, and one of the ablest senators in congress, and predicts that he will be nominated by acclamation and overwhelmingly elected. And most every person in Northern Minnesota is of the same opinion as Gov. Van Sant.

Senator Stephens, of Polk county, says there is good prospects of securing an appropriation of $150,000 from this legislature to be used for drainage purposes. If the state appropriates this sum, the Great Northern railroad will give $25,000, and thus make a total sum of $175,000 to be spent for drainage during the next two years.

ELECT OFFICERS

Annual Meeting of Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Red Lake County Agricultural society was held Tuesday evening in S. F. Staples office. The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and the following officers were elected for the next year:

President—K. J. Weeks.
1st Vice Pres.—John Morgan.
2nd Vice Pres.—C. C. Jackson.
Secretary—James McIntyre.
Treasurer—F. J. Stebbins.
Directors— R. B. Vining, H. Fant, S. F. Staples and J. D. Ward.

The association will probably give a dance in the near future, and steps will also probably be taken to join the Red River Valley Racing Association.

Year for Northern Lights.

This is the year for the displays of the aurora borealis, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press:- Just as meteors are more plentiful some years than others, so certain years seem to be more favored in the way of displays of the aurora borealis or "northern lights." There is no accurate method of computing the year when the auroras appear, and they are liable to appear at any time, but it has been observed that they appear most frequently in periods of eleven years. It is remembered that they were frequent during 1892. The phenomenon exhibits a double annual period, being more common in March and October and less common in January and June.

Scientists have not supplied a satisfactory theory for the displays of the northern lights, although it has been observed that in years of numerous sun spots there are numerous auroras, and they correspond closely to strong distrubances of the magnetic needle. It is believed, therefore, that they are produced by electrical processes. They are more commonly associated with clear skies. Between now and spring, if the theory holds, there should be plenty of opportunity to study and admire what is regarded as one of the most beautiful sights in the natural world.

RED LAKE BILL.

Mayor Kratka Tells Us Where We Are At.

A letter from Mayor Kratka, now in Washington, regarding the Red Lake bill, is in part as follows:

"The Senate Committee on Indian affairs has recommended the bill and it has been reported back to the Senate for passage. The Committee has assured Senator Clapp that when the Indian appropriation bill which of course originates in the House reaches the Senate, they will put this bill on as an amendment of the appropriation bill.

As the former bill passed the Senate without any opposition, it does not seem now as though there would be any opposition in the Senate to the present bill. If it goes back to the House, as I am told, as a part of the appropriation bill, it removes all questions of order, and can only be beaten by a direct vote, and from what I can learn, Mr. Cannon will, instead of objecting to the bill, further its passage. So it would seem now as though unless something extraordinary and most unlooked for occurred, the bill will become a law before the end of this session. There are some minor details over which the Interior Department and Senator Clapp have differed. The Department was very strenuous at first in requiring the entire purchase price of the land to be paid down at the time of the purchase, but they have yielded now to a point where they are willing it should be put one-third cash and the balance in three annual payments while the Senator's bill provides for one-fifth down and the balance in five annual payments. We may be obliged yet to yield somewhat on these and some minor points, but will use our best efforts to get the bill passed, recognizing the importance of opening the reservation, as well as the rights of the Indians and settlers."

Hearts Bought and Sold.

A heart social will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mussey by the Presbyterian Ladies, Friday night, February 13th. All come and bring your hearts with you. If you have none, come anyway and get one. Refreshments will be served, and a jolly good time guaranteed. Children under sixteen years of age are requested not to attend.

Horses Wanted.

Current City Comment.

The Argyle Banner is of the opinion that Thief River Falls is receiving more than $7,000 worth of free advertising a year on account of the reservation opening.

ooo

D. H. Bakke—I believe that the city council should pass a resolution requiring all residents of the city to work a poll tax. It would mean about 500 days labor upon the streets of this city each year, and that is considerable.

ooo

The statement has been circulated about town that no tax had been levied against property in front of which sidewalks had been constructed during the past year. City Clerk Backe made a trip to Red Lake Falls last Friday, and he says everything is all right and that the tax has been levied.

ooo

The rate of taxation in the city of Thief River Falls is 10 mills less this year than it was last year. This is not so bad when it is considered that so many claims are made of the extravagance of this city council. The total tax for all purposes in the city this year is 56 mills, while last year it was 66 mills.

ooo

The members of the Thief River Falls Public Library association will present a petition to the city council this evening asking that the city accept the library and building and assume control of it in the future. The ladies of the association have done considerable hard work in building up the library here and are entitled to a great deal of credit.

ooo

A letter from Mayor Kratka in Washington says that while the bill for building the bridge across the Thief River has been introduced by Senator Clapp, but owing to the early adjournment of congress it is doubtful if it passes. As this is not a navigable stream the mayor is of the opinion that no serious trouble would result if we went on and built the bridge.

ooo

There is a great scarcity of houses for rent in the city and many people who desire to come here to live are unable to secure accommodations. Rents are quite high and anyone desiring to secure a good rate of interest could find no better investment than to build houses for rent. Thief River Falls population is increasing as fast as the most sanguine boomer could wish for. And it will continue to do so for many years.

ooo

Thief River Falls has a better telephone system and receives better service than most small cities in the state. When H. Fant established the system here about two years ago, many "wise ones" thought that he would not make a success of it, yet he has proven the direct opposite. There are now over 150 subscribers in the city and new names are being added daily. Mr. Fant continues to improve the service, and will probably extend it north into Roseau county next year.

ooo

People who were residents of this city in the early days and took part in the Jones-Meehan fight have had enough of factional fighting and do not care for any more. Mr. Jones is now lieutenant governor and the Meehans are engaged in lumbering in the south, as it is almost impossible to get these parties back here and give the more recent arrivals an exhibition of what the old timers here used to "enjoy." The only thing that kept the grass from growing on the streets was the annual village election.

ooo

Judging from its constitution and by-laws the Municipal League recently formed here should be a very popular organization, and one which every tax-payer should join and assist. There is, however, a conviction among some of our best business men that the organization of the league will only tend to stir up factional differences in the city and that it is in reality only a political organization which is more concerned in gaining control of the city affairs next fall, than in seeing that the city's affairs are conducted in business like and legal manner. The league has an opportunity to accomplish good and gain the confidence of the citizens generally, and we hope this will be the result, for surely stirring up factional fights in the city at this time will only do the city harm.

ooo

Supt. Leonard Peterson makes the following statement of the total earnings and total expenditures of the electric light plant for the month of December and it shows that the city has a little gold mine:

RECEIPTS.

Flat rate lights	$362.00
Meter lights	63.46
Street and city hall lights	100.00
Total		$535.46

EXPENDITURES.

L. Peterson, salary	$ 75.00
G. Adolphs, salary	50.00
Rent for power	60.00
Interest on bonds, $7,500 at 4½ per cent	28.12
Insurance	6.00
Wood, oil, etc	7.00
Total		$226.12
Profit to city for one month		$330.34

Taking the month of December as an average, the city will make a profit of $3,964.08 a year from the electric light plant, and consumers are given better service and pay less for it than in any other town in this section of the state. Of course the amount received from meter lights in December is considerable higher than it will be in the summer time, yet the plant is enjoying an increasing patronage, and it will undoubtedly net the city over $4,000 for the year 1903.

Mr. H. Johnson, of Crookston, who wanted to send a remonstrance to Washington against the Clapp bill, has received the following letter from Senator Nelson which explains itself:

Dear Sir.—Your favor of the 29th, relative to the bill introduced by Senator Clapp to open to settlement the eleven townships east of Thief River Falls, is at hand. I enclose you herewith a copy for your information. In this connection I beg leave to say that the measure does not represent the wishes of the Minnesota delegation in the matter of the mode of disposing of the lands. Not at all. We wanted them opened under the regular homestead law, as lands have heretofore been opened, but the secretary of the interior insisted upon the plan set forth in Senator Clapp's bill, and the latter, realizing that if any action was to be secured at all, we must accept the plan of the secretary introduced the bill. It is utterly impossible to secure any legislation upon public lands unless it meets with the approval of the interior department. You will notice that there is a provision in the bill which stipulates a title cannot be secured to land unless the purchaser resides upon and cultivates same for a period of five years. I think this will prevent speculators from buying much of the land. I wish you would explain to your friends and those interested in the matter, how we are situated down here, and how utterly helpless we are in getting these townships opened to settlement in any other way than as the interior department desires. Yours truly,

Knute Nelson.
